This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. CUSTOMS DUTIES AND INTERNAL TAXES REFUNDED.

LETTER

FROM

IN ANSWER TO

A resolution of the House of January 8, 1874, transmitting a statement of he amount of money refunded from March 4, 1873, to the date of said resolution, &c., on account of customs duties and internal taxes.

APRIL 14, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., April 8, 1874.

SIR: In compliance with the direction contained in the resolution of the House of Representatives adopted on the 8th of January last, I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a statement of the amount of money refunded from the 4th of March, 1873 to the date of said resolution, on account of customs duties and internal taxes previously paid into the Treasury, the names of the persons to whom paid, and the amount to each respectively, and upon what articles the said refunds were made, together with a recital of the reasons for said payments, and the laws under which the same were made.

The total sum thus refunded on account of customs duties is $4,461,720.39, payments of which were made as follows:

Refunded directly from the Department on certified statements, for principal, interest, and costs		$1,822,740 75
From the port of New York on account of excess of deposits and under the decisions of the Department		1,871,785 72
Of which amount there was refunded pursuant to the decisions of the Department	$968,019 05
And on account of excess of deposits for unascertained duties	903,769 67
From the port of Boston		187,873 38

In the statement from Boston it will be observed that no reasons are given for the refunds; but I understand that almost the entire amount thus refunded was excess of deposits found due on liquidation of entries.

From the port of Chicago	$114,463 10
From the port of New Orleans	64,553 04
From the port of Portland, Me	2,582 28
From the port of Baltimore	42.777 53
From the port of Philadelphia	190,120 59
From the port of San Francisco	150,828 10

The Department has not yet received a detailed statement from the port of San Francisco, but does not deem it proper to further delay a compliance with said resolution in order to await its receipt. It will be duly forwarded as soon as received.

From the other ports, the details of which are presented in the accompanying statement $13,995 90

It will be observed that the return from the port of Cincinnati fails to show the articles upon which refund was made.

In addition to these payments on account of customs duties, there was refunded on account of internal taxes during said time..... $282,271 62

The amount refunded during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1873, was $3,120,192.90, which covers a portion of the time embraced by this resolution. As the amount refunded since the 4th of March, 1873, is largely in excess of that refunded for the corresponding period of the preceding year, I deem it proper to say, that during the period covered by this resolution large refunds have been made in consequence of the decisions of the courts made before and since said 4th of March upon cases which arose long prior to my advent into office, some of the suits dating back twenty years.

As a general rule the cases in which customs duties were refunded to this Department pursuant to the decisions referred to were covered by protests, appeals, and suits in the manner required by the fourteenth section of the act of Congress approved June 30, 1864; the sixteenth section of which act provides that "whenever it shall be shown, to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury, that in any case of unascertained duties, or duties or other moneys paid under protest and appeal, as hereinbefore provided, more money has been paid to the collector, or person acting as such, than the law requires should have been paid, it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to draw his warrant upon the Treasurer in favor of the person or persons entitled to the overpayment, directing the said Treasurer to refund the same out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The reasons for the repayments will be found set forth at length in the several exhibits accompanying these documents, together with copies of the correspondence relative thereto, and the opinions of the law-officers of the Government upon the question involved, where such opinions were given.

I am, very respectfully,

WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JAMES G. BLAINE,
Speaker House of Representatives.

Mar. 10	George H. Stuart	Commissions and charges.	3,134 87	3,118 24	6,253 11	The refunds in this class of cases arise out of the assessment of duty by the collector at New York on the expenses of transportation of the merchandise from the place of production to the place where shipment was made to the United States, and also on certain commissions, which the United States circuit court at New York decided were not dutiable under section 1 of the act of March 3, 1851; and the several claims of this character have been referred to the Hon. Edwards Pierrepont, as referee, to ascertain the amount due, and upon his report judgment in each case has been entered up in favo of the parties.

* These argols were, on importation, assessed with a duty of six cents per pound, and when Department's decision was made prescribing that they were only liable to three cents per pound duty, there remained in bonded warehouse, of both importations, 25,856 pounds, on which a refund was made at the rate of three cents per pound.

† The duties refunded in this case were the discriminating duties of 10 per cent. assessed under the President's proclamation of October 30, 1872, the goods being imported in a French vessel from a country other than France. The goods were on shipboard on or before the 5th of November, 1872, and the refund was made under the act of February 14, 1873.

* The twenty-second section of the tariff act of March 2, 1861, imposed a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem on "soap—castile, perfumed, windsor, and all other kinds." The seventh section of the act of July 14, 1862, imposed a duty, in addition to the duties imposed by the act of March 2, 1861, on "fancy, scented, honey, cream, transparent, and all descriptions of toilet and shaving soap," of 2 cents per pound; and "on all oth r soap" of 5 per cent. ad valorem. The thirteenth section of the act of June 30, 1864, imposed duties on soap in lieu of those theretofore imposed by law as follows: "On fancy, perfumed, honey, transparent, and all descriptions of toilet and shaving soap, 10 cents per pound, and in addition thereto 25 per cent. ad valorem. On all soap not otherwise provided for, 1 cent per pound, and in addition thereto 30 per cent. ad valorem."

In the latter part of the year 1872, the question was raised by importers of New York as to the duties under these respective provisions of law, on castile soap, which had been assessed by the collectors since the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, at 1 cent per pound and 30 per cent. ad valorem as soap not otherwise provided for, and under date of February 11, 1873, the then Secretary of the Treasury made a decision that the ruling of the collector was erroneous, as castile soap was otherwise provided for in the act of March 2, 1861, at 30 per cent. ad valorem, with an addition of 5 per cent. under the act of July 14, 1862, for "all other soap;" that it was not embraced in the provision in the act of June 30, 1864, for "fancy perfumed, honey, transparent, and all descriptions of toilet and shaving soap," and that it was therefore dutiable at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem.

These refunds grew out of that decision and were covered by protest and appeal.

* These effects consisted of surveyors' instruments in use by the importer, who was an immigrant, and were, on appeal, decided to be exempt from duty under section 23, act of March 2, 1861.

† The goods were found to be rotten and unmerchantable, and only worth 25 per centum of the invoice price; and, accordingly, the collector was authorized to adjust the entry in pursuance of the return of the appraiser.

‡ In this case duty was assessed on the bottles containing the mineral-water, and the Department, on appeal, decided that they were exempt from duty, as they were the ordinary bottles used in transporting such merchandise.

§ These tanned sheep-skins were erroneously classified at 20 per centum duty, when the proper duty was only 10 per centum, and the Department, on appeal, authorized the correction of the error and the refund of the excessive duties.

* Some of these silks (ribbons) were found to be manufactured of silk and cotton, and were, on appeal, decided to be only liable to 50 per centum duty instead of 60 per centum, as originally assessed.

† This oil, (oil of coal-tar,) which was originally classified as an essential oil, at a duty of 50 per centum, was, on appeal, ascertained to be not an "essential oil," and not otherwise provided for in the tariff, and was consequently decided to be only liable to 20 per centum duty, as an article manufactured in whole or in part under section 24, act of March 2, 1861.

EXHIBIT No. 1.—SILK AND COTTON RIBBONS.

SILK AND COTTON-VELVET RIBBONS AND SILK AND COTTON CORD-EDGE RIBBONS.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

In March, 1867, Messrs Passavant & Co., and Messrs. Kutter, Luckemeyer & Co., respectively, appealed from the decision of the collector of customs at New York, exacting sixty per cent. ad-valorem duty on two invoices of merchandise—one embracing silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, and the other embracing silk and cotton cord-edge ribbons. The decision of the collector was affirmed by this Department in each case, as per copy letters herewith, dated April 2 and April 22, 1867, marked A and B. A large number of similar appeals followed these rulings, upon which similar decisions were made.

At a term of the circuit court of the United States, for the district of Massachusetts, held at Boston in May, 1870, the case of Lane vs. Russell, involving the duty on silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, was brought to trial before Messrs. Clifford and Lowell, justices. In that case the court ordered judgment to be entered in favor of the collector, upon the ground that the statute of 1864, which imposed sixty per cent. duty on ribbons, comprised all ribbons, irrespective of the materials of which composed. A copy of the opinion of the court in that case, delivered by Mr. Justice Clifford, is herewith attached, marked C.

This decision was followed by a decision from this Department, dated December 19, 1870, instructing customs-officers that all ribbons composed of silk and cotton, were to be charged with duty at 60 per cent. ad-valorem. Copy of decision, marked D.

In March, 1872, Messrs. Webster and Craig, attorneys for the importers, submitted to the Department a brief, requesting, notwithstanding the decision in Lane vs. Russell, a reconsideration of the Department's decision of December 19, 1870, with a view of changing the practice of assessing duty on ribbons other than silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, to that which obtained prior to said date. Copy of brief, marked E. This document was referred to the Solicitor to the Treasury for his opinion, and a copy (marked F) of the reply of the Solicitor, dated September 27, 1872, is attached. In this opinion the Solicitor favored granting the prayer of the petitioners.

The papers submitted by the parties, with the opinion of the Solicitor, were thereupon referred to the Attorney-General, and a copy of the Attorney-General's opinion, dated November 1, 1872, is attached, marked G.

The Attorney-General having confirmed the opinion of the Solicitor, the Department, on the 2d of November, 1872, addressed a letter to the collector at New York, in which he was informed that silk and cotton ribbons other than silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, should thereafter be subject to 50 per cent. duty. Copy annexed, marked H.

On December 7, 1872, however, telegraphic instructions were given to the collectors at Boston, New York, and other principal ports, to suspend the liquidation of entries of cotton cord-edge ribbons until further advised. Copy of telegram, marked I.

Further argument upon the question on the part of the importers having been had before the Department, a letter was addressed to the collector at New York on the 18th of December, 1872, (copy marked J,) wherein the rule was laid down that all ribbons which at the time of the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, or at the time of importation, were known as silk ribbons, and bought and sold as such in the trade, were to be classified as silk ribbons, and subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, and on the 24th of December the instructions contained in telegram of December 7, 1872, suspending liquidation of entries of cotton cord-edge ribbons, was revoked. Copy annexed, marked J[2].

The appraiser at New York still continuing to classify invoices of these cord-edge or boyau ribbons as silk ribbons, upon the ground that they were so known in the trade, the importers' counsel procured the testimony of those in the trade as to the commercial designation of such goods, and finally a hearing was had at the Department on the 4th day of April, 1873, when a large supply of samples of the goods under discussion were produced, with the certificates of a large number of importers and jobbers as to the commercial designation of the goods and the name under which they were bought and sold. Copies of the evidence thus presented as to commercial designation are appended, marked J[3].

After a careful examination of the evidence submitted, I became satisfied that the claim of the importers was a legal and valid one, under the law as interpreted by my predecessor, the Solicitor of the Treasury, and the Attorney-General, and on the 5th of April, 1873, a decision was given in their favor. Copy annexed, marked K.

In consequence of the decision of the court in Lane vs. Russell, the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem was still exacted on silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, and in April, 1872, the case of Chapon vs. Smythe, which was a suit brought to recover 10 per cent. duty on this class of ribbons, was tried in the United States circuit court at New York, before Judge Smalley, which resulted in a verdict against the Government, under the ruling of the court that it was the intention of Congress that only silk ribbons should pay 60 per cent. duty, and that silk and cotton ribbons with silk of chief value should only pay a duty of 50 per cent., and that cotton ribbons should pay a duty of 35 per cent. Copy of statement of case and charge to the jury annexed, marked L.

The ruling of the court in this case being opposed to that in Lane vs. Russell, application was made to the Department by the importers' counsel for an acquiescence therein, and for a change of practice to conform thereto. The application was submitted, first to the Solicitor of the Treasury and then to the Attorney-General, and copies of their replies are annexed, marked M and N.

As these officers were decidedly in favor of acquiescing in the verdict in Chapon vs. Smythe, and as the rule of law therein laid down seemed to me the proper one, I decided to concur in the same, and accordingly, on the 16th June, 1873, issued instructions to the collector at New York to cause his practice to conform thereto, and to take the necessary steps for a refund of the duties paid in excess. Copy annexed, marked O.

Since the issuance of said instructions a considerable number of appeals have been received from the assessment of 60 per cent. duty by the collector at New York upon ribbons composed in part of cotton which the customs officers classified as silk ribbons, upon the ground that they were so known commercially, which claim the importers denied, some of which have not yet been decided by this Department.

The statement of the amount refunded on ribbons includes silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, and silk and cotton cord-edge ribbons, and no separate statement is made of the amount refunded on each class of goods, as from the nature of the records such a division was found impracticable.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 2, 1867.

SIR: Respectfully referring to your letter of the 13th ultimo, reporting upon the appeal (No. 3637) of Messrs Passavant & Co., from your assessment of duty at the rate of 60 per centum ad valorem on certain silk and silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, imported by them, you are hereby informed that the Department has this day decided said appeal by affirming your action thereon, as it entertains the opinion that the clause in the eighth section of the act of June 30, 1864, which provides duty at the rate of 60 per centum ad valorem, for "ribbons, silk velvets, and velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value," applies to the merchandise in question.

I am, very respectfully,

J. F. HARTLEY,
Assistant Secretary.

H. A. SMYTHE, Esq.,
Collector, New York.

B.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 22, 1867.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 6th instant is received, appealing (No. 4162) from the decision of the collector at New York, assessing duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem on certain "corded cotton-edge ribbons," imported by you from Liverpool per various vessels, and from Havre, per the Pereire.

The requirements of the 14th and 15th sections of the act approved June 30, 1864, not having been complied with on your entry per the Pereire, the appeal, so far as it relates to said entry, cannot be entertained by this Department.

In regard to the remaining entries, it appears that the articles in question were returned by the appraiser as "silk ribbons," and that duty thereon as aforesaid was assessed by the collector in conformity with the Department's decision of the 2d instant, which held that the merchandise in question was liable to the said rate of duty.

The decision of the collector is hereby affirmed.

By order.

I am, very respectfully,

J. F. HARTLEY,
Assistant Secretary.

Messrs. KUTTER, LUCKEMEYER & CO., (per WEBSTER & CRAIG, Attorneys,) New York.

Circuit court of the United States, Massachusetts district, May term, 1870.

(Clifford and Lowell, JJ.)

THOMAS RUSSELL.

Silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value, are ribbons within the meaning of the eighth section of the act of June 30, 1864, which provides that there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, sixty per centum ad valorem.

Clifford, J.—Merchandise was imported by the plaintiffs into the port of Boston, consisting of silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value, and the defendant, as the collector of the port, levied a duty thereon of sixty per centum ad valorem. He claimed the right to levy the duty under the eighth section of the act of the 30th of June, 1864, which provides that there shall be levied, collected, and paid, on all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, sixty per centum ad valorem; but the plaintiffs insist that the merchandise imported was a manufacture of silk and cotton not otherwise provided for, of which silk is the component material of chief value, and that it was subject only to a duty of fifty per centum ad valorem, as provided in the last clause of the same section. They paid the excess under protest, and brought an action of assumpsit to recover back the amount beyond what they admit was legally demandable, amounting to $1,049.20 in gold. Since the suit was commenced the parties have submitted the case to the court upon an agreed statement of facts, which makes part of the record. Some of the fabrics described in the intermediate sentence of the section, such as pongees, shawls, scarfs, mantillas, &c., the parties agree are or may be made only in part of silk; and the plaintiffs concede that the fabrics there enumerated, if silk is the component material of chief value, are legally liable to a duty of sixty per centum ad valorem, as assessed in the case before the court.

Ribbons are sometimes made wholly of silk, and sometimes they are made of silk and cotton, wherein silk is the component material of chief value; and the parties agree that such fabrics are properly called velvet ribbons; and they also agree that the fabrics constituting the importation in this case are ribbons; that they were not manufactured wholly of silk; that they are velvet ribbons, made substantially in the same manner as velvet goods, but differ from piece velvets as manufactured products, in size, shape, selvage, use, commercial designation, and the fact that piece velvets are valued and sold by the square yard; and they finally agree that the complete designation of the imported fabric is "silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk chief value." Imported ribbons are, in express terms, subjected to a duty of sixty per centum ad valorem, and the parties agree that the fabrics imported in this case were ribbons, which closes the argument, unless it can be shown that the ribbons imported were not such ribbons as those described in the provision under which the duties were levied, collected, and paid. Ribbons imported from foreign countries are subject to a duty of sixty per centum ad valorem, because such goods are enumerated and provided for in the eighth section of the act of Congress entitled "An act to increase duties on imports, and for other purposes," which provides that that rate of duty shall be levied, collected, and paid "on the goods, wares, and merchandise enumerated and provided for" in that section, (Frost et al. vs. Barney, 5 Blatch., 196.) "Enumerated and provided for," as ribbons are in that section, it is obvious that the fabrics imported in this case—it being admitted that they were ribbons—must certainly be subject to the rate of duty there provided, unless it can be shown that the word "ribbons" as employed in that section is used in some special and limited sense, so as to exclude the goods imported in this case from the operation of that provision. Difficulties attend even that concession, as ribbons are enumerated and declared to be dutiable in express terms at the rate of sixty per centum ad valorem in the same section. Fifty per centum ad valorem is required to be levied, collected, and paid on manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for; but it is clear that that enactment cannot apply to any of the goods, wares, or merchandise enumerated and provided for in the antecedent part of the section, because the articles there enumerated are, by necessary implication, excluded from the clause imposing duties on articles not so enumerated, and for which no other rate of duty is prescribed. Articles enumerated in the preceding clauses of the section are as effectually excluded from the non-enumerated clause as if the exclusion was enacted in express terms. Velvets are classified in the provision under consideration, as silk-velvets and velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, and it becomes important to inquire why they were so classified, as both classes are subjected to the same rate of duty. Fabrics called velvets are sometimes made entirely of silk, and sometimes they are made partly of silk and partly of cotton, of different and varying proportions, and sometimes they are made entirely of cotton; and as Congress did not intend to include velvets made entirely of cotton, and only a part of those made partly of silk and partly of cotton, it became necessary to make the classification which there appears to show what description of velvets are and what are not intended to be subjected to that rate of duty. Such a classification was necessary to carry into effect the intention of Congress in respect to the article of velvet, but it was not necessary in respect to any one of the other thirty or forty articles enumerated in that section, and it should be observed that all the other articles therein enumerated are subjected to a described ad valorem rate of duty. Dress and piece silks, like bleached linens, may have in the warp or woof, or even in both, a fractional per cent. of cotton, and still retain the commercial designation expressed in the act of Congress, and so may most or all of the other articles enumerated in that section; but it is clear that Congress did not intend to encourage the importation of such manufactures by admitting them to entry at a rate of duty less than that imposed on the unmixed and genuine article, except as otherwise provided. Importers of bleached linen have to pay the duty to which the pure article is subjected, though the fabric, as imported, may contain some cotton, and so do importers of most or all of the articles enumerated in the several clauses of the section under consideration in this case. Some of the articles, it is admitted, may be made in part of cotton and yet be legally liable to a duty of sixty per centum ad valorem; and the court is of the opinion that all the articles in the enumerated list contained in the last two sentences of that part of the section are subject to that rate of duty, even though the article contains some cotton, if silk is the component material of chief value, unless the article is enumerated as an article manufactured of silk and cotton in some other provision of the tariff act, and is there subjected to a different rate of duty. Silk vestings, pongees, shawls, &c., it is conceded by the plaintiffs, sometimes have an admixture of cotton, but they deny that any such admixture is ever found in dress and piece silks as is supposed by the court, and the argument is that the word ribbons must be construed to embrace silk ribbons only, because the word ribbons as employed in the eighth section of the tariff act follows and is associated with dress and piece silks, which, as they insist, never include any other material than silk. Suppose the fact to be as assumed by the plaintiffs, that dress and piece silks are always free from any admixtures of cotton, which is denied, still the court is of the opinion that the word ribbons cannot properly receive the special and limited construction for which the plaintiffs contend. Public policy, national purposes, and the regular operations of Government require that the revenue system should be faithfully observed and strictly executed. (Priestman vs. United States, 4 Dall., 34.) Words and phrases employed in the revenue laws must be understood as having been used in their known commercial signification, unless it satisfactorily appears that they were used in some special and different sense, as collected or inferred from the language of the same provision or some other part of the same act, or from some other act passed in pari materia. Laws imposing duties are passed to raise revenue to provide for the common defense and promote the general welfare, and Congress, in framing such laws, must be understood to employ words and phrases according to the general usage and known denominations of trade. (Certain Chests of Tea, 9 Wheat, 438; Sedgw. on Stat., 388.) Congress has the power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and, excises, and as incident to that power, they may prescribe the manner in which the duties may be levied and the value of the goods ascertained, and the conditions upon which importations shall be permitted. Revenue laws or laws imposing duties on imported goods are intended for practical use and application by men engaged in commerce, and hence it has become a settled rule in the interpretation of such acts of Congress to construe the language employed in such laws, and particularly in the denomination of articles, according to the commercial understanding of the terms used. (Elliot vs. Swartwout, 10 Pet., 151; Certain Casks of Sugar, 8 Pet., 279; Bartow vs. United States, 7 Pet., 404.)

Such was the express ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Curtis vs. Martin et al., (3 How., 109,) in which Chief Justice Taney, in speaking for the whole court, said that Congress, in framing laws imposing duties, must be understood as describing the article upon which the duty is imposed, according to the commercial understanding of the terms used in the law in our own markets. Borrowing the language employed by the Supreme Court in the case of Lawrence vs. Allen et al., (7 How., 791,) "the articles imported in this case manifestly come within the letter of the clause imposing a duty of" 60 per centum ad valorem on ribbons. "They are" ribbons, and being thus provided for as ribbons, the subsequent clause admitting non-enumerated articles to entry at a lesser rate of duty, and not enumerating ribbons among them, "cannot be presumed to embrace or refer to anything already provided for." Whatever weight may be due to these suggestions, still the plaintiffs insist that the word ribbons, as used in the section, means silk ribbons only, because the phrase "dress and piece silks" precedes it, and the word or term "silk velvets" follows it in the sentence where it is employed; but the plaintiffs overlook the fact that the phrase "dress and piece silks" is there used, not in a technical sense as strictly descriptive of the material of which such fabrics are manufactured, but as more particularly expressive of their denomination as commercially known among mercantile men in our markets.

Manufactured goods, made wholly of silk, it is insisted, are associated together in that section, or at least in that sentence of the section; but the fact is not so, even if it be admitted that dress and piece silks never contain any admixture of cotton, as velvets manufactured partly of cotton and partly of silk are associated in the same sentence, and are in terms subjected, if silk is the component material of chief value, to the same rate of duty. Much less can be inferred in support of the plaintiff's views from what follows in the same sentence, as it is quite apparent that the word "silk," as used before the word "velvets," is employed to classify or as a part of the means of classifying the different fabrics of that denomination, so as to show that cotton velvets, and all other fabrics of that name in which silk is not the component material of chief value, are not subjected to the rate of duty therein specified. (13 Stat. at Large, 209.)

Explanations in respect to the articles enumerated in the succeeding sentence of the section, beyond those which have already been given, are unnecessary, as the plaintiffs admit in the agreed statement that those articles, or some of them, may contain an admixture of cotton, and yet be legally liable to a duty of 60 per centum ad valorem, as therein provided. Tested by these considerations, as the case must be if attentively considered, it is clear that the maxim Noscitur a sociis does not control the question of construction, as is supposed by the plaintiffs. Unqualified as the word ribbons is by its association, it must be understood in its usual commercial sense, and when so defined the case is wholly unaffected by the rule adopted in Bend vs. Hoyt, 13 Pet., 271, on which the plaintiffs rely. They also refer to the clause in the prior act imposing duties on ribbons, and contend that their views find support from that provision. But the court is of a different opinion, for several reasons. (12 Stat. at Large, 186 to 293.) Dutiable ribbons, it is true, are described as silk ribbons, but that provision is repealed, and the word silk is dropped in the eighth section of the subsequent act, which affords a strong argument to show that Congress, by using the general word, and without any qualification, intended to include velvet ribbons as well as ribbons manufactured wholly of silk.

Judgment for the defendant, with costs, as agreed by parties.

D.

Washington, D. C., December 19, 1870.

SIR: Your communication of the 17th ultimo is received, transmitting, as requested by Department's letter to you of the 28th of October last, the views of the appraiser on the decision of the United States circuit court for the district of Massachusetts, in the case of Lane, et al. vs. Russell, in reference to the duty on silk and cotton ribbons.

It appears that the appraiser concurs in the principle laid down in such decision that silk and cotton velvet ribbons, and all other ribbons composed of silk and cotton, are liable to duty at the rate of 60 per centum ad valorem, under the special provisions for ribbons in the 8th or silk section of the act of June 30, 1864.

The Department, also coinciding in such decision, its previous instructions of September 27 last, on the appeal (8822) of E. C. Cowdin & Co., are hereby withdrawn, and you are directed to cause the practice at your port, in classifying and assessing duty on ribbons, to conform to the said decision.

In reference to cotton ribbons, which the appraiser reports are manufactured wholly of cotton, I would state that as the court did not take into consideration the question as to their classification and rate of duty, it is not deemed expedient to change the existing practice of classifying the same as manufacture of cotton at 35 per cent. duty, under the concluding paragraph of the 6th or cotton section of the act of June 30 1864.

I am, very respectfully,

GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary.

THOMAS MURPHY, Esq.,
Collector of Customs, New York.

E.

NEW YORK, March 8, 1872.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL, Secretary of the Treasury:

SIR: As the attorneys of record in behalf of a number of importers of silk and cotton ribbons in this city, we desire respectfully to ask the Department to reconsider its decision of December 19, 1870, (which revoked its previous ruling in the same case o September 27, 1870,) assessing 60 per centum ad valorem on "silk and cotton ribbons,' silk chief value.

For more than six years, and up to December 19, 1870, the Department had admitted ribbons of this description to entry at 50 per centum ad valorem, under the third and last clause of the tariff act of June 30, 1864, and we submit, with much deference, that it is the true legal rate, under a proper construction of that act. It was a true interpretation of the statute to hold that the word "ribbons," as enumerated therein, only embraced fabrics made wholly of silk, or fabrics of silk wherein the debasement of cotton is so slight as not to be known to the public, or impair the superior quality of the ribbon, or change its commercial designation from one of pure silk, and where to call it by any other name in the entry would be a fraud on the revenue. (See decision of Department of April 21, 1870, in case of No. 8021, Messrs. Henry Barbey & Co.)

The importers respectfully submit that the eighth section of the act of June 30, 1864, is for its true legal interpretation to be divided into three clauses, as follows:

Products of silk, manufactures wholly of silk, except velvets in piece.

I. "On spun silk for filling in skeins or cops, twenty-five per centum ad valorem. On silk in the gum not more advanced than singles, tram, and thrown or organzine, thirty-five per centum ad valorem. On floss silks, thirty-five per centum ad valorem, On sewing silk, in the gum or purified, forty per centum ad valorem. On all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component of chief value, sixty per centum ad valorem."

Articles commercially known as "silk goods."

II. "On silk vestings, pongees, shawls, scarfs, mantillas, pelerines, handkerchiefs, veils, laces, shirts, drawers, bonnets, hats, caps, turbans, chemisettes, hose, mitts, aprons, stockings, gloves, suspenders, watch-chains, webbing, braids, fringes, galloons, tassels cords, and trimmings, sixty per centum ad valorem."

Manufactures of silk and cotton not otherwise provided for.

III. "On all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for, fifty per centum ad valorem."

The question is, What fabrics did Congress intend to embrace in the word "ribbons," as enumerated in the first clause? Clearly not cotton ribbons, or linen ribbons, or linen or worsted ribbons; all of which several articles are well known in trade and commerce, and are recognized in the various tariff acts. Ever since the act of 1864 has been in operation, the Department has admitted cotton ribbons to entry at 35 per cent. ad valorem under the sixth section thereof. (See Department decision of December 19, 1870, in Cowdin's case, and report of Appraiser Palmer of November 14, 1870, in reply to Department's letter of September 28, 1870.) If all these descriptions of ribbons are excluded, can it be claimed that a fabric commercially known as a silk and ribbon, cotton chief value, is included; and if not one where cotton is chief value, then how or why one where silk is chief value?

The importers feel assured that if the Department will carefully examine the point now submitted, it will, in view of its successive rulings, and the reports of the customs officers at the different ports, come to the conclusion that the word "ribbons," as appears by its association in the eight section, was used by Congress in its relation to the pure silk material of which the fabric referred to is wholly manufactured.

Wherever Congress has, as in different sections of the act of 1864, levied duty according to the component materials of designated fabrics, is it not misleading to ask and decide what in trade or commerce may be included under a certain general term or word, without first inquiring whether such term or word was used by Congress to describe a genus or whole class, or only a particular species of the class or genus?

Such clearly was the view of the Department up to December 19, 1870. For in respect to silk and cotton velvet ribbons, the appraiser in New York, (see his report to Collector Smythe of February 25, 1867,) classified them at 60 per cent. under the first clause of the eighth section, not as "ribbons," but as "velvets."

The importers are aware that the ruling of the Department of December 19, 1870, a revision of which is now asked, is based on a decision of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, in the case of Lane vs. Russell; but they feel sure that upon an examination of the "agreed statement" of facts in that case, submitted herewith and marked A, and the comments thereon by the customs officers for the port of Boston, the Department will conclude that the decision of the court was not intended to cover, and does not cover, an article known as "silk and cotton ribbon."

The only question involved in that case was the rate of duty on silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk chief value. It is difficult to determine from the language of the opinion whether the court based its judgment upon an assumed similarity between velvet ribbons and "velvet" in the piece, (as did Appraiser McElrath, in his report for February 25, 1867, before referred to,) or upon the assumption that the word "ribbons" being unqualified in the section; any adjective, included all ribbons no matter of what materials made, whether cotton or linen, or worsted, or cotton and silk, cotton chief value. If upon the first of these two possible theories, then it is clear that the decision has no application to any other ribbons but "velvets." But if upon the second theory, then the customs officers in Boston themselves admit that the decision did not take into consideration all the sections of the act of 1864.

But however that may be, the construction given to the opinion of the court by the Department is too broad in its proposition of law, and ought not to be made to cover a cotton and silk ribbon, for that question was not before the court. As evidence of the opinions of the customs officers in Boston, the Department's attention is respectfully called to the following reports:

"UNITED STATES APPRAISER'S OFFICE,
"State Street Block, Boston, December 27, 1870.

"SIR: Referring to the Department's letter of December 20, inclosing a copy of the decision of the United States circuit court for this district, in the case of David Lane et al. vs. Thomas Russell, (velvet-ribbon case) also a letter from Appraiser Palmer of New York, asking for instructions, and the Department's letter in answer to the same, and asking for any remarks pertinent thereto, I would say:

"The fact is that, in arranging the 'agreed statement of facts,' in the case referred to, the plaintiffs were outwitted; they did not seem to be aware that there was such a thing as a cotton ribbon, and they conceded much more than it was for their interest to concede.

"Although Judge Chifford's decision would seem to warrant the assessment of 60 per cent. duty upon cotton ribbons, I would not recommend such action on the part of the Government, for the reason that Congress never intended anything of the kind.

Besides, were a case involving that issue to be presented to the courts, a different view might be taken.

"Of the propriety of classifying all ribbons composed in part of silk under the 8th section, subject to a duty of 60 per centum, there can be no doubt.

"Galloons stand differently, that word being qualified by the word 'silk' in the clause referred to. Vestings, laces, fringes, and some other articles enumerated in this clause, frequently contain other materials than silk, yet they are known commercially as silk vestings, laces, &c., and so-called silk hats and bonnets always contain other materials. But there are silk galloons, and silk and cotton galloons, and the latter are not called silk, but are called 'Union' galloons, and therefore should, in my judgment, be classified under the next provision of the 8th section.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"Hon. THOMAS RUSSELL, Collector."

"CUSTOM-HOUSE, BOSTON,
"Collector's Office, December 28, 1870.

"SIR: I am in receipt of Department's letter of the 20th instant, relative to the classification and rate of duty on silk and cotton ribbons, and inclose herewith a communication from Mr. Appraiser Webster in relation thereto.

"The decision of Mr. Justice Clifford in the case of David Lane et al. vs. Thomas Russell is broad and comprehensive, and in terms includes all ribbons irrespective of the materials of which they may be composed.

"In the light of this decision it would seem that ribbons, although manufactured wholly of cotton, would be subject to a duty of sixty per centum ad valorem. I consider it as a question calling for legislation.

"The several inclosures (except the decision of the Department) returned.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"THOMAS RUSSELL, Collector."

It is to be observed in this connection, that the suggestion that the word "ribbons" in the eighth section "is not qualified by the word 'silk' nor by any other word," (and therefore it is of no consequence of what material or materials a ribbon is composed to make it liable to the duty of 60 per cent.) was first put forth by Appraiser Webster in his report to Collector Russell of March 21, 1871, on the appeal of Messrs. Passavant & Co., No 3637. But yet the same officer, in his report of Decemper 27, 1870, just quoted, perceives that his construction would require an assessment of 60 per cent. upon cotton ribbons, and therefore could not have been the meaning of Congress.

The argument of the court on one branch of the opinion in Lane vs. Russell is logically this:

"Ribbons are specially enumerated in the first clause of the eighth section. It is admitted in the 'agreed statement' that the fabrics in controversy are ribbons, although their complete description is 'silk and cotton velvet ribbons,' &c. Words used in tariff laws are to be construed according to their commercial understanding. Therefore silk and cotton velvet ribbons' &c., are liable to the duty of 60 per cent. under the word 'ribbons.'"

It is respectfully submitted that a fatal defect in this reasoning as applied to "silk and cotton ribbons" in the act of 1864, is that it creates a positive repugnancy between the silk section on the one hand, and the cotton as well as the linen sections on the other hand, of the same statute.

This is proved by the admission of the customs officers in Boston, that the word "ribbons" cannot, as used in the law, include a cotton ribbon; and if neither of them, how a silk and cotton ribbon, or linen ribbon? Upon the reasoning just given, 60 per centum must be levied upon each of these last-named fabrics, because importers, if truthful, would be compelled to admit, or could not deny that cotton ribbons are "ribbons," as velvet ribbons are "ribbons." The true explanation is that the court was misled by the "agreed statement" not containing the fact that there were cotton ribbons and linen ribbons imported under the act of 1864, and by the omission of the customs officers in Boston to frankly say to the court in argument what they subsequently stated to the Department, with possibly something of gratification, that "the plaintiffs were outwitted." This case is an illustration of how dangerous it is to resort to the commercial understanding of general or generic denominations as a guide for a true interpretation of a word in a section wherein duty is levied according to the material of manufacture. As an illustration of the violation of the statute and practical injustice which would follow from a literal compliance with the ruling of the court in Lane vs. Russell, we append below a sample of, first, a pure silk ribbon; second, a silk and cotton ribbon, silk chief value; and third, a pure cotton ribbon.

RIBBONS.

It is respectfully submitted that the inquiry as to the true rate of duty, under the act of 1864, on an article commercially known as "silk and cotton ribbons" (and having no relation to "velvets") comes within the exception laid down by the court in Lane vs. Russell, to the general rule that words in tariff-laws are to be interpreted in their general or commercial sense. That exception is, "unless it satisfactorily appears they are used in some special and different sense." An application is made of this exception in the glass case of Roosevelt et al. vs. Maxwell, (3 Blatch. C. C., 391.) And again in the sheepskin case of De Forest et al. vs. Lawrence, (13 Howard, 279.) The language in the latter opinion applies perfectly here, if we substitute ribbons for sheepskins.

"And although it has been invoiced, and is known in trade and commerce by the designation of 'ribbons,' and may, generally speaking, be properly ranged under the denomination of 'ribbons,' as a class, yet, having a known designation in the revenue act of 1864 (as 'silk and cotton ribbons') distinct from the general class to which it might otherwise be assigned, we must regard the article in the light in which it is viewed by this act, rather than in trade and commerce."

An examination of each of the cases referred to by the court in Lane vs. Russell demonstrates that neither of them can govern a fabric known as "silk and cotton ribbons" under the law of 1864.

The first, in order of date, is Bartow vs. United States, (7 Peters, 406.) The question there was whether the article described in the entry as "refined sugar" was falsely described. They were, in fact, "bastard sugars," and the court said it was proper to inquire of buyers and sellers to ascertain and submit to the jury if "bastard" were the same as "refined" sugars, because Congress, when it said "refined," must be presumed to mean the same as dealers meant by the word. But if "refined" sugars were admittedly covered by one section of the law, (as are cotton ribbons in act of 1864,) the court would hardly have submitted to the jury whether the generic word "sugars" in another section, included "refined" sugars, for that would have been a question of statute construction, not for the jury, but the court.

The next case of United States vs. 112 Casks of Sugars, (8 Peters, 277,) was whether an article was falsely entered as sirup. It was a pure question of fact, the court say, and therefore for the jury to decide, whether the article in a mercantile sense was sirup or sugar. The question now submitted to the Department is not of fact, for the commercial designation is admitted to be silk and cotton ribbon, but is one of law, to wit, did Congress intend by ribbons to include the before-named article?

The turning point in Elliott vs. Swartwout, (10 Peters, 150,) was whether the fabric was made of wool or worsted, and that the jury must decide whether the component material was, on the evidence, what in trade is known as one or the other, and which.

In Curtis vs. Martin, (3 Howard, 108,) the inquiry was whether the article was cotton bagging, or gunny-cloth, as known in commerce.

In Lawrence vs. Allen, (7 Howard, 790,) the question was whether the import was an India rubber shoe, or a manufacture of India rubber. The court below held the India-rubber shoe of the statute was one made in a finished state from solid and not liquid India rubber, and took the case from the jury. The Supreme Court said this was error, because it should have been left to the jury to say whether the article had been made to be worn as a shoe, and was an India-rubber shoe of commerce, (no matter of what, or how made,) and therefore an India-rubber shoe of the section. This was correct, but there was no pretense that some other section of the statute in controversy included certain other kinds of India-rubber shoes, thereby necessarily giving to the shoe of the section under consideration a limited and technical meaning.

Assume for a moment that the point now in controversy before the Department, is to be tried before a judge and jury. Evidence is offered, and admitted, of the several kinds of ribbons known to commerce or trade. There is undisputed evidence that there are cotton ribbons, and linen ribbons, cotton and silk ribbons, cotton chief value, and silk and cotton ribbons, silk chief value, and that cotton ribbons and linen ribbons are dutiable under other sections of the act of 1864 than the eighth. Must not the court tell the jury that the word ribbons in the eighth section cannot embrace all kinds of ribbons known to commerce. And must it not then define what descriptions it does include, and in doing so can evidence as to what merchants think the general word ribbons covers be of any assistance? Must not the material of manufacture be the test? Such was evidently the view of the Department in Barbey's case, No. 8021, dated April 21, 1870, where the only inquiry was whether the ribbons were bought and sold as a pure silk article of a superior quality. So it was in the classification of the appraiser at New York, in No. 8171, dated May 23, 1870, of Stewart's A ribbon. So in the Department's decision, November 17, 1871, respecting Japanese silks of Stuart & Bro.; and in the galloons, No. 1933*a*, of Silliman, of September 22, 1871. There the Department said that a silk and cotton galloon, silk chief value, only paid 50 per centum.

Turning the inqury in another form, and suppose a cotton ribbon on trial. If the decision in Lane vs. Russell applies to cotton and silk, silk chief value, must it not embrace a cotton ribbon, and put the latter up to 60 per centum duty?

The importers do not doubt that if the defendant will observe the rates of duty which are now levied on different ribbons at the port of New York, it will perceive the propriety and justice of revoking its decision of December 19, 1870, in the case of Cowden & Company, and returning to its early construction of the eighth section of of the tariff act of June 30, 1864.

These reasons which occur to us are these:

First. This article of silk and cotton ribbons now referred to is far inferior to that composed wholly of silk, in appearance, quality, usefulness and value, and even the silk entering into its fabrication is of a poorer quality. It is to a great extent, put to entirely different uses; and, so far as required for similar purposes, it is by a class of our people which can ill afford to pay the excessive duty now levied.

Second. The interpretation at present given to the law invidiously discriminates against certain articles commercially designated as "ribbons," charging on their importation a higher rate of duty than is levied on articles of the same component materials, of similar appearance, fabrication, and in the uses to which they are applied, and differing only in the names technically given to them, as "galloons," "trimmings," "bindings," "hat-bands," &c.

Third. Because the larger portion of imported "silk and cotton ribbons" is used in the manufacture of low-priced hats, and it is necessary that our manufacturers should obtain them as cheaply as possible in order to compete with similar imported hats.

Fourth. There is no conceivable reason why an article of silk and cotton "in the width of a ribbon" should pay sixty per centum duty, and precisely the same fabrication, with the exception of the width, only fifty per centum, nor for the present discrimination of ten per centum between an article called "hat-bands" having every requisite quality of a ribbon, and another article called "ribbon," of the same component materials and mode of fabrication used exclusively for hat-bands.

Fifth. Because the difficulty in drawing the line between "galloons," "trimmings," "hat-bands," and "ribbons," since the duties differ, must inevitably lead to disputes, litigations, evasions, and to a want of uniformity at the different ports, the distinctions being often arbitrary, and sometimes fanciful, all of which may be avoided by designating these articles by their component materials, rather than their technical names in the trade, which are uncertain and subject to change.

Sixth. The manufacture of ribbons in this country is confined exclusively to the best qualities of "all silk," and therefore a high duty is not for its protection, as the imported "silk and cotton ribbons" do not come into competition with the American fabrics.

Seventh. The opinion of the court in Lane vs. Russell does not warrant the construction put upon it by the Department, when it is examined critically in the light of the facts which were before the court, and of the facts which were not before the court, the latter of which were of vital importance in order to enable the court to arrive at a correct conclusion, as is admitted by the customs officers at the port of Boston. We beg leave to inclose a few samples of ribbons, in all of which silk is the component of chief value, illustrating the above points, to which we ask your attention.

A. Plain union ribbons, cotton and silk, imported exclusively for hatters' use, not sold at retail in New York. Duty, now charged 60 per cent.

B. Galloon, in fact a silk and cotton ribbon identical with the "plain union ribbons," but being called "galloon." It is charged with a duty of 50 per cent.

C. Binding, a silk and cotton ribbon called "Prussian binding." Duty, 50 per cent.

D. Hat-band, a silk and cotton ribbon known as "hat-band." Duty, 50 per cent.

E. Silk and cotton ribbons, precisely like sample D, except in width. Duty, 60 per cent.

The importers whom we represent instruct us to say to the Department, that they have duly protested against the exaction complained of, appealed, and commenced suits, but they are anxious to avoid a prolonged litigation against the Government, with the attendant annoyance and costs of court for both parties. They therefore propose that if the Department will direct that the entries be re-adjusted and refunds made by the collector, on the basis of a duty of 50 per cent. on cotton and silk ribbons, whereon the provisions of the fourteenth section of act of June 30, 1864, chapter —— have been complied with, together with interest on the amount exacted in excess, and the necessary disbursements to the clerk of court on discontinuance, they will discontinue all of the said suits without any other costs to the Government.

Your obedient servants,

WEBSTER & CRAIG.

APPENDIX A.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT,
District of Massachusetts, ss:

May term, 1869.

DAVID LANE ET AL. vs. THOMAS RUSSELL. } Agreed statement of facts.

Assumpsit to recover the sum of $1,049.20, gold, paid under protest, as duties, by the plaintiffs to the defendant, who is collector of the port of Boston.

The merchandise imported consisted of silk and cotton-velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value.

The defendant levied duty thereon at the rate of sixty per centum ad valorem, under the following sentence of the eighth section of chapter 146 of the act of June 30, 1864: "On all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, sixty per centum ad valorem."

The plaintiffs claim that the merchandise is a manufacture, not otherwise provided for, of cotton and silk, of which silk is a component material of chief value, and is only liable to the duty of fifty per centum ad valorem under the last clause of the aforesaid section.

The protests were regularly made in accordance with the law, and the plaintiffs are entitled to bring this action.

It is agreed that some of the fabrics described in the sentence of the aforesaid section, beginning, "On silk vestings, pongees, shawls, etc.," are or may be made only in part of silk, which is, however, the material of chief value, and that all the fabrics enumerated in the said sentence, whether made wholly or chiefly of silk, (as regards value,) are legally liable to a duty of sixty per centum ad valorem.

It is also agreed that there are ribbons made wholly of silk; and that there are velvet ribbons made of silk and cotton, wherein silk is the component material of chief value.

It is also agreed that the fabrics in controversy are "ribbons;" that they are not manufactured wholly of silk; that they are velvet ribbons, made substantially after the manner of velvet goods, but differ from piece-velvets as manufactured products, inter alia, in size, shape, selvage, fuse, commercial designation, and the fact that piece-velvets are valued or sold by the square yard, and that the complete description of the fabrics in controversy is "silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk chief value."

If the court shall be of the opinion that the goods in question were legally liable to a rate of duty of fifty per centum ad valorem, the plaintiffs shall have judgment for the amount claimed, with interest and costs; otherwise, judgment shall be for the defendant, with costs.

Attorney for Plaintiffs.

Assistant United States Attorney, for the Defendant.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., September 27, 1872.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 28th of March last, inclosing a brief submitted by Messrs Webster & Craig, of New York, asking the Department to reconsider its decision of December 19, 1870, relative to the dutiable classification of imported silk and cotton ribbons, under the tariff act of June 30, 1864, and certain other documents relative thereto; and requesting me to consider the application and make such suggestions and recommendations as I may consider appropriate.

I believe the following propositions to be correct:

1. That the original construction of the 8th section of the tariff act of June 30, 1864, by the Treasury Department subjected silk and cotton ribbons to a duty of 50 per centum ad valorem, under the last clause of said section.

2. That the original construction continued in force until December 19, 1870, when, as it appears, in consequence of the decision rendered in the United States circuit court, at Boston, in the case of David Lane et al. vs. Russell, instructions were issued to collectors of customs henceforward to exact a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem upon this class of ribbons.

3. That the case of Lane vs. Russell arose upon the question as to the proper dutiable classification of silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value.

4. That the court in its decision in said case apparently held that all ribbons, without distinction of material, were subject to the 60 per cent. rate, although the case submitted only related to a special class of ribbons, to wit, silk and cotton velvet ribbons.

The question now arises whether or not the Treasury Department shall accept the broad construction thus given to the 8th section of the act referred to, and insist upon its application to all ribbons, or at least to silk and cotton ribbons.

I understand from the papers before me that the Department has already declined to extend the application of the decision to cotton ribbons and linen ribbons. The one has been assessed under the act of 1864, at a duty of 35 per cent., under the clause of the cotton section covering "manufactures of cotton not otherwise provided for;" and the other at a duty of 40 per cent., under the clause of the linen section covering "all other manufactures of flax or of which flax shall be the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for."

The Department not having adopted the decision in the Lane case in its full force, we are brought directly to the question now presented, whether the former decision of the Department holding silk and cotton ribbons to be subject to a duty of 50 per cent. under that clause of the silk section of the act of 1864 covering "all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for," was correct, or its later decision, based apparently upon the opinion of the court in the Lane case, holding that silk and cotton ribbons are covered by the clause, "on all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value," and therefore subject to the duty of 60 per cent.

To determine the question thus presented it is only necessary to ascertain from the language of the act the intent of Congress in making these provisions.

If that intent is clear, it should unhesitatingly be adopted; if it is involved in serious doubt, the Government may properly insist upon the determination of the question by the courts, if the importers wish to press it to that point.

My own opinion is, after much consideration, that Congress never intended that any ribbons but silk ribbons should be charged with the highest rate of duty.

It will be observed that the different portions of the act are quite carefully subdivided. There is a cotton section, a linen section, and a silk section. The presumption is, in my judgment, that the silk section of the act referred to means purely silk or silk goods, unless there are express words limiting or qualifying this general intent. In this view, as I understand, the Department has held only dress and piece-silks, wholly of silk, to be subject to the 60 per cent. rate, while dress and piece silks of silk and cotton were subjected to the 50 per cent. rate. Silk velvets or velvets are accompanied by qualifying words, evidently intending and actually making an exception to the general plan and intent of the section, these goods being charged with a duty of 60 per cent. if only their component material of chief value is composed of silk.

Nor does the grammatical construction of the sentence allow the descriptive and qualifying words applicable to silk velvets and velvets to be applied to ribbons; or if they should be or have been applied to ribbons, with exactly the same reason they should be applied to dress and piece silks.

To my mind, the plain intent of the eighth section is that the various forms of pure silk first enumerated are subject to their respective rates of duty, and then dress and piece silks, silk ribbons, (that is, goods wholly of silk,) and finally silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, are subject to 60 per cent., and that dress and piece silks and ribbons not wholly of silk, but of which silk is the component material of chief value, come under the last clause of the section and are subject to 50 per cent. duty.

I cannot accept the doctrine of the Lane case in all its breadth as in accordance with the intent of Congress.

But one single class of ribbons were involved in that case, whereas it is well known there are many other classes. No presentation was therefore made of a case involving all the various forms of ribbons, nor was the court called upon to consider carefully the application of all the various provisions of the act to all the various forms of ribbons.

The Department not having fully accepted the view of the court in its administration of the law, may well limit its adoption of that opinion to the particular class of ribbons presented in the question before the court, and, in my opinion, would have acted in full harmony with the intent of Congress if it had not made the decision of December 19, 1870.

This view is somewhat strengthened, in my mind, by the consideration that a return by the Department to its former rule would recognize a graded system of duties which would apparently correspond with the relative value of the several classes of goods to which reference has been made, and would at once strike the mercantile sense as entirely just and proper as well as in accordance with a correct construction of the law.

The papers referred to in your communication are herewith returned.

I am, very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

G.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, November 1, 1872.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 8th instant and the accompanying papers, in relation to the dutiable classification of silk and cotton ribbons, of which silk is the component material of chief value, under the 8th section of the act of June 30, 1864, (13 Stats., 210.)

It seems that prior to December 19, 1870, ribbons of the description mentioned other than velvet ribbons were regarded by your Department as falling under the last paragraph of that section and subject to a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem; that silk and cotton velvet ribbons, of which silk is the material of chief value, were classified as velvets, under the second paragraph of the same section, and a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem charged thereon; while linen and cotton ribbons were placed under those sections of the act which relate to manufactures of cotton, flax, &c. (Sections 6 and 7.)

At the May term, 1870, of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, in the case of Lane vs. Russell, the precise question arose, whether silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value, are subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, under the said 8th section, and the court decided that they are subject to that duty. This decision appears to have been based on the idea that such articles are ribbons, within the meaning of that section. Thus the Department and the court, while they coincided as to the duty to which these articles are chargeable under the statute, differed in their views respecting the particular grounds of the liability.

Acting upon the interpretation of the statute conceived by the Department to have been given it by the court, according to which "silk and cotton ribbons" were thought to be chargeable with the same duty as "silk and cotton velvet ribbons," the Department on the 19th of December, 1870, abandoned its previous ruling as to the classification of the former articles, and thereafter subjected them to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, under the designation of "ribbons."

And the question now presented is, as you state it, whether your Department should return to its former ruling, assessing duty on silk and cotton ribbons, silk chief value, at 50 per cent. ad valorem.

I have carefully examined the papers submitted by you touching this subject, among which is a communication from the Solicitor of the Treasury on the same subject, in whose views I in the main concur. In that paper the Solicitor says:

"My own opinion is, after much consideration, that Congress never intended that any ribbons but silk ribbons should be charged with the highest rate of duty. It will be observed that the different portions of the act are quite carefully subdivided. There is a cotton section, a linen section, and a silk section. The presumption is, in my judgment, that the silk section of the act referred to means purely silk or silk goods, unless there are express words limiting or qualifying the general intent. In this view, as I understand, the Department has held only dress and piece silks wholly of silk to be subject to the 60 per cent. rate, while dress and piece silks of silk and cotton were subjected to the 50 per cent. rate. Silk velvets or velvets are accompanied by qualifying words, evidently intending and actually making an exception to the general plan and intent of the section—these goods being charged with a duty of 60 per cent., if only their component material of chief value is composed of silk.

"Nor does the grammatical construction of the sentence allow the description and qualifying words applicable to silk velvets and velvets to be applied to ribbons. Or, if they should be or have been applied to ribbons, with exactly the same reason they should be applied to dress and piece silks. To my mind the plain intent of the 8th section is, that the various forms of pure silk first enumerated are subject to their respective rates of duty, and then dress and piece silks, silk ribbons, (that is, goods wholly of silk,) and finally silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, are subject to 60 per cent., and that dress and piece silks and ribbons not wholly of silk, but of which silk is the component material of chief value, come under the last clause of the section and are subject to 50 per cent. duty. * *

"But one single class of ribbons were involved in that case, (Lane vs. Russell,) whereas it is well known there are many other classes. No presentation was therefore made of a case involving all the various forms of ribbons, nor was the court called upon to consider carefully the application of all the various provisions of the act to all the various forms of ribbons.

"A return by the Department to its former rule would recognize a graded system of duties, which would apparently correspond with the relative value of the several classes of goods to which reference has been made, and would at once strike the mercantile sense as entirely just and proper as well as in accordance with a correct construction of the law."

I have to add as to this decision of the court in the case of Lane vs. Russell, that the question submitted and decided, was as to the duty to be imposed upon silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value, and that the application of this decision to linen and cotton, or silk and cotton ribbons, not velvet, is an inference from the argument of the court, which inference is manifestly in conflict with the legislative intent of the tariff act of June 30, 1864. Compliance with that decision did not, therefore, in my judgment, necessitate a departure by the Department from its first ruling upon the subject of ribbons; and my opinion is, that the law requires a return by the Department to that ruling.

Very respectfully,

GEO. H. WILLIAMS,
Attorney-General.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 2, 1872.

SIR: Respectfully referring to the decision of the Department, addressed to your predecessor under date of December 19, 1870, by which instructions were given to thereafter assess and collect 60 per cent. ad valorem duty on all ribbons composed in part of silk, which instructions were given upon the view taken by this Department of the decision of the United States circuit court at Boston, in the case of Lane vs. Russell, I have to say that the subject has been re-examined by the Department, and has been referred to the Attorney-General for his opinion upon the ruling contained in said letter of December 19, 1870. The result of it is, that the Attorney-General arrives at the conclusion that all pure silk ribbons, under the law of 1864, should pay 60 per cent. duty, and that all silk and cotton ribbons should pay 50 per cent. duty. The opinion, however, does not embrace silk and cotton velvet ribbons, which, until otherwise ordered, will be charged with 60 per cent. duty, as heretofore.

The Department adopts the opinion of the Attorney-General, and you will therefore conform your practice thereto; and upon receiving certificate of discontinuance of the suits now pending, without costs, but allowing ordinary disbursements, you will prepare certified statements for a refund of the excessive duties paid.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., December 18, 1872.

SIR: Doubts having arisen as to the construction to be given to the letter of this Department, dated November 2, 1872, concerning the classification of ribbons, I have to say that all ribbons which, at the time of the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, or at the time of importation, were known as silk ribbons, and bought and sold as such in the trade, will be classified as silk ribbons, and subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem.

I am, very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,

J[2].

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., December 24, 1872.

SIR: I herewith inclose, for your information and guidance, copy of letter addressed to the collector at New York, on the 2d ultimo, in regard to the classification for duty of ribbons composed of silk and cotton, with a copy of further letter addressed to said and cotton ribbons, of which silk is the component material of chief value, under the 8th section of the act of June 30, 1864, (13 Stats., 210.)

It seems that prior to December 19, 1870, ribbons of the description mentioned other than velvet ribbons were regarded by your Department as falling under the last paragraph of that section and subject to a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem; that silk and cotton velvet ribbons, of which silk is the material of chief value, were classified as velvets, under the second paragraph of the same section, and a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem charged thereon; while linen and cotton ribbons were placed under those sections of the act which relate to manufactures of cotton, flax, &c. (Sections 6 and 7.)

At the May term, 1870, of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, in the case of Lane vs. Russell, the precise question arose, whether silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value, are subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, under the said 8th section, and the court decided that they are subject to that duty. This decision appears to have been based on the idea that such articles are ribbons, within the meaning of that section. Thus the Department and the court, while they coincided as to the duty to which these articles are chargeable under the statute, differed in their views respecting the particular grounds of the liability.

Acting upon the interpretation of the statute conceived by the Department to have been given it by the court, according to which "silk and cotton ribbons" were thought to be chargeable with the same duty as "silk and cotton velvet ribbons," the Department on the 19th of December, 1870, abandoned its previous ruling as to the classification of the former articles, and thereafter subjected them to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem, under the designation of "ribbons."

And the question now presented is, as you state it, whether your Department should return to its former ruling, assessing duty on silk and cotton ribbons, silk chief value, at 50 per cent. ad valorem.

I have carefully examined the papers submitted by you touching this subject, among which is a communication from the Solicitor of the Treasury on the same subject, in whose views I in the main concur. In that paper the Solicitor says:

"My own opinion is, after much consideration, that Congress never intended that any ribbons but silk ribbons should be charged with the highest rate of duty. It will be observed that the different portions of the act are quite carefully subdivided. There is a cotton section, a linen section, and a silk section. The presumption is, in my judgment, that the silk section of the act referred to means purely silk or silk goods, unless there are express words limiting or qualifying the general intent. In this view, as I understand, the Department has held only dress and piece silks wholly of silk to be subject to the 60 per cent. rate, while dress and piece silks of silk and cotton were subjected to the 50 per cent. rate. Silk velvets or velvets are accompanied by qualifying words, evidently intending and actually making an exception to the general plan and intent of the section—these goods being charged with a duty of 60 per cent., if only their component material of chief value is composed of silk.

"Nor does the grammatical construction of the sentence allow the description and qualifying words applicable to silk velvets and velvets to be applied to ribbons. Or, if they should be or have been applied to ribbons, with exactly the same reason they should be applied to dress and piece silks. To my mind the plain intent of the 8th section is, that the various forms of pure silk first enumerated are subject to their respective rates of duty, and then dress and piece silks, silk ribbons, (that is, goods wholly of silk,) and finally silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, are subject to 60 per cent., and that dress and piece silks and ribbons not wholly of silk, but of which silk is the component material of chief value, come under the last clause of the section and are subject to 50 per cent. duty. * *

"But one single class of ribbons were involved in that case, (Lane vs. Russell,) whereas it is well known there are many other classes. No presentation was therefore made of a case involving all the various forms of ribbons, nor was the court called upon to consider carefully the application of all the various provisions of the act to all the various forms of ribbons.

"A return by the Department to its former rule would recognize a graded system of duties, which would apparently correspond with the relative value of the several classes of goods to which reference has been made, and would at once strike the mercantile sense as entirely just and proper as well as in accordance with a correct construction of the law."

I have to add as to this decision of the court in the case of Lane vs. Russell, that the question submitted and decided, was as to the duty to be imposed upon silk and cotton velvet ribbons, silk being the component material of chief value, and that the application of this decision to linen and cotton, or silk and cotton ribbons, not velvet, is an inference from the argument of the court, which inference is manifestly in conflict with the legislative intent of the tariff act of June 30, 1864. Compliance with that decision did not, therefore, in my judgment, necessitate a departure by the Department from its first ruling upon the subject of ribbons; and my opinion is, that the law requires a return by the Department to that ruling.

MEMORANDUM IN BEHALF OF IMPORTERS OF RIBBONS.

In March, 1872, nearly a year ago, certain importers of ribbons presented to the Secretary of the Treasury an elaborately prepared remonstrance against assessing 60 per cent. ad valorem on ribbons of silk and cotton, accompanied by official documents setting forth the causes of the errors contained in the decision in the case of Lane vs. Russell. The Secretary, having grave doubts about the legality of the assessment, referred the subject to the Solicitor of the Treasury, who gave, September 27, 1872, a very full opinion, sustaining the views of the importers. Unwilling to act thereon without further legal advice, the Treasury Department asked the opinion of the Department of Justice, which, after careful consideration, indorsed fully and entirely the opinion of the Solicitor.

Attorney-General Williams, in his reply, says:

"My opinion is, after much consideration, that Congress never intended that any ribbons but silk ribbons should be charged with the higher rate of duty. It will be observed that the different portions of the act are quite carefully subdivided. There is a cotton section, a linen section, and a silk section. The presumption is, in my judgment, that the silk section of the act referred to means purely silk, or silk goods, unless there are express words limiting or qualifying this general intent. In this view, as I understand, the Department has held only 'dress and piece silks,' wholly of silk, to be subject to the 60 per cent. rate, while 'dress and piece silks' of silk and cotton were subjected to the 50 per cent. rate. 'Silk velvets, or velvets,' are accompanied by qualifying words, evidently intending and actually making an exception to the general plan and intent of the section; these goods being chargeable with a duty of 60 per cent. if only their component material of chief value is composed of silk. Nor does the grammatical construction of the sentence allow the description and qualifying words applicable to 'silk velvets' and 'velvets' to be applied to ribbons. Or if they should be, or have been, applied to ribbons, with exactly the same reason they should be applied to 'dress and piece silks.' To my mind the plain intent of the eighth section is, that the various forms of pure silk first enumerated are subject to their respective rates of duty, and then dress and piece silks, silk ribbons, (that is goods wholly of silk,) and finally silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, are subject to 60 per cent., and that dress and piece silks and ribbons, not wholly of silk, but of which silk is the component material of chief value, come under the last clause of the section, and are subject to 50 per cent. duty."

This official advice from the Department of Justice was accepted and acquiesced in by the Department asking it, and an official decision was announced in these words:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
"Washington, D. C., November 2, 1872.

"SIR: Respectfully referring to the decision of the Department, addressed to your predecessor under date of December 19, 1870, by which instructions were given to thereafter assess and collect 60 per cent. ad valorem duty on all ribbons composed in part of silk, which instructions were given upon the view taken by this Department of the decision of the United States circuit court, at Boston, in the case of Lane vs. Russell, I have to say that the subject has been re-examined by the Department, and has been referred to the Attorney-General for his opinion upon the ruling contained in said letter of December 19, 1870.

"The result of it is that the Attorney-General arrives at the conclusion that all pure silk ribbons, under the law of 1864, should pay 60 per cent. duty, and that all silk and cotton ribbons should pay 50 per cent. duty.

"The opinion, however, does not embrace silk and cotton velvet ribbons, which, until otherwise ordered, will be charged with 60 per cent. duty, as heretofore.

"The Department adopts the opinion of the Attorney-General, and you will therefore conform your practice thereto, and upon receiving certificates of discontinuance of the suits now pending, without costs, but allowing ordinary disbursements, you will prepare certified statements for a refund of the excessive duties paid.

"I am, very respectfully,

"WM. A. RICHARDSON,
"Acting Secretary.

"C. A. ARTHUR, Esq., Collector, New York."

Under this decision doubts having arisen as to the classification to be given to cotton-edge and cord-edge ribbons, and a hearing thereon having been had and samples produced at Washington before Secretary Boutwell and Assistant Secretary Richardson, in which Mr. James of the customs bureau, Mr. Gibson of the appraisers' office in New York, and the attorneys of the importers took part, the Department, under date of December 18, 1872, decided that only ribbons "known as 'silk ribbons,' and bought and sold as such in the trade, will be classified as 'silk ribbons,' and subject to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem."

This last decision, it will be seen, followed literally the advice of the Department of Justice, which declared "that Congress never intended that any ribbons but 'silk ribbons' should be charged with the higher rate of duty," and that "the silk section of the act referred to means purely silk, or silk goods."

Before receiving the decision of the Department, of November 2, 1872, the appraiser made, November 4, 1872, a report to the collector on an invoice of ribbons imported by Messrs. E. C. Cowdin & Co., as follows:

"One case silk ribbons, 60 per cent."

This invoice had not been liquidated by the collector on date of the reception of the decision of the Department, already mentioned, of December 18, 1872, and the importers protested against a liquidation on the appraiser's return, upon the ground that the ribbons were not "silk ribbons" in trade. Whereupon the collector addressed the following communication to the appraiser:

"CUSTOM-HOUSE, NEW YORK,
"Collector's Office, January 21, 1873.

"SIR: I inclose herewith a letter addressed to me, under date of the 6th instant, by Messrs. Webster & Craig, attorneys for Messrs. E. C. Cowdin & Co., which letter contains invoice, with samples attached, for E. C. C., 334, 335, two cases ribbons, imported by Messrs. E. C. Codwin & Co., per Westphalia, October 29, 1872, and a certificate of dealers as to the commercial appellation of such ribbons.

"In view of the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated December 18, 1872, I have to request that you will ascertain and report by what name such ribbons are known, and bought and sold in the trade.

"I would further request, if you take written evidence as to such appellation, that you will submit the same to me, with your opinion.

"This request is made in order to enable the naval officer and myself to assess the proper rate of duty on the merchandise, under the instructions before referred to.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

"C. A. ARTHUR,
"Collector.

"Hon. WM. A. DARLING, Appraiser."

The appraiser, in reply, submitted the following argument against the opinion o f the Attorney-General and the decision of the Treasury Department:

"CUSTOM-HOUSE, NEW YORK,
"Appraiser's Office, February 24, 1873.

"SIR: Respectfully referring to your letter of the 21st ultimo, inclosing a letter from Messrs. Webster & Craig, which letter contains invoice, with samples attached, of certain two cases of ribbons, imported by Messrs. E. C. Cowdin & Co., per Westphalia, on October 29 last, and a certificate of dealers as to the commercial appellation of such ribbons, you requesting that I will ascertain and report by what name such ribbons are known and bought and sold in trade, and that if I take written evidence of such appellation, I will submit the same to you with my opinion, I have the honor to state:

"That I have not taken any written evidence as to the commercial appellation of the ribbons in question, for the reason that Messrs. Webster & Craig have forestalled any action of mine, by the certificate which they have obtained from importers and dealers, and which is transmitted in your letter.

"Other importers of such ribbons, who had not protested and appealed, could not give counter-certificate without prejudicing their equitable claims for a similar refund of the duties paid by them, in case the Department should recognize the validity of the claim made by Webster & Craig's clients.

"Notwithstanding the certificate furnished by Messrs. Webster & Craig, to the effect that the ribbons in question are known by certain technical names therein stated, it is, nevertheless, a fact that the ribbons (although containing a small modicum of cotton in the edge) are silk ribbons, and so far as they have had or can have any commercial designation based on the materials of which they are composed, that commercial designation must be 'silk ribbons.'

"The term 'silk ribbon,' as used in commerce, is a general and comprehensive one, which is not restricted to any particular kind of ribbons, but applies equally to all kinds of ribbons which are composed either wholly or largely of silk; and it would be just as reasonable to claim that champagne is not, in commercial parlance, wine, because it is known by the particular designation of champagne, as to claim that the ribbons in question are not commercially known as silk ribbons, because they are described under the particular appellations of 'boyaux ribbons' and 'round-edge ribbons,' as the appellations are stated in said certificate.

"As a matter of fact, however, the ribbons in question are described in invoices as 'taffetas à lisières ronds,' 'taffetas à boyaux,' and 'taffetas,' and are almost always described in the consuls' certificates as 'silk ribbons,' though sometimes as 'ribbons' only.

"The word 'taffetas' is applied only to such fabrics as enter into commerce as silk goods. It is translated by the English word 'taffeta,' or 'taffety,' which is defined by Webster as 'a fine, smooth stuff of silk,' and the other words, 'à lisières ronds,' 'à boyaux,' are descriptive only of the form of the edge; so that the ribbons in question are described on the face of the invoices, as well as in the consuls' certificates, as 'silk ribbons,' and it is certain that they have always been so known to the general public.

"It is a significant fact, in this connection, that the ribbons in question have always been classified in this Department as silk ribbons, subject to a duty of 60 per cent., although for a period of six years subsequent to the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, and prior to the Department's decision of December 19, 1870, certain kinds of silk ribbons, containing a large proportion of cotton, were classified in this Department as 'silk and cotton ribbons,' subject to a duty of only 50 per cent. ad valorem; and yet it does not appear that it was generally claimed, if claimed at all, during such period, that the ribbons in question were not properly classified as 'silk ribbons.'

"While declining, therefore, to regard the certificate submitted by Webster & Craig as sufficient to establish a commercial designation so entirely at variance with the testimony of the invoices, and of the knowledge of the present and past experts of this Department, the said certificate is herewith returned to you, without prejudice, for your consideration, and such action as you may deem proper in the premises.

"Since the foregoing was written I have been shown papers from the office of the general appraiser at this port, signed and sworn to by many of the importers whose names are attached to Webster & Craig's certificate, in which these same ribbons have been recently re-appraised under the designation of 'silk ribbons.'

"In accordance with the views above expressed, I shall feel constrained to continue to classify the said ribbons as subject to a duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem, unless otherwise directed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"I herewith return the papers and samples transmitted with your letters of the 21st and 24th ultimo.

"Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

"WM. A. DARLING,
"Appraiser.

I.

The first remark to be made on the report of the appraiser is that it contains no evidence of the appellations by which persons in the trade in our own markets know and buy and sell here ribbons like the samples submitted. In the trial of the champagne cases in New York the court excluded a witness, Teller, for many years an examiner of invoices of all wines entered in that port, from testifying as to foreign market-value, because he had never actually bought or sold in the foreign market, although he had examined all custom-house invoices and prices-current for a series of years. For a similar reason neither the appraiser nor his assistants can be accepted as trade experts in commercial designations.

The appraiser was requested by the head of the revenue in the port of New York to ascertain and report to him the trade-names of certain ribbons, and if he ascertained such names by written evidence to transmit it with his report. The appraiser replies that he has not taken any "written evidence," and, in effect, that he has not taken new evidence in any form. In other words, he has not done what he was asked to do. For his failure he assigns two reasons. One is that the importing-house anticipated him by presenting to the collector and naval officer in the first instance, as it was bound to do, prima-facie evidence that the classification of the appraiser, as protested against, is an error. The second is that "other importers of such ribbons who had not protested and appealed could not give counter-certificate without prejudicing their equitable claims for a similar refund of the duties paid by them, in case the Department should recognize the validity of the claim made by Webster & Craig's clients."

If this be true of "importers" it has no application to or bearing on jobbers and dealers in ribbons in our markets who are not importers, and who constitute a large majority of the signers of the certificates referred to. Why was not the "written evidence" of such obtained if any there be who will say that the samples are "silk ribbons?" Those who are not importers have no "equitable claims for a similar refund," or any other refund, at the custom-house. And besides there is no question of refund in this particular application in the sense implied by the appraiser. It relates to executive functions in current custom-house business in the assessing of duties. It is a matter of the future, under the new opinion of the chief law-officer of the Executive, and the new decision thereon of the Treasury Department. But even if this claim be of the nature described is it quite fair or considerate for the appraiser to intimate that the respectable dealers who signed the certificates have either affirmed what they do not know, or have misrepresented their own opinions? Would the appraiser be justified in suggesting that an "importer" would fail to state the truth on proper application from a Government officer, because he had or had not "protested and appealed?" The trade-name of these samples is a fact, just as market-value is a fact, but does the existing system of re-appraisements proceed on the idea that the opinions thereon of importers and dealers are unreliable? The general appraiser is compelled in respect to values not only to be guided by testimony of dealers, but to associate with himself as referee a dealer who is "familiar with the character and quality of the merchandise in question." But the appraiser's office in respect to the trade and "character" of the samples sets up for itself an exclusive virtue which rejects dealers in the article who alone are by law competent to testify as to trade-names. The appraiser, who is not and never was a dealer, gives his own opinion that the term "silk ribbons" is "used in commerce" to describe all ribbons composed "largely" of silk, with cotton for the other component. Can he find a dealer to agree with him? If he can why is the name and statement withheld? The appraiser declares "it is nevertheless a fact" that, so far as the samples "have had or can have any commercial designation, based on the materials of which they are composed, that commercial designation must be silk ribbons." What does he mean? The inquiry is not for a commercial designation, based on materials of manufacture, but for a trade-name of the thing in controversy, no matter of what made. "Must be" is well enough for one who has the lawful force to make his opinion or appreciation of evidence final and supreme, but the difficulty with such a peremptory assertion in the mouth of the appraiser is, first, that he produces not a single dealer to sustain it, and, next, that it is not his function to decide. When he argues, the same tests must be applied to his mental steps as to those of any one else.

II.

I take it to be well-settled revenue law that it is the collector who determines, in the first instance, the duty these ribbons shall pay, estimating the amount in connection with the naval officer. The act of July 27, 1866, creating the office of appraiser of this port, limits his functions to supervising the examination, inspection, and appraisement, and to reporting to the collector the "true value" of such imports as the collector shall direct. The assistant appraisers, aided by the examiners, are the actual legal examiners, inspectors, and appraisers, to report "value" to the appraiser. The statute says the appraiser shall report the "true value," which the law specifies as appraising value, but nowhere says in terms what shall be the form of this report. The Secretary, under his general statute power, has prescribed regulations on the subject, which declare that "in case the merchandise is found to correspond in quantity, character, and value with that described in the invoice, and declared on entry, the appraisers will make due report thereof to the collector, in writing, on the invoice. * * * * The return of the appraisers must describe the character of the merchandise, as nearly as practicable, in the terms of the tariff, and state, for the information of the collector and naval officer, under what classification, in their opinion, it falls."

These directions are from the Treasury regulation of 1869. Those for 1857, having in mind the schedule tariffs of that year and of 1846, directed the appraiser to describe the "character or class," and "state under what schedule," &c., instead of classification. From all the circumstances it is to be inferred that by describing the "character" is intended a correct statement of the fabric as it appears to the eyes of the appraiser who examined it. Thus, the samples should have been returned thus:

Ribbons, body thereof entirely of silk, with cotton in the edges.—Whatever else (beside the value thereof) respecting trade-name or rate of duty he might add, would be officious, and merely the expression of an opinion binding no one in law. As to values, the appraiser's department is supreme, but as to nothing more. Everything else the collector and naval officer regulate, and from the decision of the collector as to classification or rate or amount of duty, there is appeal to the Secretary. The test of the jurisdiction of the appraiser is, whether an appeal lies thereon to re-appraisers, and whether any one, President or Cabinet, can revise their decision, if made according to forms of law. Certainly that is not true of classification or of trade-names, which is merely a question of rate of duty. The appraiser may give his views as to classification, but they are no more binding on the collector and naval officer, and no more relieve them under their official bonds, than would their advice to the appraiser as to values relieve or shift his responsibility.

III.

But before commenting at length on the report of the appraiser, the undersigned desires to ascertain if there can be doubt of the correctness of the proposition that, in all questions of dispute between importers and the Government respecting the meaning of commercial terms used in tariff laws, the persons engaged in the foreign and domestic trade of our own markets are sole and sovereign arbiters. Must not their testimony, and their testimony alone, control? Must not the evidence be confined to our markets? And must it not be restricted to the true technical names used by such dealers as would be called to determine market-value on re-appraisement? These inquiries should be disposed of on authority, and at the beginning of this investigation. If the testimony of none but actual dealers, those who stand face to face with trade, can be received, and if every one of such dealers declares the ribbons in controversy are not "silk ribbons," and no dealers can be found, as the appraiser admits, to say the opposite, then and there ought to be an end of the dispute. It will be of no avail to argue that trade should not settle such controversies if the law declares that they may and shall.

One way to present clearly and sharply the nature of the inquiry in this case would be to assume that the act of 1864 specified "silk ribbons," by name, at 60 per cent., and "cotton-edge ribbons," or cord-edge ribbons," by name, at 50 per cent., and then to inquire whether the last-named ribbons, if entered by that designation, would, upon the evidence, be liable to forfeiture under the provisions of the 67th section of the tariff law of March 2, 1799, because falsely denominated. The Federal courts have had repeated occasions to consider the force and true contruction of terms used in tariff laws. One of the earliest cases is that of "200 Chests of Tea," (9 Wheaton, 430,) where an effort was made to forfeit merchandise, under this section of the act of 1799, because entered as "Bohea tea," the Government claiming that it was "in reality simple Congo tea, and not Bohea." The prosecution relied on the scientific or botanical description of Bohea tea, claiming that it was in fact a pure, unmixed tea, a simple substance, which the tea in controversy was not. The importers replied to this scientific, structural classification by proof of what dealers understood "Bohea tea" to be. In this conflict of theory, as to how the term used in this tariff law was to be interpreted, the case went to the Supreme Court at Washington, which said:

"If we were to advert to scientific specifications for our guide on the present occasion, it is most manifest, from the works cited at the bar, that Bohea is a generic term, including under it all the black teas, and not merely a term indicating a specific kind. But it appears to us unnecessary to enter upon this inquiry, because, in our opinion, Congress must be understood to use the word in its known commercial sense. The object of the duty laws is to raise revenue, and for this purpose to class substances according to the general usage and known denominations of trade. Whether a particular article were designated by one name or another, in the country of its origin, or whether it were a simple or mixed substance, was of no importance in the view of the legislature. It did not suppose our merchants to be naturalists or geologists or botanists. It applied its attention to the description of articles as they derived their appellations in our own markets, in our domestic as well as our foreign traffic. And it would have been as dangerous as useless to attempt any other classification than that derived from the actual business of human life. Bohea tea, then, in the sense of all our revenue laws, means that article which, in the known usage of trade, has acquired that distinctive appellation."

Applying this rule of the Supreme Court to ribbons, the rule would be that it is of no consequence how the importation of Messrs. Cowdin & Co. is designated "in the country of its origin," or in invoices, or in consular certificates, or in the foreign markets of France or Switzerland, because the inquiry must be how the ribbons in question are known "in our own markets."

This case was decided in the year 1824, and another involving a similar inquiry was before the court in 1833, and reported under the title of Barlow vs. The United States, (7 Peters, 404.) The question in that case was whether certain sugars entered as "refined sugars" were falsely denominated. The law allowed a drawback on "sugar refined within the United States." The merchants contended that the meaning of the word "refined" in the tariff law was to be interpreted according to its general signification, by which all sugars were considered as refined if they had arrived at the point of granulation. The Supreme Court said this might be so, but the true inquiry was how Congress had used the word, and it again denied that Congress intended to go to "foreign countries" to ascertain the meaning of terms used in tariff laws, but to the trade "in our own" markets. Nothing could be more explicit on this point than the following language of the court:

"Congress must be presumed to use the words in their known and habitual commercial sense; not indeed in that of foreign countries if it should differ from our own, but in that known in our own trade, foreign and domestic. If, in a loose signification among refiners, sugars should sometimes be spoken of as being refined without having undergone the further process of claying; or if the whole mass resulting from that process should sometimes indiscriminately acquire among them that appellation in a like loose signification; still, if among buyers and sellers generally, in the course of trade and business, the appellation 'refined sugars' is exclusively limited to the products called lump and loaf sugar, and never includes bastard sugar, the acts of Congress ought to be construed in this restrictive sense as that peculiarly belonging to commerce."

The next year, 1834, another case came before the Supreme Court involving a consideration of the same question. It was The United States vs. 112 Casks of Sugar, (8 Peters, 277.) Certain merchandise had been entered as "sirup," and the Government claimed that it was not sirup but "sugar." A chemist testified, in behalf of the United States, after an analysis of the article, that it "was not sirup according to his understanding." Dealers, however, testified that the article was known as sirup in trade, and the court below decided in favor of the importer; on an appeal to the Supreme Court the decree below was sustained, and in respect to the testimony of the chemist, the court said:

"With respect to this and all other testimony of this description, it is only necessary to observe that the denomination of merchandise, subject to the payment of duties, is to be understood in a commercial sense, although it may not be scientifically correct. All laws regulating the payment of duties are for practical application to commercial operations, and are to be understood in a commercial sense; and it is to be presumed that Congress so used and intended them to be understood." * * * "It is difficult to say what is its true denomination. The witnesses speak of it as a new article, not known in trade. None call it 'sugar.' All seem to think it may be called 'sirup,' in some sense, though several think it is not such according to the understanding of that article in trade and commerce. Upon the whole, we think the decree of the court below ought to be affirmed, and a certificate of probable cause of seizure be certified of record."

This is a substantial exhibition of the condition of the ribbons in controversy. No witness and dealer calls them "silk ribbons."

In 1836 another case, Elliot vs. Swartwout, (10 Peters, 46,) came before the Supreme Court. The question was whether certain suspenders were dutiable as manufactures of wool or as manufactures of worsted. The collector said the former, and so the Government claimed at the trial. The jury found "that worsted was made out of wool by combing, and thereby became a distinct article, well known in commerce under the denomination of worsted;" but the judges were divided in opinion whether or not to follow this technical trade-designation of worsted; just as, in the present case, the appraisers contend that the technical trade-term of "cotton-edge" "cord-edge" ribbons cannot take the samples out of the generic description "silk ribbons. But the Supreme Court said:

"It being admitted in this case that worsted is a distinct article, well known in commerce under that denomination, we must understand Congress as using the term in that commercial sense, and as contradistinguished from wool and woolen goods, and other well-known denominations of goods."

In 1844 another case, Curtis vs. Martin, (3 How., 108,) was decided by the Supreme Court, involving a similar principle. The dispute was whether the merchandise was dutiable as "gunny-cloth" or "cotton-bagging." The importers asked the court below to leave the dispute to the jury to decide, on the evidence of dealers, and the judge did as asked. The collector, Swartwout, excepted, and the question was carried to the Supreme Court, which said that the propriety of the action of the judge below cannot now be considered as an open one," and affirmed the judgment of the circuit court.

In 1848 a similar question came before the Supreme Court again, in Lawrence vs. Allen, (7 How., 790,) the inquiry being whether the merchandise was dutiable as "India-rubber shoes," or was free as unmanufactured India rubber. The court said that the jury should have been instructed that it was for them to determine how the merchandise was known "in the language of commerce."

This general rule, so often and so clearly laid down by the Supreme Court at Washington, to the effect that persons in trade can and must be permitted to determine the meaning of words used in tariff laws, to the exclusion of all custom-house officials and theoretic reasoners, who are not dealers, has been again and again applied in the different circuit courts, but nowhere with more intelligence and clearness than in the case of Wilkinson vs. Greely, tried in Boston in 1853, and reported in the 1 Curtis C. C. Reports, p. 439. The collector, Greely, contended that certain fabrics were not, and the importers that they were, known as "blankets." It was generally agreed by the witnesses on the trial that in commercial dealings there is "no such thing bought or sold, or known, as blankets merely, but always some particular kind of blanket, as "Mackinaw," or "Rose," or "Whitney," or "Duffle blankets." This is exactly true in respect to ribbons, which are never bought or sold as ribbons merely. The question, therefore, on trial was, the court said, "narrowed down to the inquiry whether the samples were known in commerce as some kind of blankets," and it added, that the jury could infer, in the absence of all evidence to the contrary, that if they were generally known as blankets in New York and Boston, they were generally so known throughout the country. In this case the custom-house witnesses only gave negative testimony, as do the certificates in the present case, to the effect that the samples were not known to them as "blankets." The importers objected to this, but the court said—and its remarks are pertinent to the inquiry whether the present samples are known in trade as silk "ribbons:"

"Here the question is, whether a certain thing was generally known to those engaged in a particular trade; and when witnesses so engaged testify it was not known to them, this negative testimony tends directly to disprove the fact asserted, and if the witnesses are quite numerous, and their business extensive, their testimony would, if believed, be sufficient to prove, though the plaintiff's witnesses are believed when they testify they knew the fact, yet that the fact was not generally known, for if generally known it would have been known to the defendant's witnesses as well as to the plaintiff's."

Another instructive application of this rule, that trade is to govern in all questions of dispute between importers and the custom-house, was made by Judge Nelson in the year 1853, in the case of Lennig vs. Maxwell, (3 Bl. C. C. R., 125.) The dispute was whether the import was dutiable as "waste" or "shoddy," or as a "manufacture of wool." The custom-house appraisers returned it as "prepared or manufactured wool, at 30 per cent.," just as they have returned these ribbons, "silk ribbons, at 60 per cent." The appraisers, in that case, relied upon the invoice designations, which were "laine à velouter," "belle laine rouge," "belle laine marapa," "belle laine fontaine," "belle laine écarlate." In like manner, in the ribbon case, the appraiser, in his report, relies upon the invoice designations. The article in controversy was proved, by dealers, to be the refuse thrown off in the shearing or finishing of woolen cloths, and the jury said it was known in trade as "waste" or "flock." The Treasury Department had previously carefully investigated the whole subject, and decided that the article was not "waste" or "flock" at five per cent. duty, but, after the verdict of the jury, the Department acquiesced therein.

The law reports are full of cases where the courts have applied the doctrine that persons in trade make commercial designations which the Government must take and obey; of this character were the well known decisions that "almonds" were not dutiable as "dried fruits;" that "singing-birds" were not dutiable as "live animals;" and very lately that "silk crapes" were not dutiable as "silks." What chance is it believed the appraisers would have, before a court and jury, of obtaining a verdict and judgment that the present samples are "silk ribbons," in face of the written declarations and testimonies of nearly every importer and every large dealer that they are not "silk ribbons?"

IV.

Having thus established who, in law, can testify as to the fabrics included within tariff designations, it is proper to inquire what such persons say of the ribbons in controversy. The declarations spread out below are made by importers and by dealers, including large auctioneers, who are not importers.

The latter class largely preponderate among the signers, and as they pay no duties at the custom-house, but are middle-men making transfers between the importers and retailers, they speak on the subject of trade designations with the highest authority. It cannot be justly suggested that their testimonies are warped by thoughts or purposes of self-benefit. The following are the certificates, classified according to the different cities in which the signers do business:

NEW YORK, January 6, 1873.

The undersigned, importers of and dealers in ribbons, doing business in the city of New York, being familiar with the designations in trade of the various descriptions of ribbons sold in this market, do hereby certify that the articles of which samples are hereunto annexed are not known in trade, and bought and sold, by the designation of silk ribbons, but by the following designations, viz: No. 1, cotton-edge, or boyeaux ribbons; No. 2, cord-edge or round-edge ribbons. And dealers in these articles are well aware that the component materials thereof are silk and cotton.

After receiving these signatures, and transmitting them to the collector, which identified the samples now in dispute as not "silk ribbons," it occurred to the undersigned to inquire among the largest ribbon-importers in this country what evidence the record in their books of past transactions in these ribbons disclosed as to trade-names, and by what appellations they were described in written orders and in bills of sale. The following replies, accompanied by large numbers of written orders, speak for themselves:

"NEW YORK, February 6, 1873.

"DEAR SIRS: We are in receipt of your letter of the 5th instant, making certain inquiries in relation to the ribbon trade, and beg to say in reply that, in our business, we never use the term 'silk ribbons' in buying and selling. That is a custom-house and not a trade term. We never enter ribbons on our books as 'silk ribbons,' and never have seen that description in any order, and we never so describe the goods in our bills to purchasers.

"Sometimes we have orders for 'all-silk ribbons,' meaning ribbons composed wholly of silk. Such orders always apply to 'gros grains' exclusively, and never to 'boyeaux,' 'cotton-edge,' 'cord-edge,' or 'round-edge' ribbons. Generally, our customers describe the article required by the particular brand which distinguishes the fabric, such as 'Bear,' 'Omnibus,' 'Ostrich,' &c., or as 'boyeaux cotton-edge,' or 'round-edge,' or 'cord-edge,' when the brand is not specified.

"We inclose a few orders received from our customers as specimens, and we cannot find on our files a single letter or order wherein the term 'silk ribbons' is used. If you require a greater number of orders, they may be examined on our files, being bound up with the letters, otherwise we would now furnish you with more.

"Yours, very truly,

"ELLIOT C. COWDIN & CO.

"Messrs. WEBSTER & CRAIG,
"29 Nassau street."

"NEW YORK, February 6, 1873.

"DEAR SIRS: In answer to your kind note of yesterday, we beg to state that the ribbons in question are sold and bought here as cord-edge or boyeaux ribbons, and described otherwise according to the special patterns or brands, and that they are never styled as silk ribbons in the trade. We inclose some orders received from our customers, where they especially ask for cord-edged ribbons, and we can prove it by hundreds more of similar orders.

"We trust that this statement is satisfactory, and remain, truly, yours,

"BLUMER, BRUN & SOMMERHOFF.

"C. E. means always corded-edge.

"Messrs. WEBSTER & CRAIG,
"Present, 29 Nassau street."

"NEW YORK, February 6, 1873.

"DEAR SIRS: In regard to the designation in trade of cord-edge and boyeaux ribbons, we beg to say that they are uniformly known and designated, by buyers as well as sellers, as cord-edge and boyeaux ribbons.

"Our customers call for them or order them under above designation, and the different qualities are described by trade-marks or pattern-numbers.

"Our bills give merely pattern-numbers or trade-marks, without further designations.

"We never did hear nor see these ribbons called silk ribbons.

"We inclose a few orders from customers. All we get are the same way.

"Yours, respectfully,

"RICHARD ISELIN & CO.
"JOHN G. NEESER, Attorney.

"Messrs. WEBSTER & CRAIG."

"OFFICE OF C. A. AUFFMORDT & CO., NO. 10 GREENE STREET,
"New York, February 7, 1873.

"DEAR SIRS: In reply to your favor of the 5th instant, we beg to confirm to you that the corded-edge and boyeaux ribbons are never represented by us, or sold by us, as 'silk' ribbons, nor called for nor ordered as such by our customers, the universal designation the same are sold under being respectively corded-edge and boyeaux, or cotton-edge ribbons.

"We inclose a few letters from different customers, showing to you the way the goods are ordered by them, and could produce many more of the same tenor, though in many cases our customers don't add the above designations, but call the ribbons simply by their respective brands, say, 'dog-ribbons,' 'butterfly-ribbons,' &c., without, however, ever using the word 'silk.'

"Yours, very truly,

"C. A. AUFFMORDT & CO.

"Messrs. WEBSTER & CRAIG, New York."

"NEW YORK, February 6, 1873.

"GENTLEMEN: In answer to your inquiry respecting the designation in this market of what we know in trade as corded-edge and boyeaux ribbons, we beg to say that our orders for them never call them 'silk ribbons.'

"We have examined our orders for many years carefully, since receiving your note, and find that, in many instances, only the pattern-number and width and color are mentioned. In our bills for ribbons we never use for them the term 'silk ribbons.'

"Yours, respectfully,

"PASSAVANT & CO.

"Messrs. WEBSTER & CRAIG, Present."

"NEW YORK, February 6, 1873.

"DEAR SIRS: In answer to your favor of the 5th inst., we have to say that the ribbons in question are known among the trade as corded-edge ribbon; that buyers never call them 'silk ribbons,' neither verbally nor by written orders. We describe them in our bills merely as corded-edge ribbons, with the pattern-number added, which refers to the particular quality.

"When a buyer calls for corded-edge ribbons, we know that he means a ribbon of which the body is of silk, and the edge, or cords on the edge, of cotton. This cotton or cord is either covered lengthwise and all around with silk, or merely on one side of it, or not at all, which latter class is commonly called boyeaux-edge, and the general designation of all kinds, by the trade, is corded-edge ribbons.

"We have no more written orders for C. E. R. on hand than those we gave you before, because all orders, by letter, merely call for the particular pattern-number of the ribbon which was bought of us for some time previously.

"We hope the above information will hold to a final decision of this question, and remain

"Yours, respectfully,

"KUTTER, LUKEMEYER & CO.

"Messrs. WEBSTER & CRAIG."

V.

All of these papers were laid before the appraiser, but the certificates of the largest ribbon dealers in any markets, foreign or domestic, testifying directly and unequivocally, that the samples in question were, and are, not known in trade, or bought and sold as "silk ribbons," appear to have made no impression on his mind. Probably this comes from a misappreciation on his part of the character of the investigation sought; from an idea that a question of structure instead of trade-name was referred to him; and from a pardonable desire to vindicate the past action of the appraiser's office in the premises. This may account for the appraiser's assertion that the samples are "silk ribbons," if one looks only to the materials of their manufacture, and yet he admits they are made in part of cotton. Undoubtedly the appraiser is an official expert to say of what materials a fabric is made, but not as to the designation of the manufactured article "in trade." The Supreme Court has pertinently said that tariff laws are not addressed to botanists, mineralogists, or scientists, but to practical traders in the articles enumerated. This rule of commercial designation the appraiser has had repeated occasion, under the eighth section of the act of 1864, to vindicate. Conspicuously was this the case in the matter of certain cases of silk and cotton laces which, under the act, the importers, Messrs. A. T. Stewart & Co., claimed should pay only 50 per cent., but the appraiser replied (October 31, 1867) that he had made the classification "in view of its commercial designation of silk lace." Here was a clear recognition of the trade as controlling classifications. There was the same in the appraiser's report, April 8, 1868, on hat-bands, where he says, "that in view of the commercial character of the goods," &c. So it was in the appraiser's report, September 25, 1868, about silk twist, where he put his decision distinctly on the point that the fabric was "not the commercial article known as silk twist." So it was again, in the appraiser's report, April 21, 1870, on Faille ribbons, (so called,) where he declares: "It is a settled principle of revenue law that the commercial designation must govern in the classification of imported merchandise, and these Faille ribbons are universally known to the trade as silk ribbons, and are bought and sold as a pure silk article of a superior quality, the debasement in the fabric, one thread of cotton in the filling to four of silk, being generally unknown to the public." To the same effect was his report on vestings, which he classified at 60 per cent., because "sold as a pure silk article;" and that of September 23, 1870, on ribbons of Cowdin & Co., which he admitted at 50 per cent., because "not commercially known as pure silk ribbons." Upon this uniform rule, what report would the appraiser have been bound to make if it had appeared at the time that the Faille ribbons were not bought and sold as a pure silk article, and if the debasement of cotton had been known, instead of unknown, "to the public?" The undersigned assert, without fear of contradiction, that every report of the appraiser distinctly shows that the fabrics classified by him as "silk fabrics" were, in his opinion, known, bought, and sold as pure silk articles.

The appraiser, however, finally admitting that a trade-name of the samples may be that which the importers assert, insists it is not such an one as the revenue laws and judicial decisions thereon contemplate and require. His proposition appears to be something like this: The thing known in trade as champagne is wine; therefore the fabric known in trade as a cotton cord-edge ribbon is silk ribbon. This at least recognizes what is true, that the samples are as distinctly known in trade as "cotton cord-edge ribbons" as certain sparkling juices of the grape are known as "champagne." This recognition ought to end all further discussion. The premises and reasoning of the appraiser confound a trade-term and a general word describing a whole class of fermented juices of grapes. "Wine" is not a descriptive term of purchase and sale, or, indeed, of the tariff, any more than tea, or coffee, or sugar. In trade those words do not identify anything. When the tariff intends to embrace under one rate of duty all the species or varieties of the general class, it says uniformly "teas of all kinds," "coffee of all kinds," "wines of all kinds." If in 1864 Congress had intended that every kind of ribbons should pay 60 per cent., it would have said "ribbons of all kinds." The appraiser assumes that the species is identical with its genus, neither including more or less, when he says that, in a trade or revenue sense, champagne is wine. Turn to the existing law of 1870, regulating the duty on wines, and apply his reasoning, "Wines of all kinds in bottles," imported except as thereinafter provided, pay a specified rate, and "champagne and all other sparkling wines, in bottles," another and higher rate; but if the appraiser's premises be sound that champagne is wine, then the former can be classified at the lower rate. Wine is the genus of which champagne and sherry are species; but it does not follow that the last two articles are identical. The word ribbons is a generic term to describe a class of fabrics woven of different component materials, and silk ribbons, cotton ribbons, cotton cord-edge ribbons, are species or varieties of that class, but these different species are not therefore identical with each other or with the genus, either in a popular, or a trade, or a revenue sense. The appraiser's theory would overthrow the decision of the Supreme Court in the "almond" case, and classify almonds as "fruits dried." The legal interpretation of the act of 1864, in respect to ribbons, is settled by the Department of Justice, and the acquiescence therein of the Treasury Department, and it is therefore indisputable that "silk ribbons" are the "ribbons" which pay 60 per cent., and cotton ribbons pay only thirty-five per cent.; but, on the reasoning of the appraiser, a cotton ribbon is a silk ribbon, because champagne is wine, and therefore cotton ribbons pay the high rate of duty.

If the appraiser had appreciated the aspect in which the decision of the Department placed the inquiry addressed to him by the collector, he would, no doubt, have reported in substance thus:

"Up to the year 1861, the term 'ribbons' was unknown to the tariff laws, because ribbons were made dutiable as manufactures of silk, or of which silk is chief value, or of cotton. In the March act of that year 'silk ribbons,' or ribbons 'of which silk shall be the component material of chief value,' were specially named at 30 per cent. ad valorem. In August of the same year the identical language was repeated, but the rate increased to 40 per cent. But in June, 1864, 'ribbons' were taken out of the general clause; the prefix 'silk' was omitted, the phrase 'on all kinds' not added, and a difference of ten per centum was made between pure silk and silk chief value. The appraiser's experts naturally continued a classification of ribbons, like the samples, adopted prior to 1864, when the presence of cotton in a minimum value made no difference in the rate. Whenever, however, in 1867, the question was raised respecting laces, vestings, hat-bands and Faille ribbons, the higher classification was only continued when the experts believed the fabric was 'bought and sold as a pure silk article and the debasement of cotton unknown to dealers.' But since, on re-examination, and on presentation of the certificates of a large preponderance of all the dealers in ribbons in our markets, and whose integrity and truthfulness can never be justly called in question, it sufficiently appears that the samples are not known as silk ribbons, or dealt in as a pure silk article, and the presence of cotton is well-known, the classification as 'silk ribbons' should not be continued."

VI.

In the argument submitted to the collector by the appraiser, in lieu of facts, there is a striking similarity between one part thereof and the contention of the district attorney in the case of Lottimer vs. Smythe, a verbatim report of which is given in The Internal Revenue Record for January 11, 1873, vol. 17, p. 12. That suit turned on the inquiry whether "folded crapes" or "rolled crapes" manufactured of silk, or chiefly of silk, and imported in the piece, are dutiable as "piece-silks" under the very section of the law of 1864 now under discussion. The invoice called the goods "crapes," as just described; the entry called them "silks;" and the appraiser reported them as "manufactured silk, costing under one dollar per square yard." The collector levied sixty, and the importer protested that only fifty per centum was leviable. On the trial it was by both sides conceded that the term "piece-silks is not in commercial use as a technical designation of any silks whatever," and the importer conceded that the term, as used in the statute, meant "silks" imported in the piece, but did not describe any one description thereof, and that the "crapes" were made of silk and imported in the piece. On this branch of the case, Judge Woodruff charged the jury thus:

"Now, gentlemen, in this view of the meaning of the term 'piece-silks,' and the absence of any known technical meaning to that term in trade or commerce, I feel constrained to say that it includes all silk goods made and imported in the piece according to its general and its ordinary signification, and that it therefore embraces crape, unless you are satisfied that crapes, in trade and commerce, among men concerned in the business of importing and dealing in crapes, are not known as silks. Unless crapes are shown to your satisfaction not to be known as silks, then (under the concession that crape is imported in the piece and is made of silk) crapes fall within the designation of piece-silks and were liable to the duty exacted by the defendant."

This is the very doctrine now contended for by the importers in respect to the ribbons in controversy.

The court then goes on to state to the jury the contention of the district attorney, and if "cotton-edge ribbons" be substituted for "crapes" therein, and "silk ribbons" be substituted for "silks," we have a perfect counterpart of the appraiser's argument that cotton-edge ribbons are known in trade as a particular kind of silk ribbons. Judge Woodruff said:

"The defendant, on this subject, as you will have perceived, claims, in relation to this term 'crape,' that these goods, the subject of this importation, are known in trade and commerce as a particular kind of silk, and that the term 'crape' is a term of discrimination among silks, and nothing else; that although it may be true that popular language (used by the ordinary public in speaking of these goods) employs the term 'crape,' and nothing else, yet that it is so employed only as a means of discrimination between that and other kinds of silk goods, and that although the consumer, when he wants that kind of goods, inquires for crape, he does what the consumer does who wants satin, viz, he inquires for satin; just as also when the consumer wants taffeta, he asks for it by its specific name, and not by its general designation, silk; when he wants gros de nap, he asks for gros de nap; when he wants Canton crape, he asks for Canton crape; and so through all the long list of silk goods imported in the piece which it is not worth while, nor indeed is it in my power, to enumerate.

"The claim is, that the term 'crape' is like the terms 'taffeta,' 'gros de nap,' 'poult de soie,' 'Canton crape,' and various others that have been named here. That although these are distinctive terms, they are distinctive only as a discrimination between kinds of 'silks,' according to the use of that term among importing merchants and those who deal in them, and those to whom the tariff laws are addressed. That they are not used as definitions withdrawing them from the more general term 'silks' as it is used in this country; but that each and all of them, whether designated by one name or the other, are shown by the testimony to be known by those who are engaged in the business of importing and dealing in these goods as 'silks,' and each is so known as much as either of them.

"That presents, I think, with distinctness, and with as much clearness as at present I can, the view which the defendant takes of this subject—that the goods are imported, that they are made of silk, that they are known among commercial men as 'silks,' and are imported 'in the piece,' and that although it is true, as appears from the evidence, that they are more popularly known as 'crape,' as another kind of silk is known as 'taffeta,' and another kind as 'gros de nap,' and another kind as 'Canton crape,' and so on through the list, yet that these are subordinate terms which have grown into use, for the reason that persons wishing to get a specific kind of silk employ the term which is best suited to indicate the specific kind of silk goods which they want, and hence have passed into popular use, which is not to be made a test of the interpretation of the statute."

Judge Woodruff then briefly adverted again to the claim of the importers:

"On the other hand, the plaintiffs insist that crapes are not known in trade and commerce at all as 'silks,' and the counsel for the plaintiffs are perfectly correct when they insist that the question to be determined here does not depend on the mere fact that crapes are made of silk, or that they are made chiefly of silk combined with gums, which the witnesses say are used for stiffening these and other silks; that if the article is not known in trade and commerce under the designation of silks, then it is quite immaterial for the purposes of the claim of the plaintiffs here whether they are made of silk or not. The amount of duty is to be determined by the commercial designation."

He then instructed the jury:

"I say on that subject that the claim of the plaintiffs is entirely correct, nor is it in conflict with the claim which I have stated on the part of the defendant. Both come to the question whether these goods are known in trade and commerce, and especially among those who import and deal in them, as "silks" or not. That presents precisely the question of fact; it brings this controversy down to a very narrow point, which you are to pass upon in view of the evidence, which I shall not recapitulate.

* * * * * * * *

"It is not for me to settle the question of fact in dispute between witnesses, or between parties, or to indicate to you any conclusion which you should draw from the evidence. It is purely a question for you. If the goods in question are not in commercial language known as silks, the plaintiff is entitled to recover; but if they are, the defendant is entitled to your verdict."

And the jury found that they were not known in trade as "silks in the piece," despite the argument and return of the appraiser, for the simple reason that the jury had no facts on which to support that argument and return.

VII.

And here I may as well allude to the extraordinary pretensions of the appraiser in his argument, that the importers are bound by designations which he claims, without identifying the articles, to have seen on re-appraisement papers. It is enough to say in reply, that is of no consequence, even if true. In Lattimer's case, the "crapes" were called "silks" on the very entry in controversy, just as in re-appraisement papers, relating only to values, the ribbons may have been called what the custom-house or the clerk of the appraisement saw fit to insert. And the whole idea of binding the importers by this designation becomes unspeakably absurd, when it is remembered that for six years they have steadily protested in writing against it on each entry. The appraiser attempted this in Lattimer's case, and I will let the judge describe in his own language what happened:

"It is claimed by the defendant that before the particular act of 1864 was enacted, these goods were known and imported as 'silks,' and duty paid on them as 'silks,' and that these plaintiffs concurred in the construction which was given to the previous law, and without objection paid the duty on them as silks. You have heard the comments of counsel upon both sides in regard to that subject. The plaintiffs are not concluded by it. If they were under a mistake, it could be corrected. It is claimed on the part of the defendants that the plaintiffs are concluded, and it is insisted on the part of the plaintiffs they are not.

"The evidence was relied upon as importing to your comprehension and your judgment that 'crapes' were 'silks,' and that they were so understood, and that the plaintiffs paid duty thereon accordingly, and that it was only when the subsequent act was passed, changing the phraseology of the statute and raising a question of a somewhat different character in relation to the amount of duty, that the suggestion has arisen which has led to the present claim."

If the appraiser heard or read the charge of Judge Woodruff, why does he introduce again, in respect to ribbons, this rejected matter of mere prejudice? District Attorney Davis offered on the trial the opinion of the appraiser as to the trade-name of crapes, but Judge Woodruff refused it to the jury. These are the words of the reporter:

"Defendant's counsel offers in evidence the opinion of the board of appraisers of the New York custom-house, dated September 15, 1864.

"(Objected to.) Offered, not as deciding the law, but as a fact, that the official board of appraisers, in 1864, passing on this question, whether silks in the piece included crape, decided that it did.

"Excluded; defendant excepts."

And yet, after such a rebuke from the court, the appraiser, for a second time, now offers his own views, instead of the opinions of other persons who are experts, to settle trade designations.

VIII.

Equally uncalled for and irrelevant is the argument set up by the appraiser based on assumed designations of the ribbons in the invoices made in France or Switzerland. I freely concede that the word "taffetas," as used in the United States and in England in reference to ribbons, only applies to a ribbon made wholly of silk; but I deny that the word is ever applied, either in the United States or Great Britain, or Switzerland, or France, to cord-edge, or boyaux ribbons. Taffeta ribbons are as different and distinct in character from the ribbons in controversy as they are from hat-bands, or galloons, or as a coat is from a pair of trousers, both of the latter being generally known to the tariff as "wearing apparel." The appraiser himself admits that cotton-edge ribbons are not known as "taffetas," for he says they are described in the invoices as "taffetas à lisières rondes," or as "taffetas à boyaux."

In other words, they were not "taffetas" or silk ribbons, but something else, by his own admission. The case of Lenning vs. Maxwell (3 Blatch., C. C. Reports, p. 125,) heretofore cited, is controlling authority that foreign words used in foreign invoices are inconsequential to determine trade-names in this country. Does the appraiser contend that the ribbons in controversy are ever known in trade in our own markets by the French phrases he employs? In this case of Lenning, the invoice described the merchandise under various form of laine, (wool,) and the appraiser therefore returned it as "prepared or manufactured wool." But the court and jury decided that the article was nevertheless known in this market as "shoddy."

IX.

The assertion of the appraiser "that the ribbons in question are described in the consul's certificates as 'silk ribbons'" is immaterial, even if true, provided the trade-names in American markets are different. In the first place, the certificate of the consul is not the declaration of the person making the invoice, and the appraiser does not pretend that any invoice called the ribbons by the name of "silk ribbons." There is nothing, either in the law or in consular regulations, which requires a consul to make a certificate respecting trade-names. His only business is to authenticate the declaration of the owner or shipper that the invoice is in all respects true. But if, for statistical or any other purpose, consuls give designations in their certificates, those designations ought necessarily to correspond with the designations adopted by the Treasury Department and the custom-house, for otherwise the Statistical Bureau would have no means of identifying the articles to which the certificate related. It is admitted that the custom-house has classified cotton-edged ribbons as "silk ribbons;" but against the correctness of this designation the importers have, almost ever since the act of 1864, persistently protested. But the consuls, as will be seen by examination of invoices in the custom-house, are not either correct or uniform in their description of ribbons. An examination of the invoices of the principal ribbon-importer will show that the consuls have called "silk and cotton ribbons," as reported by the appraiser, "all-silk ribbons;" "silk ribbons;" "ribbons;" "silk ribbons some mixed with cotton;" "silks" and "velvet ribbons."

The following importations are taken at random:

E. C. Cowdin & Co., by Scotia, November, 1870; invoiced "corded-edged ribbons;" consul's certificate, "silks;" appraiser's report, "silk ribbons."

India in March, 1871; invoiced "taffetas faconné tramè coton," "reps chaine coton;" consul's certificate, "silk ribbons;" appraiser's report, "silk and cotton ribbons S. C. V."

Hammonia in February, 1870; invoiced "reps romains melé coton," "ecossais sergsé tr., chappe;" consul's certificate, "silk ribbons;" appraiser's report, "silk and cotton ribbons S. C. V."

Donan in March, 1871; invoiced "taffetas faconné soie et coton;" consul's certificate, "ribbons;" appraiser's report, "silk and cotton ribbons S. C. V."

Henry Barbey & Co., Fenella in March, 1871; invoiced "taff noir," "taffs coton et soie," "taffs coul fins;" consul's certificate, "velvet ribbons;" appraiser's report, "silk ribbons."

Queen in May, 1871; invoiced "taffs unis soie et coton;" consul's certificate, "silk ribbons;" appraiser's report, "silk and cotton ribbons S. C. V."

Abyssinia in February, 1872; invoiced "taffs, soie and coton;" consul's certificate, "silk ribbons S. C V."

Examples could be continued almost indefinitely.

The appraiser is, in his argument, painfully inexact in respect to other facts he asserts therein, and which ought to be matters of record in his department. For example, he declares:

"That the ribbons in question have always been classified in this Department as silk ribbons, and subject to a duty of 60 per cent., although for a period of six years subsequent to the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, and prior to the Department's decision of December 19, 1870, certain kinds of silk ribbons, containing a large proportion of cotton, were classified in this Department as 'silk and cotton ribbons,' subject to a duty of only 50 per cent. ad valorem; and yet it does not appear that it was generally claimed, if claimed at all, during such period, that the ribbons in question were not properly classified as silk ribbons."

What can be the appraiser's idea of the proper method of classifying ribbons?

He says that certain kinds were "silk ribbons." If really such, they were dutiable at 60 per cent. But "containing a large proportion of cotton" he classified them as "silk and cotton ribbons subject to a duty of only 50 per cent." If they were "silk ribbons," chargeable with 60 per cent., why did he classify them at 50 per cent? Has the appraiser's department had, under the act of 1864, any uniform rule in respect to classifying ribbons of silk and cotton, to which it has adhered, and which it applies to the samples in controversy?

If he had not access to documents to bear out this assertion as to what importers have claimed, he should not have ventured it, and if he had access to official documents he would have found that, since the early part of the year 1867, and, indeed, before that time, the importers have persistently protested, on each entry, both to the collector and to the Secretary of the Treasury, that the custom-house term of "silk ribbons" did not apply to the fabrics now in dispute. I have now before me a copy of an appeal to the Secretary of the Treasury, dated March 27, 1867, protesting that these ribbons are "cotton cord-edge ribbons," and not "silk ribbons." More than this. If the appraiser had consulted with care the records of his own office he would have found that Appraiser Palmer, under date of November 14, 1870, reported to Collector Murphy these words:

"It has been the practice of this Department, however, for a long period to classify for duty at 60 per cent. ad valorem, under the clause of law in question, only pure silk ribbons, or those commercially known as such, in the belief that such classification was in accord and with the intent, if not the strict language, of the law."

By that rule, and that fact, the importers are perfectly content to stand, and to rest the question now in controversy, and it is to that rule the Department of Justice says the customs officers should return.

SIDNEY WEBSTER,
For the Importers.

NEW YORK, March 4, 1873.

K.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, April 5, 1873.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 1st instant, requesting instructions relative to the rate of duty to be exacted under the Department's ruling of the 18th of December last, on a class of ribbons composed in part of cotton and in part of silk, and claimed by the importers to be known to the trade as cotton-edge or Boyeaux ribbons, and cord-edge or round-edge ribbons.

I have carefully examined the evidence submitted on behalf of the importers and forwarded by you, to prove their claim, which comprises the certificates of nearly one hundred persons and firms in the dry goods business, both importers and jobbers at New York, Boston, and other large cities, all of which are to the effect that these goods are not known, bought, or sold in the trade as silk ribbons, but by other designation, and it seems thereby to be well established that dealers are fully aware of the fact that these goods are composed of silk and cotton when making purchases or sales thereof under such designations.

It is presumed from the foregoing that this class of ribbons was known in the trade as aforesaid at the time the act of June 30, 1864, was passed; but upon this point no evidence is afforded, and no one has affirmed to my knowledge that any change in their commercial designation has occurred since that time.

In rebuttal of this testimony on the part of the importers, no evidence whatever is offered, beyond the statement of the appraiser that "so far as these ribbons have had or can have any commercial designation, based on the materials of which they are composed, that commercial designation must be silk ribbons."

Upon this point, therefore, the testimony offered by the importers must be accepted as conclusive.

The instructions of the Department of the 18th of December last were that all the ribbons which at the time of the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, or at the date of importation, were known as silk ribbons, and bought and sold as such in the trade, will be classified as silk ribbons, and subjected to a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem. To the same effect were the rulings of the Department of April 21, 1870, on the appeal (No. 8,021 a.) of Henry Barbey & Co., of New York, where the decision of the collector, charging 60 per cent. duty on certain Faille ribbons, was affirmed, upon the ground that the goods were "universally known to the trade as silk ribbons, and were bought and sold as a pure silk article of a superior quality," the fact that they contained a modicum of cotton being generally unknown.

Upon the foregoing state of facts, the Department holds that the class of ribbons forming the subject of your letter should be classified, not as silk ribbons, but as manufactures of which silk is the component of chief value not otherwise provided for, and be subjected to duty at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem, under the last clause of section 8 of the act of June 30, 1864.

You will therefore be governed accordingly.

The invoice of Messrs. E. C. Cowdin & Co., submitted by you, is herewith returned.

Very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON, Secretary.

L.

Action against the collector of the port of New York.

Before Judge SMALLEY.

CHAPON vs. SMYTHE.

This was a suit which has been more than a week on trial, to recover money alleged to have been wrongfully exacted by the defendant, while collector of this port, on certain importations of velvet ribbons manufactured in St. Etienne, France, by Messrs. Giron Freres, and entered at the custom-house by the plaintiff, in 1867, under the tariff act of June 30, 1864. It was admitted by both parties that the ribbons were dutiable under the eighth section of that law, but there was dispute as to the particular clause. The importer claimed, since the ribbons in question were not pure silk-velvet ribbons, but were of silk and cotton, with the value of the latter component material almost as much as the former, that they ought to be charged with a duty of 50 per cent. under the clause of the eighth section, as "manufactures of which silk is the component material of chief value not otherwise provided for." The defendant, on the other hand, said the ribbons in controvery were provided for and enumerated in a preceding clause of the section, which reads: "On all dress and piece silks, ribbons, silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, 60 per cent. ad valorem." The tariff act of 1864 being now in force, the final decision of this question will govern the rate to be paid on future importations under this law of silk and cotton velvet ribbons. The case involved questions of statute interpretation and of trade names. The former is disposed of in the opinion of Judge Smalley, which we give below. His ruling left it to the jury to say on the evidence by what appellation the fabric was known in the wholesale trade of the markets of this country. Twenty or thirty representatives of the largest ribbon and trimming houses were called as witnesses, as well as a French manufacturer of velvet ribbons and a German manufacturer of velvets in the piece. It was in evidence that prior to 1855 or 1857 all velvet ribbons were wholly of silk, but about those dates another quality was made with the back all cotton and only the plush of silk, and the ribbons in dispute were of the latter class, which, for most purposes, have superseded the former in this market. Mr. Morrison, a dealer in Broadway, testified, however, that his house sold more of the silk-back than of the cotton-back, but that not more than five or six houses in the city sold the former; that the latter was the ribbon of the million, and that if a customer came to his store and asked for a velvet ribbon, it would depend much on the appearance of the customer whether cotton-back or silk-back would be shown. On the other hand there were retailers and some jobbers who said they sold the cotton-back velvet ribbon as a silk-velvet ribbon, and never kept the pure silk-back article. The preponderance of all the testimony was that the pure silk article was known in trade as "all-silk velvet ribbon," and the other as "velvet ribbon," understood to be largely cotton. Mr. Baure, manufacturer of velvet ribbons at St. Etienne, France, testified that the chain and filling of the ribbons in dispute were entirely cotton, except one thread in three of the chain, which was of silk, and made the nap or plush; that when the velvet ribbon was woven both faces were cotton, but the ribbon was split by a razor in the loom, which made the velvety surface. Mr. Peltzer, a maker of silk velvet, testified that velvets were woven differently from ribbons since there was no split, but the silk threads were run over wires with hooked knives, which, when drawn out, cut the silk and made the plush.

The judge instructed the jury as follows:

This is an action of assumpsit for duties alleged to have been illegally exacted by the defendant as collector of this port on various importations of ribbons made by the plaintiff. The controversy is whether these goods should have paid a duty of 60 per centum or 50 per centum ad valorem. The defendant claims that the law imposed the duty of 60 per centum, which he levied The plaintiff claims that the law imposed only 50 per centum. The most important question in the case is one purely of law. There is only one question of fact for the jury to pass upon. It is claimed by the defendant that the word "ribbons," as used in the eighth section of the tariff act of June 30, 1864, means all ribbons, no matter of what material manufactured, whether of silk, or of silk and cotton, or entirely of cotton. The word "ribbon" was first introduced into tariff acts in March, 1861. Ribbons were then enumerated among silk goods, and as "silk ribbons." The same expression, with the same context, was renewed in the subsequent act of August 5, 1861. In 1864 Congress adopted another classification for ribbons. In this law fabrics made of different materials were placed in different sections, and consequently you will find in the sixth section of the act of 1864, which is called a cotton section, an enumeration of varieties of manufactures of cotton, the general duty imposed thereon being 35 per centum ad valorem. The seventh section of the same act provides for linen goods. The eighth section, which relates to the question before us, is a silk section. It is conceded in this case by both side that there are three kinds of ribbons made of one or more of three different materials. There are a great many fancy names given to such ribbons, but these are of no consequence here. There are ribbons made entirely of silk, others made of silk and cotton, and others entirely of cotton. Under which of these do the goods in quest on fall? If the language of the statute is clear and unambiguous, it must unquestionably govern. If, however, the language in which the intention of Congress is expressed is capable of two constructions, you must look at the surroundings. Previous legislation must be taken into consideration, together with that of the same session of Congress in relation to other articles. The clause of the eighth section of the act of 1864, now under consideration, reads thus: "On all dress and piece silks, ribbons and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, 60 per centum ad valorem." It is alleged on the part of the defendant that the word "ribbons," as here used, means every description of ribbons. It must be borne in mind that this is a silk section, in which silk is the material and the only material specifically named. The defendant, however, contends that the word "ribbons" includes every description of ribbons, no matter of what material made, and that cotton ribbons would be included at 60 per centum ad valorem. But can it be supposed that Congress intended to make cotton ribbons pay more than any other description of cotton goods? Other cotton fabrics pay 35 per centum. The court will not give to the clause such an interpretation unless the language is clear and explicit. Is the language thus clear and explicit, or is it fairly capable of two constructions? My own conviction is that the clause should be read as though the word "silk" were inserted before the word "ribbons," as it is before velvets. I am by no means clear that this is not the only grammatical construction. But if it be not, it is fairly susceptible of this construction, if we consider the evident purpose of Congress to make cotton goods pay one rate of duty, linen goods another rate, and silk goods another and still higher rate. It may be said that the words "or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value," includes "velvets" of silk and cotton. That is true, but the inclusion is by express terms; if, therefore, Congress intended to include ribbons "of which silk is the component material of chief value," as well as velvets, the words "or ribbons" would have been inserted after the word "velvets" The omission to do so, I think, indicates that Congress did not intend to include ribbons as "velvets of which silk is the component of chief value." I decide, therefore, for the purpose of this trial, that it was the intention of Congress that only silk ribbons should pay a duty of sixty per centum, and that silk and cotton ribbons, with silk of chief value, should only pay a duty of fifty per centum, and that cotton ribbons should only pay a duty of thirty-five per centum, Such a construction harmonizes all the sections of the act of 1864, which the construction contended for by the defendant would not, because if the word "ribbons" includes every description of ribbons, it would necessarily embrace cotton ribbons. There has been a good deal of evidence offered as to what article is known or called a ribbon. But it is agreed on both sides that the fabrics in controversy were known to trade and commerce as ribbons, and therefore the word must apply to them. It is urged that the construction which I have announced is in conflict with the opinion of the learned judge who decided the case of Lane vs. Russell, in the first circuit. Perhaps it does, but I think not necessarily so. In that case there was an "agreed statement of facts," and it does not appear that anything was stated about cotton ribbons. It does not appear that the existence of such an article in trade and commerce was made known to the court. No reference was made either in the "agreed statement" or in the opinion itself. If it had appeared to the learned judge that there were cotton ribbons as well as silk ribbons, and silk and cotton ribbons, I am inclined to think he would have come to a different conclusion. But whether he would or not, his decision is not necessarily binding upon this court. This court decides the law as it understands it, as well as the circuit court of Massachusetts. If either is wrong, there is a higher tribunal—a common superior—to correct either that court or this. I am more confirmed, however, in my conclusion for another reason. The subject has attracted the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington. He has examined it and has called upon his law advisers for their opinion. The Solicitor of the Treasury is the special law adviser of the Treasury Department, and one of the highest law officers of Government, standing next to the Attorney-General. He appears to have come to the same conclusion as the one I now announce, to wit, that this section should be read as though the word "silk" were inserted before the word "ribbons." Not satisfied, however, with this opinion of the Solicitor, the Secretary applied to the Attorney-General, the highest legal officer of the Government, who is a very able lawyer, formerly on the bench. He gave the subject careful examination in an elaborate opinion which was well considered. He came to the same conclusion that this court now does, to wit, that the clause should be read as if the word "silk" were written before the word "ribbons." In respect to every description of ribbons but velvet ribbons, duties are now levied, as I understand, in compliance with the construction thus given to this statute by the Attorney-General. Therefore the only question for the jury is this: How were these ribbons known in commerce in 1864, and when they were imported, which was in 1867? Were they known in the trade as silk goods, or as silk and cotton goods? If they were known in the trade as silk ribbons, although they were not in point of fact made wholly of silk, they were liable to a duty of sixty per centum. It is conceded that these ribbons are not manufactured entirely of silk, but are made of silk and cotton, with silk chief value. The evidence being that the ribbons were manufactured of silk and cotton, it is for the defendant to show to the satisfaction of the jury that they were known, and bought and sold in trade in 1864, and at the date of importation as silk ribbons If you find that they were so known, and bought and sold at these dates, you will find a verdict for the defendant. If, on the contrary, the jury find that upon the evidence the ribbons in controversy were not known in trade and commerce as ribbons made entirely of silk, you will find a verdict for the plaintiff. These are the general propositions of law which will be given to the jury for their guidance, and I announce them in advance of the argument of the counsel on both sides, in order that they may know to what questions of fact the testimony is to be applied, and what facts the jury will be directed to pass upon.

Upon the foregoing instructions by the court upon matters of law, the cause was elaborately presented to the jury, and on re-assembling of the court, on Friday morning, the judge submitted the cause to the jury upon a substantial repetition of the propositions of law previously laid down, with the additional suggestions that, while the jury must take the law from the court, they were responsible for a proper application of the facts to the law; that they were to look to wholesale rather than retail dealers for an interpretation of the terms used in tariff acts; and that since both sides conceded the fabrics were ribbons, the sole question for them was whether the articles in controversy were known and bought and sold in trade at the time of the enactment of the law of 1864, and at the time of the importation of the merchandise in controversy in 1867, as silk ribbons. The jury retired, and after some two hours of deliberation returned to ask the court for specific instructions upon the following question submitted in writing: "Are the jury to judge of the phrase 'known to the trade' as referring to the trade's knowledge of the materials of which they are known to be composed or as a simple name to distinguish them from other goods?" To this the court replied that if the merchandise was known to the trade as silk goods, they would find a verdict for the defendant; but if it was known to the trade as silk and cotton goods, they would find a verdict for the plaintiff. The jury having again retired for deliberation, returned with a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $8,715.44.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., May 29, 1873.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, transmitting a communication from Messrs. Webster and Craig, attorneys for the plaintiff in the suit of Chapon vs. Smythe, recently tried in New York, requesting that the Government concur in the decision in said case in favor of the plaintiff, and asking an expression of my views as to whether the Government should still further prosecute the suit, or concur in the decision of the court.

I have carefully reviewed all the papers touching the controversy involved in the suit referred to, in all the aspects in which it has been presented for consideration.

In view of the fullness with which I have before expressed my views upon the substantial question involved in the issue now presented, I deem it entirely unnecessary to enter upon any extended discussion of the question at the present time.

The views hitherto expressed by me having met with the favor, first of the Attorney-General, and afterward of the court in which the case was tried, and the facts having been found by the jury in favor of the plaintiff, I recommend that the Department concur in the decision as requested.

The communication referred to and the other inclosures of your letter are herewith returned,

I am very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

N.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, June 13, 1873.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, inclosing certain papers, among which is a copy of the opinion of the circuit court for the southern district of New York in the case of Chapon vs. Smythe, (Judge Smalley presiding,) in which it is held that, under the eighth section of the tariff act of 1864, (13 United States Stat., 210,) silk and cotton velvet ribbons are subject to a duty of 50, and not 60, per cent. ad valorem.

Accompanying this opinion is a letter of the United States attorney, suggesting the propriety of taking the question to the Supreme Court of the United States, and also a letter of the Solicitor of the Treasury advising otherwise; and I am asked for my opinion whether or not the Treasury Department should acquiesce in the said decision.

I had the honor, under date of November, 1872, to advise you that, in my judgment, ribbons manufactured of silk and cotton are not subject to the duty of 60 per cent., and as I find no reason for changing my views as therein expressed, the only question remaining is as to whether or not ribbons made of silk and cotton are to pay a duty of 50 per cent., and ribbons made in the same way, but commercially designated as velvet ribbons, are to pay the duty of 60 per cent.

The following is all of section 8 upon which the question arises:

"On spun silk for filling in skeins or cops, 25 per cent. ad valorem. On silk in the gum not more advanced than singles, tram and thrown or organzine, 35 per cent. ad valorem. On floss silks, 35 per cent. ad valorem. On sewing silk in the gum or purified, 40 per cent. ad valorem. On all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, 60 per cent. ad valorem. On silk vestings, pongees, shawls, scarfs, mantillas, pelerines handkerchiefs, veils, laces, shirts, drawers, bonnets, hats, caps, turbans, chemisettes, hose, mitts, aprons, stockings, gloves, suspenders, watch-chains, webbing, braids, fringes, galloons, tassels, cords, and trimmings, 60 per cent. ad valorem.

"On all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for, 50 per cent. ad valorem."

Judge Smalley says, in his opinion, that it is agreed on both sides that the fabrics in controversy were known to trade and commerce as ribbons, and, therefore, the word must apply to them. Consequently, in discussing the application of the law to the case, it must be assumed as a fact that the velvet ribbons in question are to be subject to a duty of 60 per cent. if at all, under the description of ribbons, and not under the clause of the statute relative to velvets.

Manifestly the word "ribbons" in the statute means what is commonly known to trade and commerce as silk ribbons exclusively, or it means all kinds of ribbons without reference to the materials of which they are made, their value, or classification, inside of the statutory and general designation. To say that the word "ribbons" includes fabrics of that description made of silk and cotton, and does not include fabrics of the same description and made of the same materials, because one is called velvet and the other is not, is about as arbitrary as to say that ribbons of one color and not of another are included by the statute.

I can hardly see room to doubt that Congress intended, by using the word "ribbons" in the connection where it occurs, to levy a duty of 60 per cent. only upon silk ribbons, or, to be more precise, such ribbons, without respect to their component materials, as are known to trade and commerce as silk ribbons.

Section 6 of the act above cited relates to cotton and its manufactures; section 7, to flax and its manufactures; and section 8, to silk and its manufactures. And as the different sections impose widely different duties, it is a presumption that nothing but express words can overcome, that a cotton fabric is not to be taxed under the silk section, or a silk fabric under the cotton section. Express provision is made in section 8 that the same duty shall be levied upon silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component material of chief value, as upon purely silk goods; and as it is conceded on all hands that velvets as here used do not include velvet ribbons, the implication is very strong that such ribbons are not to be taxed as silk fabrics, according to the well-known maxim, Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. Naturally, and by the ordinary rule of construing language, the paragraph under consideration ought to be read with the word "silk" understood before the word "ribbons"; and if the rule, that the meaning of a word may be ascertained by reference to the meaning of the words associated with it, does not apply here, it would seem to be of little force or value.

Analogous to this, as it seems to me, is the case of Bend vs. Hoyt, 13 Peters, 263, in which the question arose as to whether or not hosiery, in the second section of the tariff act of 1833, included silk hosiery, and the court say:

"Now, looking to the terms of this clause, and the connection in which hosiery stands with the other enumerated articles, the natural construction of it would certainly be that it was restricted to hosiery ejusdem generis; that is to say, hosiery of wool, or of which wool was a component part. It stands in connection with mitts, gloves, binding, blankets, and carpeting, and the exceptions carved out of it are all articles composed of wool, viz, certain kinds of carpetings, and blankets. It is followed by 'flannels, bockings, and baizes, coach-laces, and merino shawls,' and then come the sweeping words, 'all other manufactures of wool, or of which wool is a component part,' which certainly seem to presuppose that all the preceding enumerated articles were of a kindred nature and fabric."

Whether the term "velvets" in the statute includes velvet ribbons, is, perhaps, a question, but it is altogether a question of fact; and as it was admitted by the United States on the trial of said cause, what, I suppose, cannot be truthfully denied, that the fabrics in question were ribbons, and not velvets, within the purview of the statute, and the jury so found the fact, there is of course no ground for further litigation upon that point.

I do not discover any probability that the Supreme Court would disturb the decision in the case referred to, and therefore I concur with the Solicitor of the Treasury in recommending an acquiescence in it by your Department.

Very respectfully,

GEO. H. WILLIAMS,
Attorney-General.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

O.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., June 16, 1873.

SIR: Respectfully referring to previous correspondence between this Department and your office, relative to the proper rate of duty on silk and cotton velvet ribbons, I have to say, that in the case of Chapon versus Smythe, involving this question, which was recently tried in the United States circuit court, at New York, before Judge Smalley, the rulings of the court, and the verdict of the jury, were in favor of charging 50 per cent. duty on such goods, instead of 60 per cent., as heretofore charged by direction of the Department.

The rulings and verdict in this case were, therefore, antagonistic to the rulings of Judge Clifford in the case of Lane versus Russell, tried at Boston, in 1870, and in view thereof the papers in the case of Chapon versus Smythe, with a copy of the opinion of Judge Clifford, were referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury, and subsequently to the Attorney-General, for their opinion as to whether the Department should acquiesce in the results of the trial in the Chapon case. Both of said officers have given an opinion that the rules of law laid down by the court in this case are correct, and accordingly advise an acquiescence therein. I inclose herewith a copy of the letter of the Attorney-General in the case, dated the 13th instant, and, as the views therein expressed sustain the views previously expressed by the Department in the cord-edge ribbon case, I have to direct that from and after the receipt hereof, you conform your practice thereto, by charging 50 per cent. duty on all silk and cotton ribbons not commercially known as silk ribbons, whether velvet or otherwise.

The necessary certified statements for refund of duties exacted in excess on this class of goods will be made up and forwarded by you to the Department, in accordance with the instructions heretofore prescribed, where the requirements of law have been duly complied with, upon a settlement of the suits in the manner prescribed by instructions of the 15th ultimo.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,
New York.

EXHIBIT No. 2.—WOOL.

REFUND OF 10 PER CENT. DISCRIMINATING DUTIES ON WOOL PRODUCED EAST OF THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE, AND IMPORTED INTO THE UNITED STATES FROM PLACES WEST THEREOF.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

The tariff act, passed March 2, 1867, imposed certain rates of duty on imported wools, which, by the 1st section thereof, were to be in lieu of duties theretofore imposed.

In 1871, the Washington mills imported into the port of Boston, from Liverpool, certain cargoes of Australian wool, upon which, in addition to the duties prescribed by the act of March 2, 1867, 10 per cent. additional duty was exacted under the 6th section of the act of March 3, 1865. The duties in question were paid under protest, and on appeal to this Department, the action of the collector was sustained.

I annex a copy of a decision in an analogous case, dated May 3, 1871, marked A.

This ruling was in accordance with the previous action of the Department in like cases, and was based upon the ground that the 10 per cent. additional duty imposed by said act of March 3, 1865, was applicable to all goods, wares, and merchandise produced and imported under the circumstances therein mentioned, and that the act of March 2, 1867, had not the effect to exempt any merchandise from the operations of this statute. This appeal was followed by a considerable number of others of a similar character, upon which similar action was taken by the Department.

At a term of the circuit court of the United States for the district of Massachusetts, held last year in Boston, the case of the Washington Mills vs. Thomas Russell, collector, which involved the legality of exacting this 10 per cent. discriminating duty on wool, was brought on for argument before Judge Shepley, on an agreed statement of facts. Copy annexed, marked B.

On August 1, 1873, the court delivered an opinion (copy marked C,) in favor of the plaintiffs.

Application was thereupon made for an acquiescence in this ruling of the court and for a refund of the 10 per cent. duty so paid. Copy marked D.

The district attorney favored an appeal to the Supreme Court, as per copy of letter marked E, while the Solicitor of the Treasury was of opinion that the rule of law laid down in the decision of Judge Shepley was correct, and that his decision should be acquiesced in. Copy opinion, marked F. In view of the ruling of my predecessor, which held that the act placing tea and coffee on the free list, passed May 1, 1873, also relieved these articles from payment of discriminating duty under the 6th section of the act of March 3, 1865, and agreeing in opinion with the Solicitor of the Treasury that the decision of Judge Shepley was correct in point of law, I decided to acquiesce therein, and accordly issued instructions to that effect, as per copies annexed, marked G and H.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
May 3, 1871.

THOMAS RUSSELL, Esq.,
Collector of Customs, Boston, Mass.:

SIR: Messrs. Bailey, Jenkins, and Garrison have appealed (512 and 513,) from your decision assessing an additional duty of 10 per centum ad valorem on certain wool imported by them from Liverpool, per Tripoli, March 30, and Samaria, March 24, 1871.

It appears from your report that the wool in question is the product of New Zealand and Australia, and that you therefore assessed the said additional duty thereon, under the 5th section of the act of March 3, 1865, which provides for an additional duty of 10 per centum ad valorem on merchandise of the growth or produce of countries east of the Cape of Good Hope, when imported from places west of said Cape, and the frequent decisions of the Department on the question.

Your decision, therefore, is hereby affirmed.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary.

Circuit court of the United States, Massachusetts district.

WASHINGTON MILLS
vs.
THOMAS RUSSELL.

Agreed statement of facts.

The plaintiff company imported into the port of Boston, from Liverpool, in the dominion of Great Britain, certain wool, i. e., 116 bales ex steamship Batavia, January 27, 1871; twenty-three bales ex steamship Parthia, February 27, 1871; fifty-seven bales ex steamship Batavia, March 13, 1871; ninety-three bales ex steamship Samaria, March 22, 1871; sixty-eight bales ex steamship Tripoli, March 30, 1871.

This wool was produced in Australia, in the dominion of Great Britain. All of these several importations were invoiced, and were of value less than thirty-two cents per pound at the last port whence exported to the United States.

The collector exacted upon all this wool duty as follows: ten cents per pound and eleven per cent. ad valorem, and an additional duty of ten per cent. ad valorem, on the ground that it was "of the growth or produce of countries east of the Cape of Good Hope."

These importations were made under the act of March 2, 1867, chap. 197, 14 Stat., 559. Plaintiff duly protested against the payment of this additional duty. A copy of protest upon importation of twenty-three bales by Parthia, February 27, 1871, is herewith attached, and for the purposes of this suit shall be considered as covering all importations, each and all protests being on the same question and alike, with the exception of being made to conform to the facts of the respective importations, and may be read by either party at the hearing. Plaintiff also duly appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who sustained the collector.

In conformity with the statutes, and in due time, this action was brought to recover these additional duties so paid. If the court shall be of opinion that said duties were illegally exacted, then judgment shall be rendered for plaintiff for amount of $4,170.40 paid, with interest, in gold, and costs; otherwise, judgment for defendant, with costs.

Attorney for Plaintiff.

vs.

SHEPLEY, J.:

The Washington Mills imported into Boston, from Liverpool, in the dominion of Great Britain, one hundred and sixteen bales wool from steamship Batavia, January 27, 1871; twenty-three bales from steamship Parthia, February 27, 1781; fifty-seven bales from steamship Batavia, March 13, 1871; sixty-eight bales from steamship Tripoli, March 30, 1871. The wool was produced in Australia, in the Kingdom of Great Britain. The wool was invoiced and was of less value than thirty-two cents per pound at the last port whence exported to the United States.

The collector exacted upon all this wool as duty ten cents per pound and eleven per cent. ad valorem, and an additional duty of ten per cent. ad valorem on the ground that it was "of the growth or produce of countries east of the Cape of Good Hope."

Plaintiff protested against the payment of this additional duty, and also appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury, who sustained the collector. This action was seasonably brought in conformity with law to recover the additional duties thus paid.

The sixth section of the act of March 3, 1865, (13 Statutes at Large, 493,) provides "that there shall hereafter be collected and paid on all goods, wares, and merchandise of the growth or produce of countries east of the Cape of Good Hope, (except raw cotton and new silk as reeled from the cocoon, or not further advanced than tram, thrown, or gauzine,) when imported from places west of the Cape of Good Hope, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed on any such article when imported directly from the place or places of their growth or production." A similar provision existed in the act of 1864, section 18, (13 Statutes at Large, 216,) with the distinction that raw cotton only was excepted.

Prior to the act of March 2, 1867, (14 Statutes, 559,) the duties on wool had been assessed on its value at the last port from whence exported to the United States, and on wool above a certain value an ad valorem duty was assessed in addition to the specific duty. Wool was then also subject to the additional duty of ten per centum ad valorem when it was the produce of countries east of the Cape of Good Hope and imported from places west of the Cape of Good Hope.

The act of 1867 greatly increased the duties on wool. It did not do this by imposing additional duties by name, which should have the quality of being added to duties provided for by former acts, and to be ascertained in former modes, but it repealed all prior modes of ascertainment, and substituted an entirely new mode of classification of the wool and ascertainment of the duty. It divided all wools, hair of the alpaca goat and other like animals, for the purpose of fixing the duties to be charged thereon into three classes: First. Clothing-wool. Second. Combing-wools. Third. Carpet-wool, and other similar wools. This classification was made on the basis of the breed of the sheep as known to wool-growers and manufacturers, as will be seen by the statute description of class one, under which the wool in question is classed. Clothing-wools, that is to say merino, mestiga, metz or metis wools, or other wools of merino blood immediate or remote; down clothing-wools, and wools of like character with any of the preceding, including such as have been heretofore usually imported into the United States from Buenos Ayres, New Zealand, Australia, Cape of Good Hope, Russia, Great Britain, Canada, and elsewhere, and also including all wools not hereinafter described or designated classes two or three.

The first section of the act of 1867 provides "that from and after the passage of this act, in lieu of the duties now imposed by law on the articles mentioned and embraced in this section, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all unmanufactured wool, hair of the alpaca-goat, and other like animals imported from foreign countries, the duties hereinafter provided."

The expression "in lieu of the present duties," or "in lieu of the duties now imposed by law," is an expression frequently used in revenue statutes when the intention of Congress is to repeal the duties previously in force, and to substitute new rates of duties. No language could more clearly express the intent of Congress, and these terms have come to be considered the peculiarly apt words of revenue repeal.

In the case of Gossler vs. The collector of Boston, May term, 1867, before Justice Clifford and Judge Lowell, the court say, in allusion to the use of the same terms in a revenue statute, "Terms more explicit and comprehensive could not be employed, and the provision neither contains any exception, nor admits of any, without the necessity of resorting to positive legislation." This is not a case where the rules respecting repeals of a statute by implication are applicable or can be invoked to aid in the interpretation of the statute. The repeal of the former act is not by implication, but by express terms of repeal. Had the act of March 2, 1867, simply imposed an additional rate of duty, or provided a new mode of ascertainment of value without any express words of repeal, the ten per cent. discriminating duty provided for by the act of 1865 being a part of the general revenue system, and not positively repugnant to the new enactment, would, undoubtedly, have continued in force as applicable to wool imported under the conditions described in the sixth section of that act. But when the act of 1867 provided a new tariff of duties on wool "imported from foreign countries, in lieu of the duties now (before that time) imposed by law," it expressly repealed the discriminating as well as the other duties then imposed.

A similar policy in relation to wool is continued in force by the third section of the act of 1872, (Statutes at Large, vol. 17, p. 232,) which re-enacting the ten per cent. discriminating duty on goods produced east of the cape, when imported from places west of it expressly excepts wool from its operation.

In the opinion of the court the discriminating duties were illegally exacted. Judgment is to be entered for the plaintiff for the amount of said $4,170.40 with interest in gold, and costs.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

I, John G. Stetson, clerk of the circuit court of the United States for the first circuit and district of Massachusetts, certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the opinion of the court in the cause of Washington Mills vs. Thomas Russell, delivered August 1, A. D. 1873.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said circuit court

BOSTON, October 1, 1873.

SIR: The case of Washington Mills vs. Thomas Russell, collector of Boston, to recover a duty of ten per cent. illegally exacted on Australian wool imported from England, argued before Judge Shepley, has been decided by him in favor of the importer; a copy of his opinion is annexed. I understand that the district attorney is dissatisfied with the decision and has recommended the Department to remove the case on error to the Supreme Court. The importers feel assured that the Department will not in these hard times interpose this obstacle and delay to the liquidation of these demands unless it entertains a deep conviction that the circuit court has erred in the application of settled principles of law to the decision of the point. Having argued the case for the plaintiff, I may be permitted in their behalf to say that no dispute of facts existed; the issues were purely the construction of the ten per cent. clause and of the act of 1867. The plaintiff contended that Australian wool imported from England did not come within the ten per cent. clause, but this point Judge Shepley found it unnecessary to decide and is still open. Plaintiff also contended that the act of 1867 repealed the ten per cent. clause so far as it applied to Australian wool imported from England, and the court decided this point in their favor. My opponent's argument of the point decided by the judge was thoughtful; his observation included all authority of weight on his side, and he failed to convince because, in the judicial balance, the ponderance was against him. He cannot mend his argument, and I do not believe that short of demonstrable considerations of public justice and equity, the Department would decline to abide by a decision made by a capable judge after a full and fair hearing. The Department will observe that, while its original ruling in these cases was made rather on a construction of the ten per cent. clause than of the full effect of the act of 1867, as subsequent legislation, it has adopted on other imports, the decision of the court exclusively considers the force of the act of 1867 and is not inconsistent with the views of the Department on the tea and coffee cases.

In case of removal on error, both clauses will be again in issue, and a decision in our favor on either point will give us the final judgment.

Are there any public reasons requiring the Department to seek a judicial interpretation of this ten per cent. clause? There have been several rulings of the Department to meet peculiar facts under this clause; trade has practically acquiesced as to "route;" and as regards wool from Australia since the act of 1872, the matter is not material. There is no collision or controversy as to the present operation of the law which could be reached and disposed of advantageously to the Department by a decision on the Australian question. I may safely assume that there is no other necessity for seeking a revision of Treasury rulings on this subject than springs from these wool cases, and it is a double consideration, not only whether the weight of this issue is not in our favor, but whether it is not a general interest not to awaken solicitude as to the true interpretation of a clause which is, by common confession of those connected with its practical application, indefinite, extremely vague as to its exterior limits, and imbued with strong tendencies to clash with many principles well settled by the courts for general construction of revenue cases.

While I need not repeat or amplify the arguments of my printed brief, which is before you, I should add, in order to avoid misconception, that my confidence in my client's cause on both points remains unabated.

Besides the case of the Washington Mills, I am the attorney of record for the plaintiff in all the suits pending in Massachusetts on this wool question. I am prepared to discontinue these cases on the acceptance of the Government of the terms proposed in the letter of Mr. Tucker of even date, which this accompanies.

Yours, very respectfully,

CHAS. LEVI WOODBURY,
For Plaintiff.

Hon. E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

BOSTON, October 1, 1873.

SIR: In the matter of suit instituted by the Washington Mills against Thomas Russell, (collector,) in the United States circuit court for this district, for the recovery of ten per cent. additional duty paid upon Australian and New Zealand wool imported from London and Liverpool, argued before Judge Shepley, decided by him, and judgment directed for the plaintiff on the first day of August last, I have the honor, in behalf of the Washington Mills, to ask that this decision of Judge Shepley may be acquiesced in by the Government and the judgment paid. I understand that the United States district attorney has asked for instructions as to whether an appeal by writ of error shall be taken to the Supreme Court. It is respectfully submitted that the case was fully argued before Judge Shepley, both orally and by printed briefs. The decision of the court is positive, and shows conclusively that there was no doubt in the mind of the judge that the construction claimed by the plaintiff was correct.

Judge Shepley cites with approval the opinion of Justice Clifford and Judge Dowen in the case of Gossler et al. vs. Goodrich, as to the effect in tariff laws of the words "in lieu of." Hon. S. Hooper, who was a member of the Committee of Ways and Means when the wool act of 1867 was enacted, says, "It was supposed that the duties on wool prescribed in the act was in lieu of all duties on wool prescribed by previous acts."

The ten per cent. additional clause in the act of 1872 expressly exempts wool from its provisions, so that an acquiescence in the opinion of Judge Shepley can in no way affect the present revenue. In view of these circumstances it is submitted that the Government ought not to subject the importers to the expense of an argument before the Supreme Court, and in behalf of various importers whom I represent, I have the honor to propose a discontinuance of the suits now pending, wherein the points at issue are the same as those determined by Judge Shepley upon the payment of the excess paid, with interest and actual costs of court incurred. Accompanying this, please find certified copy of the decision of Judge Shepley, certified copy of the opinion of Justice Clifford and Judge Dowen referred to copy of a letter from the Hon. S. Hooper to the Secretary of the Treasury, covering his understanding as quoted, copies of printed arguments of counsel for plaintiff and defendant, together with a brief statement of the case by Mr. Woodbury, who argued the case for plaintiff.

Yours, very respectfully,

J. P. TUCKER,
Attorney for Washington Mills, and other Importers.

Hon. E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES ATEORNEY,
DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS,
Boston, August 6, 1873.

SIR: I have the honor to inclose copy of an opinion given by Judge Shepley, circuit judge of this circuit, in the case of Washington Mills vs. Thomas Russell, collector of this port. Judge Shepley holds that section 6 of the act of March 3, 1865, chapter 80, (13 Stat. at L., 493,) is repealed as to wool by the act of March 2, 1867, chapter 197, (14 Stat. at L., 559,) and relies in his opinion upon the use of the words "in lieu of the duties now imposed by law" as operating to expressly repeal the section in question. The opinion in the case of Gossler vs. The collector, therein cited, I have never seen, and am not aware how far the question in that case and the present are analogous, but no such construction has been given to these words of the statute in any reported case that has come under my notice.

These same words upon which Judge Shepley relies were contained in the tariff act of July 30, 1846, chapter 74, (9 Stat., 42,) under which Stuart vs. Maxwell, 16 Howard, 150, was decided, and no such effect was there given to them, and the language of the court used in that case on page 163 seems quite applicable to the question ruled upon Shepley. See also Stalker vs. Maxwell, 3 Blatchley, Circuit Court Reports, 138. The tariff of 1846 was as radical in its changes as the wool tariff of 1867.

The proposition seems at least a little strained that these general words, "in lieu of the duties now imposed by law," contained in a tariff upon one kind of goods, namely, wool, expressly repeal a provision respecting an entirely different subject-matter, namely, direct trade.

There have been already entered in the circuit court of this district thirty-five actions, wherein most of the principal wool-dealers of this city are plaintiffs, involving the same question passed upon in this case of the Washington Mills vs. Russell, and involving in the aggregate over $156,000, gold, with interest to be added. There are also, I am informed, a number of additional actions commenced and not yet entered in court, raising the same question; and I am also informed that the same question is pending in a number of cases in New York.

It will be observed, too, that if the views of Judge Shepley are acquiesced in, the same argument applies to all goods respecting which there has been a change of duties since the act of March 3, 1865.

The question being a doubtful one, and there being in my judgment a fair chance that the opinion of Judge Shepley would be reversed by the Supreme Court, and considering the number of actions pending and the large amount involved, and the effect of this decision upon other goods, I recommend and advise that the present case be carried to the Supreme Court, and will sue out a writ of error, if so directed by you.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE P. SANGER,
United States Attorney.

Hon. E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., October 18, 1873.

SIR: The case of the Washington Mills Company vs. Thomas Russell, collector of the port of Boston, has been recently tried in the circuit court holden in Massachusetts, and decided in favor of the plaintiffs.

The case involved the question of the proper rate of duty to be assessed upon Australian wool imported by the plaintiffs in 1871, from London and Liverpool.

The collector exacted upon the wool in question a duty of 10 cents per pound and 11 per cent. ad valorem, under the act of March 2, 1867, and an additional duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem on the ground that it was of the growth or produce of countries east of the Cape of Good Hope, under the 6th section of the act of March 3, 1865.

The plaintiffs protested against the payment of the additional or discriminating duty of 10 per cent., and claimed that the act of March, 1867, repealed the act imposing the discriminating duty so far as the importation in question is concerned.

The court adopted the view of the plaintiffs, and decided that the discriminating duties were illegally exacted.

I inclose a copy of the opinion of Judge Shepley and also a letter of the United States district attorney for Massachusetts.

Although the district attorney for the reason therein set forth thinks that a writ of error should be taken to the Supreme Court, I am of opinion that the decision is correct in point of law, and should be acquiesced in by the Department.

Very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, October 21, 1873.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 18th instant recommending acquiescence in the decision of the United States circuit court for the district of Massachusetts in the case of Washington Mills vs. Thomas Russell, collector of the port of Boston.

The question involved in this case was as to the liability to discriminating duty under the sixth section of the act of March 3, 1865, of wool produced east of the Cape of Good Hope and imported from a place west thereof, the plaintiff claiming that the importation having been made subsequent to the passage of the act of March 2, 1867, which, in lieu of all other duties, imposed certain rates of duty on wool, the importation in question was free from said discriminating duty. The decision of the court was in favor of the plaintiff's claim and against the position taken by the Government. The parties interested now ask the Department to acquiesce in the decision of the court in the premises, and you recommend that their application be granted. Upon a consideration of the case, I have decided to carry out your recommendation, and you will therefore please inform the United States district attorney at Boston of the views of the Department in the premises.

The necessary instructions will be given to the collector at Boston to repay the amount exacted in excess, in this and other similar cases.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., October 21, 1873.

SIR: I inclose herewith, for your information, a copy of a communication from the Solicitor of the Treasury dated the 18th instant, recommending that the Department acquiesce in the judgment for plaintiffs rendered by the United States circuit court for the district of Massachusetts, in the case of Washington Mills Company vs. Thomas Russell, collector, &c., recently tried in said court, the question at issue being as to the rate of duty to be assessed on certain Australian wool imported by plaintiffs from London and Liverpool per Batavia and Parthia, in the months of January and February, 1871, and have to inform you that the Department has, by letter of this date to the Solicitor, acquiesced in his views, and requested him to instruct the United States attorney at Boston accordingly.

You will, therefore, prepare and forward to the Department certified statements for refund of the excess of duties exacted in this and all similar cases, where the requirements of the law as regards protest and appeal and time of commencement of suit have been complied with.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,
Boston, Mass.

EXHIBIT No. 3.—BRONZE POWDER AND DUTCH METAL.

REFUND OF DUTIES ON DUTCH METAL, BRONZE POWDER, AND MANUFACTURES OF BRASS.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

By the act passed February 24, 1869, entitled "An act regulating the duties on imported copper and copper-ores," duty at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem is imposed on all manufactures of copper or of which copper shall be a component of chief value, not otherwise provided for in that act.

In a circular to collectors of customs, dated May 17, 1869, (copy annexed, marked A,) it was held that bronze powders and Dutch metal were liable to duty under said act if copper was the component of chief value thereof. The act of March 2, 1861, named these articles as liable to a duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem.

On the 14th of July, 1869, the Secretary of the Treasury addressed a letter to certain parties, in which the following ruling was made:

As in all articles made of the composition usually known as brass, copper is the component of chief value, the goods imported by you were subject to a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem, under the act of February 24, 1869. The position taken by the collector is correct in regard to the material of which brass is composed; and as the law in question includes all articles of which copper is the component of chief value, his action in assessing said duty was correct. The fact that brass and many other articles of which copper forms the principal part have other distinctive names, and are never known as manufactures of copper in the commercial world, cannot be deemed to affect the question under the very comprehensive language of the act referred to. (Copy annexed, marked B.)

In a further decision of the Department, addressed to the collector at New York, on the 19th of July, 1869, the following language was employed:

The appraiser, in his report, stated that, in his opinion, copper is not the component of chief value in articles made from Dutch metal; basing this opinion on the assertion that a new metal is formed by the union of copper and tin in the Dutch metal; although, at the same time, he reports Dutch metal as a manufacture of which copper is the component of chief value, thus restricting the operation of the law to articles manufactured in whole or in part of the metal copper, and to alloys composed in part of that metal, while articles manufactured of such alloys even where copper is the component of chief value would be liable to duty under previous act.

The language of the act of February 24, 1869, is very comprehensive, and, in the opinion of this Department, embraces every manufacture of which copper is the component of chief value, whether the copper be the simple metal or in the form of an alloy or combination, chemical or otherwise, with any other article or articles. (Copy annexed, marked C.)

From the rulings thus made a considerable number of appeals were taken, principally upon bronze powder and Dutch metal, which it was claimed, by importers, were liable only to 10 per cent. ad valorem duty.

At a term of the district court of the United States for the southern district of New York, held in April, 1871, the case of the United States vs. Sigmund Ulmann, which involved the proper rate of duty on Dutch metal, was brought to trial, which resulted in a verdict against the Government under the ruling of the court that the evidence showed that the article in question was a manufacture from brass, and not from copper directly, and that the tariff-laws as well as commercial usage had recognized brass as an article distinct from copper, and that, therefore, manufacturers of brass were not liable to duty as manufacturers of copper. From this ruling of the court an appeal was taken to the United States circuit court at New York, which resulted in that court sustaining the decision of the district court.

The case is reported at length on page 68 of the Internal Revenue Record. After an examination of the case, and upon recommendation of the Solicitor of the Treasury, I decided to acquiesce in the ruling of the court in the premises, and accordingly issued instructions to that effect. (Copy annexed, marked D, with copy of Solicitor's letter dated March 11, 1873, marked E.)

[Circular No. 4.]

TO COLLECTORS AND OTHER OFFICERS OF THE CUSTOMS.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
May 7, 1869.

The act entitled "An act regulating the duties on imported copper and copper ores," passed February 24, 1869, provides:

"That from and after the passage of this act, in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed by law on the articles hereinafter mentioned, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the articles herein enumerated and provided for, imported from foreign countries, the following specified duties and rates of duty, that is to say: On all copper imported in the form of ores, three cents on each pound of fine copper contained therein; on all regulus of copper, and on all black or coarse copper, four cents on each pound of fine copper contained therein; on all old copper, fit only for remanufacture, four cents per pound; on all copper in plates, bars, ingots, pigs, and in other forms not manufactured or herein enumerated, including sulphate of copper or blue vitriol, five cents per pound; on copper in rolled plates, called brazier's copper, sheets, rods, pipes, and copper bottoms, eyelets, and all manufactures of copper, or of which copper shall be a component of chief value, not otherwise herein provided for, forty-five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That the increased duty imposed by this act shall not apply to any of the articles therein enumerated which shall have been in course of transit to the United States, and actually on shipboard on the nineteenth of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine."

Passed February 24, 1869.

The question has been presented to this Department whether "bronze powders" and "Dutch metal" are properly liable to duty under the act in question.

It is the opinion of the Department that the articles named are manufactures, and it is understood that they are composed in part of copper.

The principal question remaining is whether copper is the component of chief value in such manufactures. If this be so, and the articles are not otherwise provided for in said act, they are liable to a duty of forty-five per centum ad valorem.

As the act in question imposes a duty of three cents per pound on all fine copper contained in copper ore, and four cents on each pound of fine copper contained in regulus of copper and black or coarse copper, I deem it proper to state that the Department is advised that copper ores imported from Chili, Mexico, San Domingo, Sicily, and other remote countries, are invariably assayed and the quantity of fine copper contained therein definitely ascertained before shipment from the country of production; that this assay forms the basis upon which the ores are bought and sold, and that the invoices are made to correspond therewith.

As a general rule, the Department, therefore, sees no objection to accepting as correct the invoices of ores imported from those or other remote countries, and allowing the same to govern in the assessment of duties; but, in order that the revenue shall be fully protected, collectors of customs will, from time to time, cause assays to be made to verify the correctness of invoices of copper ore.

In any case where the invoice does not state the quantity of fine copper contained in the ore, or where the collector has reason to doubt the correctness of the invoice, he will cause an assay of the ores to be made at the expense of the importer, and duties will be exacted in accordance with the result of such assay.

The Department is further advised that copper ores produced in Canada are usually shipped to the United States without being first assayed, or the proportions of fine copper therein being definitely ascertained, the seller and purchaser depending upon the assay to be made at the smelting-works in the United States as the basis for settlement; and it will no doubt frequently occur that copper ores will be imported from Canada into ports of the United States where there are no means of making an assay thereof, but which will be intended for transportation in bond to another port for the purpose of being smelted. In such cases the collector at the first port of entry will require the importer to state in his entry, under oath or affirmation, the quantity of fine copper which, according to the best of his information, knowledge, and belief, is contained in such importation. The collector should in all cases retain in his office samples of each importation.

On arrival of the same at the port of final destination, the collector at that port must ascertain by an assay at the works where the ores are smelted, or at such other place as he may deem proper, the quantity of fine copper contained therein, and duties will thereupon be exacted accordingly, and the collector will report to the collector at the first port of entry any addition to, or deduction from, the quantity of fine copper stated on entry, and any excess or deficiency of duties from that stated in the transportation entry.

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
July 14, 1869.

GENTLEMEN: I am in receipt of your letter of the 23d ultimo, complaining of the action of the collector of customs at New York in assessing a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem on six cases of stamped brass goods imported by you per steamer Bremen in May last.

The duty in question, it appears, was assessed under the act of February 24, 1869, which provides that "all manufactures of copper or of which copper shall be a component of chief value not otherwise herein provided for," shall be subject to a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem, and the collector decided that, as in all articles made of the composition usually known as brass, copper is the component of chief value, the goods imported by you were subject to duty under said act.

I have reason for believing that the position taken by the collector is correct in regard to the materials of which brass is composed, and, as the law in question includes all articles of which copper is the component of chief value, his action in assessing said duty was correct.

The fact that brass and many other articles of which copper forms the principal part, have other distinctive names and are never known as manufactures of copper in the commercial world, cannot be deemed to affect the question under the very comprehensive language of the act referred to.

I am, very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Messrs. FISHER & RITTERSHAUS,
New York.

C.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 19, 1869.

SIR: Your letter of the 9th ultimo is received, submitting the appeal (No. 6691) of Messrs. Julius E. Ehrmann & Co., from your decision assessing duty at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem on certain Dutch metal and bronze powders imported into your port per Main, June 1st last, as manufactures of which copper is the component of chief value, under the act of February 24, 1869.

From your report it appears that the appraiser returned the Dutch metal as copper, chief value 45 per cent., and the bronze powders as "manufactured from a species of brass known as Dutch metal, 20 per cent.," and that deeming the return of the latter erroneous, you assessed duty thereon at 45 per cent.

The appraiser in his report states that in his opinion copper is not the component of chief value in articles made from Dutch metal, basing this opinion on the assertion that a "new metal" is formed by the union of copper and tin in the Dutch metal, although at the same time he reports Dutch metal as a manufacture of which copper is the component of chief value, thus restricting the operation of the law to articles manufactured in whole or in part of the metal copper, and to alloys composed in part of that metal, while articles manufactured of such alloys, even where copper is the component of chief value, would be liable to duty under previous acts.

The language of the act of February 24, 1869, is very comprehensive, and, in the opinion of this Department, embraces every manufacture of which copper is the component of chief value, whether the copper be the simple metal or in the form of an alloy or combination, chemical or otherwise, with any other article or articles. It is the duty of the appraiser to determine the facts in each case.

This decision is confirmatory of Department's decision of the 14th instant.

Your decision is hereby affirmed.

I am, very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

M. H. GRINNELL,
Colle tor, New York.

D.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., March 15, 1873.

SIR: In the case of the United States vs. Ullman, involving the rate of duty on Dutch metal, the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, L. B. Woodruff, justice, has affirmed the judgment given in the district court before Judge Blatchford, in favor of defendants, and accordingly held that this article was subject only to the special rate of duty provided therefor in the act of March 2, 1861, and not as a manufacture of which copper is the component of chief value under the act of February 24, 1869.

The Solicitor of the Treasury, under date of the 11th instant, has forwarded to this office a copy of the bill of exceptions taken in the case, certified by Judge Blatchford, which sets forth the facts and conclusions of law very clearly, and has advised an acquiesence in the decision given in the case, being of opinion that a further trial will not be likely to result in a decision favorable to the Government.

The Department, therefore, acquiesces in the decision of the court thus rendered, and directs that from and after the receipt hereof, duty will be collected upon Dutch metal and bronze powder at the special rates provided therefor in the act of 1861, subject however, to the reduction of 10 per cent. provided by the act of June 6, 1872, and certified statements for refunds of the excess of duty exacted will be made and forwarded to the Department in all cases where protest and appeal have been duly made and suit instituted, in accordance with the act of June 30, 1864.

In addition, I deem it proper to state that the charge of Judge Blatchford in the district court in this case, holds that manufactures of brass are not liable to duty under the act passed February 24, 1869, even though copper may be the component of chief value therein, brass being recognized for the purpose of assessment of duty as a metal separate and distinct from copper. This ruling will hereafter govern your action in assessing duties.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, New York.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., March 11, 1873.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a communication from Messrs. Webster & Craig, of New York, attorneys for the defendant in the case of the United States against Ullman, submitting for the acquiescence of your Department the question of the rate of duty upon "Dutch metal," recently determined adversely to the United States in two trials had in the district and circuit courts for the southern district of New York respectively.

The questions of law and fact urged and decided, fully appear in the copy of the bill of exceptions and the brief of the defendant herewith; and the case will be found reported at length in 13 Internal Revenue Record, page 68. I need only say, therefore, that the issue between the parties was as to whether "Dutch metal" was dutiable under the 19th section of the act of March 2, 1861, at ten per centum according to its classification therein specifically as "Dutch metal," as claimed by the defendant, or subject to the higher rate of duty, according to the provisions of the act of February 24, 1869, in the general description of "manufactures of copper, or of which copper shall be a component of chief value, not otherwise" therein "provided for." The claim of the defendant was fully sustained by the decisions of the courts before referred to; and from a careful consideration given to the questions involved, and the rulings in question, as well to the decisions of the courts upon kindred questions, I am inclined to think that no advantage is to be gained on the part of the United States by further litigation.

I accordingly advise an acquiescence in the decisions rendered.

Very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

EXHIBIT No. 4.—BEER, ALE, AND PORTER.

REFUND OF DUTIES, IN CONSEQUENCE OF LEAKAGE AND BREAKAGE, ON ALE, BEER, AND PORTER.

Statement of facts and reasons for refunds.

The fifty-ninth section of the act of March 2, 1799, provides that there shall be an allowance of 2 per cent. for leakage on the quantity which shall appear by the gauge to be contained in any cask of liquors, subject to duty by the gallon, and 10 per cent. on all beer, ale, and porter in bottles, and 5 per cent. on all other liquor in bottles, to be deducted from the invoice quantity in lieu of breakage, or it shall be lawful to compute the duties on the actual quantity, to be ascertained by tale at the option of the importer, to be made at the time of entry. This provision of law remained in full force except in so far as it was affected by ad valorem duties imposed by subsequent statutes, until the passage of the tariff act of July 14, 1870, in the twenty-first section of which provision is made for new rates of duty on wine, and to the concluding portion of the paragraph relating to that subject the following proviso is annexed: "And provided further, that wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors imported in bottles shall be packed in packages containing not less than one dozen bottles in each package, and all such bottles shall pay an additional duty of three cents for each bottle; no allowance shall be made for breakage unless such breakage is actually ascertained by count and certified by a custom-house appraiser; and so much of section 59 of the act entitled an 'Act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage,' approved March 2, 1799, as provided for allowances for leakage and breakage, is hereby repealed."

On the 28th of December, 1870, the Secretary of the Treasury addressed a letter to the collector at New York, the fifth paragraph of which related to the subject of allowances for leakage and breakage, and the collector was thereby instructed that the "repeal, by said act, (of July 14, 1870,) of the 59th section of the act of March 2, 1799, operates to prevent any allowances for leakage thereunder upon goods of the character mentioned in said section of the act of March 2, 1799, remaining in warehouse January 1, 1871, and reliquidations of such entries will be made accordingly." (Copy annexed, marked A.)

This rule of course applied as well to importations made after January 1, 1871, as to those remaining in warehouse on that date.

Appeals from importers soon followed this ruling, they claiming that the duties on ale, beer and porter, not being affected by or included in the act of July 14, 1870, that part of section 59 of the act of March 2, 1799, which made allowances on those articles, was not affected thereby.

On the 30th of January, 1873, A. R. Culver, of counsel for the importers, submitted a brief upon the subject, with a request that the subject might be carefully reconsidered by the Department, which document was referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury for his examination.

(Copy of letter to Solicitor marked B, and copy of brief marked C.)

On the 26th of February, 1873, the Solicitor addressed a communication to this office containing his views upon the question, in which he arrived at the conclusion that the repeal enacted in the act of 1870 was in no sense, taking the whole clause together, an absolute repeal of allowance for breakage, but only of one form of allowance, and even then to only affect such articles as are the subject-matter of that portion of the act, to wit: wines in casks, and wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors in bottles. (Copy annexed, marked D.) After due consideration I decided, as acting Secretary of the Treasury, to adopt the opinion of the Solicitor as the proper construction of the law in the case, and accordingly gave instructions to that effect to the collector at New York, dated March 18 1873. (Copy annexed, marked E.)

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., December 28, 1870.

SIR: Referring to previous correspondence between this Department and your office relative to the settlement of certain doubtful points arising under the act of July 14, 1870, and the manner in which the provisions of the 26th section of said act shall be carried into effect, I have to state that, upon due consideration of the matter, the following instructions are prescribed:

1. The instructions to you of the 3d instant are hereby modified, so as to allow and require the resampling, reweighing, regauging, and reclassification of goods, wares, and merchandise remaining in public store or bonded warehouse on the 1st of January, 1871, in all cases where the classification is radically changed by the act of July 14, 1870, (such as sugars, wines, &c.,) or the amendatory act of December 22, 1870.

Reclassification will, in all cases, be made where the original classification is insufficient to determine the correct rate of duties to be paid under the new law. Reweighing and regauging will also be had in all cases where a portion of an importation has been withdrawn upon average quantities prior to January 1, 1871, and such reclassification, reweighing, and regauging will be made as soon as practicable after January 1, and the entries be reliquidated accordingly upon your books, so that the exact amount due the United States on each bond may appear.

2. Goods remaining in public store or bonded warehouse on the 1st proximo, which are, by the act of July 14, 1870, placed on the free list, will not be charged with duty under the act of March 14, 1866, even though they may have remained in bond beyond one year from date of importation, as the additional duties imposed by said act of 1866 are to be based upon the new rates of duty prescribed by the act of July 14, 1870; but upon all goods chargeable with duty under said last-named act, and which have remained in bond beyond said year, the additional duty of 10 per centum is to be exacted on the withdrawal thereof for consumption.

3. The ad valorem duty of 25 per centum imposed by said act on wines accrues only on such wines as are valued at over $1 per gallon.

4. That provision in said act which prescribes that "opium prepared for smoking, and other preparations of opium deposited in bonded warehouses, shall not be removed therefrom without payment of duties, and such duties shall not be refunded," applies to opium and preparations thereof remaining in public store or bonded warehouse January 1, 1871, as well as to importations made after that date.

5. The repeal by said act of the fifty-ninth section of the act of March 2, 1799, operates to prevent any allowances for leakage and breakage thereunder upon goods of the character mentioned in said section of the act of 1799 remaining in warehouse January 1, 1871, and reliquidations of such entries will be made accordingly.

6. The provision in said act which declares that "any liquors containing more than 22 per centum of alcohol which shall be entered under the name of wine shall be forfeited to the United States," is held by the Treasury Department to apply only to wines of which original entry is made after the 1st day of January, 1871, and not to wines remaining in warehouse at that date.

7. Attention of collectors is called to the provision in the new tariff which limits the value of the household effects of emigrants or parties returning to the United States which may be admitted to free entry to $500, and collectors are instructed to assess and collect duty upon any excess beyond that amount.

In case of partial withdrawals upon estimated quantities, duties will be collected at the new rates upon the quantity found by reweighing or regauging to be actually in warehouse on the 1st of January, and at the old rates on the difference between the quantity previously withdrawn, as shown by the records, and that upon which the new rates of duty are paid. In the case of an importation, where no withdrawal has been made, and the classification is changed by the new act, duties will be collected at the new rates on the quantity actually in warehouse, as shown by the reweighing, &c., and at the old rates on any deficiency which may exist between the quantity originally entered and that in warehouse January 1, 1871. This course is rendered necessary by the 4th section of the act of March 28, 1854. In the case of goods where the classification is not changed, say of an importation of coffee, where the duty is reduced 2 cents per pound by the new tariff, and no withdrawal has been made, no reweighing will be had, but the quantity upon which the duties are to be reduced is that shown on the original return of the weigher.

8. Parties entitled to refund or abatement of duties on goods in bonded warehouses January 1, 1871, under the twenty-sixth section of the act of July 14, 1870, will make written application therefor to the collector, in duplicate, one copy to be filed in the collector's office, and the other in the naval office, setting forth—

1. Name of importer and importing vessel, date of arrival, and number of warehouse bond.

2. Marks, numbers, and description of packages remaining in warehouse on which the duties have been paid, with amount of such payment.

3. Marks, numbers, and description of packages in warehouse for which withdrawals have been passed but duties not paid, with the amount of duties computed on such withdrawals.

4. Marks, numbers, and description of packages for which no withdrawals have been passed.

5. On teas remaining in warehouse as above, the number and description of packages in each chop must be designated.

6. On sugars and all merchandise in warehouse the classification of which is changed by the act of July 14, 1870, the original classification must also be designated.

7. In cases where damage has been allowed, the statement must indicate whether the damage was allowed upon goods remaining in warehouse January 1, 1871, or upon goods withdrawn before that date.

Where damage allowance has been made upon an importation, and a portion only of the goods remain in warehouse, the importer will include in the statement before mentioned an exhibit showing what portion of the goods upon which such damage was allowed was withdrawn prior to January 1, 1871, and what portion remains in warehouse on that day, and if such statement shall be found correct, the damage allowance will be apportioned upon the rates of duties in force at the time of the separate withdrawals.

Refunds under said act on duty-paid goods will be made by forwarding to the Department the usual certified statement in each case, and the settlement of the same by the accounting officers.

To secure uniformity in carrying said law into effect, a copy of this letter will be sent to collectors of customs at the various ports.

I am, very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
February 4, 1873.

SIR: I inclose herewith a communication dated the 30th ultimo, from Mr. Andrew R. Culver, relative to a decision of this Department made in January, 1871, declining to grant allowances for leakage and breakage upon bottled porter, imported by Charles Darrall from Liverpool.

The 59th section of the act of March 2, 1799, made certain arbitrary allowances in lieu of leakage and breakage, with the alternative that it should be lawful to compute the duties on the actual quantities to be ascertained by tale at the option of the importer. This provision continued in force until the passage of the act of July 14, 1870, wherein, after regulating the duties upon wines, it was provided "that wines, brandy and other spirituous liquors, imported in bottles shall be packed in packages containing not less than one dozen bottles in each package, and all such bottles shall pay an additional duty of three cents for each bottle; no allowance shall be made for breakage unless such breakage is actually ascertained by count, and certified by a custom-house appraiser; and so much of section 59 of an act entitled 'An act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage,' approved March 2, 1799, as provided for allowance for leakage and breakage, is hereby repealed."

By the decision of the Department, it was held that that provision repealed all the allowances for leakage and breakage, mentioned in said 59th section, but it is now claimed by the communication submitted that the act of July 14, 1870, only repealed the allowance for leakage and breakage upon wines and spirituous liquors, and did not affect ale, beer, and porter, because the duties on ale, beer, and porter, were not modified or affected by the act of 1870.

It will be observed that while the paragraph in the act of July 14, 1870, upon this subject prohibits allowances for breakage, that provision is not extended to leakage until it comes to the concluding clause, by which the provisions of the act of 1799 are repealed; and that the argument of the importers, that this law did not modify or affect the duties upon ale, beer, and porter, applied with equal force, at the time this decision was made, to rum, gin, and whisky, which being otherwise provided for by previous laws, were not included therein until the passage of the act of January 30, 1871, which amended the act of 1870, by inserting the word "herein," in the 21st section, which had the effect of including therein rum, gin, and whisky.

A considerable number of appeals have been taken from the decision of the Department on this question, and it is understood that suits have been instituted, and the communication of the parties referred to requests that this decision of the Department may be so modified as to hereafter make the allowances claimed on ale, beer, and porter.

The matter is submitted for an expression of your opinion upon the question of law involved.

Please return the inclosures.

I am, very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary.

SIR: The above-entitled action is brought to recover certain duties claimed to have been charged and exacted illegally by said collector upon an importation of eighty-six casks of ale made by the plaintiff in the ship India from Glasgow, March 21, 1871. Duties were paid March 21, 1871. Protest was filed April 3, 1871. Appeal was filed

April 8, 1871; the number of the appeal is 365[a]. The appeal was answered by the Department under date of April 17, 1871, affirming the decision of the collector, whereupon this suit was instituted July 13, 1871.

The following is a copy of the protest filed in the case:

"To THOMAS MURPHY, Esq.,
"Collector, &c.:

"SIR: I hereby protest against the liquidation of the duties as made by you upon my entry of ale, per ship India from Glasgow, dated March 21, 1871, and against the payment of the duties as assessed, demanded, and exacted by you thereon. The grounds of my objections are:

"That in estimating the duties thereon you have neglected and refused to make me the allowance of ten per cent. for breakage on said ale as provided by section 59 of the act of 1799, the said ale being subject to a duty by the gallon. I also claim that the duties should be computed by the standard of the beer-gallon, and not upon the wine-gallon. I also protest against the payment of any and all duties not legally chargeable upon said importation, and hereby especially reserve all questions of law or fact that may arise.

"Being under compulsion and duress, I pay the amount of duties demanded and exacted by you in order to obtain possession of my goods, and hereby notify you that I shall hold yourself and the United States jointly and severally liable for the excess exacted, and also notify you that I intend this protest to apply to all future similar exactions.

"Dated New York, April 1, 1871.

"Very respectfully,

"GEO. MILN,
"By A. R. CULVER, Att'y."

Section 59 of the act of March 2, 1799, 1 Stat. at Large, page 672, provides as follows:

"That there shall be an allowance of two per cent. for leakage on the quantity which shall appear by the gauge to be contained in any cask of liquors subject to duty by the gallon; and ten per cent. on all ale, beer, and porter in bottles, and five per cent. on all other liquors in bottles, to be deducted from the invoice quantity in lieu of breakage; or, it shall be lawful to compute the duties on the actual quantity to be ascertained by tale at the option of the importer, to be made at the time of entry."

The uniform practice of the Government, from the passage of the act of 1799, up to the passage of the ad valorem tariff act of 1846, was to make the allowances for leakage and breakage provided for by the said 59th section, in all cases of importations of liquors subject to duty by the gallon. (See Lawrence vs. Caswell, 13 Howard, 497.)

After the passage of the tariff act of 1846, which changed the duties upon brandies and other liquors from specific to ad valorem, a question arose whether the allowances provided for by the 59th section of the act of 1799 were still to be made. The question was disposed of by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Lawrence vs. Caswell, before cited. The court held that the allowances provided for by the 59th section were limited to liquors paying a specific duty, and had no application to liquors subject to a duty ad valorem.

The court also held that the provision in the act of 1799, making the allowances for leakage and breakage, were not repealed, but suspended. The tariff act of March 2, 1861, provided for a partial return to specific duties, and on the 21st of March, 1861, the Secretary of the Treasury issued a circular to collectors and other officers of the customs, giving instructions as to the proper collection of the duties under that act, and directed officers of the customs, in making allowances for tare, draft, &c., to be governed by the provisions of the 58th and 59th sections of the act of 1799, which are again brought into operation.

"On wines of all kinds, valued at not over fifty cents per gallon, twenty cents per gallon, and twenty-five per centum ad valorem; valued at over fifty cents, and not over one dollar per gallon, fifty cents per gallon and twenty-five per centum ad valorem; valued at over one dollar per gallon, one dollar per gallon and twenty-five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no champagne or sparkling wines in bottles shall pay a less rate of duty than six dollars per dozen bottles, each bottle containing not more than one quart, and more than one pint; or six dollars per two dozen bottles, each bottle containing not more than one pint."

Under this act and section the collectors of the customs decided not to make the allowance for breakage provided for by the 59th section of the act of 1799, upon the grounds that champagne wines did not in terms pay a specific duty, and that other wines did not pay exclusively a specific duty, but a compound duty, partly specific and partly ad valorem.

Upon all other importations of wines, brandies, and spirits, the allowances provided for by said 59th section were duly made upon liquidation. Various importers of champagne and other wines, under the act of June 30, 1864, protested in due form, and brought suit against the collector of customs to recover the allowances provided for by the 59th section of the act of 1799. Subsequently, application was made on their behalf to the Treasury Department for a reconsideration of the question involved, which resulted in a reversal of the first decision, and an order for refunding to the parties in interest the amount of duties paid by them in excess, in consequence of the non-allowance for breakage, as hereinbefore stated.

The following is a copy of the opinion of the Solicitor of the Treasury, given in that case while the matter was pending before the Treasury Department:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT, SOLICITOR'S OFFICE,
"March 25, 1870.

"SIR: I have the honor to return herewith your communication of the 7th December last, inclosing one from A. R. Culver, esq., relative to the suit of Renauld et al. vs. Grinnell, pending in the circuit court for the southern district of New York, to recover duties alleged to have been exacted in excess on certain champagne. Mr. Culver asks that the decision of the Department, sustaining one made by the collector, assessing the duties in question, be reversed, and that upon a discontinuance of the suit by the plaintiffs the duties be refunded. The ground taken by the plaintiffs to support that request is that the duties on the champagne being specific, the allowance of five per centum for breakage, provided for in section 59, in the act of March 2, 1799, should have been allowed by the collector.

"The section referred to enacts that there shall be an allowance of ten per cent. on all ale, beer, and porter, in bottles, and five per cent. on all other liquors in bottles, to be deducted from the invoice-quantity in lieu of breakage, or it shall be lawful to compute the duties on the actual quantity, to be ascertained by tale, at the option of the importer, to be made at the time of entry.

"I am clearly of opinion that the duties imposed upon the champagne in question are specific.

"The character of the return uniformly made by the appraiser upon invoices of champagne are such as to lead directly and inevitably to the execution of the specific duty of $6 per dozen or two dozen bottles, according as the same contains quarts or pints.

"The invariable result arrived at is strictly a specific duty and never an ad valorem duty.

"In any possible contingency a specific duty would attach to entries of champagne, even though an additional ad valorem duty might also be required.

"The decision of the Department refusing the allowance for breakage was based upon the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Lawrence vs. Caswell, which related solely to the question of an allowance for breakage, arising also under the 59th section of the act of 1799.

"There was no warrant in that opinion for the extended application of the rule beyond the simple question of leakage.

"And this leads me to say, that in my opinion, under a correct construction of the 59th section of the act of 1799, an allowance for breakage upon liquors in bottles should in all cases be made in the alternative method, provided by the statute, regardless of the fact as to the kind of duty imposed, whether specific or ad valorem, and I can have no question the court would so hold."

"I think, therefore, the suit herein referred to should be discontinued, and a refund made as requested in case the plaintiffs have complied with the requirements of the statute in regard to protest, appeal, and commencement of suit.

"I return the inclosures of your letter, together with a copy of a letter received by me from the collector of customs at New York, upon the subject under consideration.

"I am, &c., very respectfully,

"E. C. BANFIELD,
"Solicitor of the Treasury.

"Hon. GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
"Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C."

The following is a copy of the decision of the Treasury Department in that case:

"TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
"April 6, 1870.

"SIR: A communication from A. R. Culver, esq., dated the 6th of October last, has been received at this Department, relative to the suit of Peter A. H. Renauld et al. vs. Moses H. Grinnell, now pending in the circuit court for the southern district of New York, brought to recover duty alleged to have been illegally exacted on champagne in consequence of the non-allowance in the liquidation of the entry of the five per cent., in lieu of breakage on liquors in bottles, authorized by the 59th section of the act of March 2, 1799.

"The decision of the Department, under which said allowance was refused to be made, was dated October 9, 1865, and was based on circular No. 70, dated June 20, 1852, which recited the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Lawrence vs. Caswell, and directed collectors of customs that none of the allowances specified in the 58th and 59th sections of the act of 1799, under the then existing tariff acts on any merchandise subject to the payment of ad valorem duty, was to be made.

"The act of June 30, 1864, imposes a duty on wines of all kinds valued at not over 50 cents per gallon, of 20 cents per gallon and 25 per cent. ad valorem; valued at over 50 cents and not over $1 per gallon, 50 cents per gallon and 25 per cent. ad valorem; valued at over $1 per gallon, $1 per gallon and 25 per cent. ad valorem; added to which is the following proviso; 'That no champagne or sparkling wines in bottles shall pay a less rate of duty than $6 per dozen bottles, each bottle containing not more than one quart and more than one pint; or $6 per two dozen bottles, each bottle containing not more than one pint.' The effect of this is that nearly, if not quite, all the champagne imported into the United States pays only the specific duty named in said proviso, and this was the case with the champagne in question imported by said plaintiffs.

"You state in your letter to the Solicitor of the Treasury of the 1st ultimo, a copy of which is before me, that you are not aware that any champagne has been imported into your port upon which the duties, if assessed on the basis of $1 per gallon and 25 per cent. ad valorem, would amount to $6 per dozen, and that, therefore, champagne actually, if not in terms, pays a specific duty and nothing else.

"The case having been referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury and the United States district attorney at New York, those officers agree in the opinion that the champagne imported by said plaintiffs was entitled to the allowance of five per cent., prescribed by the act of 1799, and that this amount should be refunded in all cases where protest and appeal have been properly made, and suit instituted within the time prescribed by law.

"In this opinion I concur, and you are hereby authorized and directed in all such cases, upon receipt of certificate of discontinuance of suit without costs, to forward certified statements for the amount due importers therein.

"I am, very respectfully,

"GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
"Secretary.

"MOSES H. GRINNELL, Esq.,
"Collector, New York."

Subsequently, and on the 11th day of May, 1870, the Department decided that the allowance of 5 per cent. for breakage on wines in bottles, other than champagnes, would be made, and directed refunds to be made, in a letter of which the following is a copy:

"MAY 11, 1870.

"SIR: Your letter of the 10th instant is received, reporting upon the appeals Nos. 8243, of G. Lamothe & Co., 8244, of Purdy & Nicholas, 8245, of J. Bensusan, jr., 8246, of William Kuttruff, and 8249, of Shultze & Tailer, from your decision assessing duty in the first two cases without an allowance for breakage or leakage on certain wines in bottles and casks, imported by the appellants in said cases, and in the last three cases without an allowance for breakage on wines in bottles, imported by the appellants as aforesaid.

"It appears from your report that your assessment of duty without an allowance for leakage was in accordance with the Department's decision of October 9, 1865. Your decision in regard thereto is therefore hereby affirmed.

"In regard to the non-allowance for breakage I have to state that, under date of March 25 last, the Solicitor of the Treasury, on the application of A. R. Culver, esq., in the matter of the suit of Renauld et al. vs. Grinnell, in the circuit court for the southern district of New York, to recover duties alleged to have been exacted in excess on certain champagne, held as follows: 'And this leads me to say that, in my opinion, under a correct construction of the fifty-ninth section of the act of 1799, an allowance for breakage upon liquors in bottles should, in all cases, be made in the alternative method provided by the statute, regardless of the fact as to the kind of duty imposed, whether specific or ad valorem, and I can have no question the courts would so hold.'

"The Department concurs in this view, and you are therefore hereby authorized to make an allowance for breakage under the act of 1799 on all wines in bottles and other articles therein mentioned, hereafter imported, and to take the necessary steps to cause a refund of the duty exacted in excess in consequence of your previous non-allowance for breakage on such goods in all cases where protest and appeal have been duly made and suit duly instituted.

"I am, very respectfully,

"GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
"Secretary.

"TO MOSES H. GRINNELL, Esq., New York."

The allowances for leakage and breakage were made in all cases of importations under the act of June 30, 1864, and continued up to the passage of the act of July 14, 1870, (16 Statutes at Large, page 263;) that is to say, an allowance of 2 per cent. for leakage was made upon all wines and liquors in casks paying a specific duty; an allowance of 5 per cent. for breakage was made upon all wines in bottles paying a specific and ad-valorem duty combined; an allowance of 10 per cent. for breakage was made upon all importations of beer, ale, and porter in bottles.

On and after the 31st day of December, 1870, (the day the act of July 14, 1870, took effect,) collectors of the customs discontinued making the allowances for leakage and breakage provided for by the fifty-ninth section in all cases, taking the ground that that section was repealed by that portion of the twenty-first section of that act, which provided as follows:

"On champagne and all other sparkling wines in bottles, six dollars per dozen bottles, containing each not more than one quart and more than one pint; and three dollars per dozen bottles, containing not more than one pint each, and more than one-half pint; and one dollar and fifty cents per dozen bottles, containing one-half pint each, or less; and in bottles containing more than one quart each shall pay, in addition to six dollars per dozen bottles, at the rate of two dollars per gallon on the quantity in excess of one quart per bottle: Provided, That any liquors containing more than 22 per centum of alcohol which shall be entered under the name of wine, shall be forfeited to the United States: And provided further, That wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors imported in bottles shall be packed in packages containing not less than one dozen bottles in each package, and all such bottles shall pay an additional duty of three cents for each bottle; no allowance shall be made for breakage unless such breakage is actually ascertained by count and certified by a custom-house appraiser; and so much of section fifty-nine of an act entitled 'An act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage,' approved March 2, 1799, as provided for allowance for leakage and breakage, is hereby repealed."

Whereupon the plaintiff in his action duly protested, appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury, and instituted this suit, as before stated.

The present application is for a reconsideration of the decision of the Department, so far as it relates to allowances for breakage on importations of beer, ale, and porter in bottles, and an offer on behalf of the plaintiff in this action, as well as on behalf of all other parties for whom I appear as the attorney of record, to discontinue said suits upon being repaid the amount of duties paid in excess, by reason of the non-allowance of ten per centum for breakage, together with interest from time of payment and actual disbursements, the plaintiffs waiving any and all other claims and questions of law in said action.

The grounds upon which this application is based are, that the repeal of the 59th section of the act of 1799, contained in the subdivision of the 21st section of the act of July 14, 1870, above cited, is not an absolute repeal of the whole section, but only a repeal of a part of said section, or so much as relates to allowance for leakage on wines in casks, and breakage on wines, brandies, and other spirituous liquors imported in bottles.

The language of the repealing clause is, "And so much of section 59th of the act of 1799 as provides for allowances for leakage and breakage, is hereby repealed."

A fair construction of this language must convince any one that Congress did not intend to repeal the 59th section in toto, but only so far as it applied to the subject-matter then under consideration.

An examination of the 59th section of the act of 1799 shows that it makes no provision for anything but allowances for leakage and breakage, and therefore it must follow that if Congress intended to abolish all allowances for leakage and breakage they would have repealed the section absolutely, instead of using language which necessarily implies that some portion of the section is still to be left in force.

If I am right in this view, and I assume there can be no doubt but I am, the query is, What articles are entitled to the allowances provided for by said section 59th? For the purpose of this application, I shall contend that the repeal of the 59th section of the act of 1799, contained in the 21st section of the act of July 14, 1870, does not extend or apply to beer, ale, and porter, for the following reasons:

1. That the duties on beer, ale, and porter in bottles are not modified or changed by the act of July 14, 1870, but remain to-day as they were fixed by the tariff act of June 30, 1864, section 2, sub. 2, viz, thirty-five cents per gallon, and therefore Congress, in passing the act of July 14, 1870, not touching the subject of duties on beer, ale, and porter, or the allowances thereon, intended to leave the same as they were under the act of June 30, 1864.

2. That Congress in repealing the 59th section of the act of 1799, by the act of July 14, 1870, so far as the same related to breakage on wines, brandies, and other spirituous liquors in bottles, only changed the form or manner of making an allowance for breakage on such wines, brandies, and spirituous liquors, by providing that such breakage should be ascertained by count and certified by a custom-house appraiser, instead of being entitled to the statutory allowance provided for by the 59th section of the act of 1799. In other words, Congress made a new rule in regard to allowance for breakage on wines, brandies, and other spirituous liquors in bottles, but did not abolish the allowance.

It is a fundamental principle in the construction of statutes that full force and effect is to be given to all words employed by the legislature; and, applying that rule to the present case, what force and effect can be given to the words "and so much of section 59, &c.," unless they be construed to mean only "so much of section 59, &c., is hereby repealed" as applies to leakage on wines (not ales) in casks, and breakage on wines, (not ales,) brandies, (not ales,) and other spirituous liquors (not ales) imported in bottles.

Respectfully submitted by

ANDREW R. CULVER,
Attorney, and of Counsel for Plaintiff.

NEW YORK, January 30, 1873.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington.

United States circuit court, southern district of New York.

v.
THOMAS MURPHY, LATE COLLECTOR, &c. } Supplement brief.

The only question to be determined in this case is, what is the extent of the repeal contained in that portion of section 21 of the tariff act approved July 14, 1870, which reads as follows: "and so much of section 59 of an act entitled 'An act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage,' approved March 2, 1799, as provided for allowances for leakages and breakage, is hereby repealed."

An examination of the act of 1799 shows that it refers only to leakage and breakage. Were the inquiry to rest here, it would seem conclusive from the language of the statute (which must be our only guide in its interpretation) that the repeal is not an absolute one of the entire 59th section, but only so much, &c., or such portion of it as relates to the subject-matter under consideration by Congress in and by the 21st section of the act of July, 1870. That subject was the levying of duties on wines. It is a well-settled principle of law that all acts which take away or curtail existing rights are to be construed strictly, and confined to the exact language used, and the language is not to be extended by inference or implication.

The benefits and allowances provided for by the 59th section of the act of 1799 must be made in all cases unless there is an absolute existing law which, in clear, unmistakable and in no ambiguous terms, contains a repeal of those benefits and allowances. In case of doubt or ambiguity, a repeal of the 59th section, or any part thereof, must be confined to the exact language used by the legislature in the repeal.

It is a rule of construction in the interpretation of statutes that no word which is significant is to be repudiated, but to such word its full and appropriate meaning is to be given.

Gibb v. Washington, 1 McAlister, 435.

Ogden v. Strong, 2 Paines, 584.

The 59th section of 1799 provides only for allowances for leakage and breakage, and the repeal contained in the 21st section of July, 1870, contains the words and so much of the 59th section * * * * as provided for allowance for leakage and breakage as hereby repealed.

If any meaning or effect whatever is to be given to the words "and so much," contained in the act of 1870, it is that same portion of the 59th section is still to remain in operation. That some meaning and force is to be given to all the words used by the legislature is not only founded in reason, but has been settled by judicial decision.

"We are bound to give to the words of the legislature all possible meaning which is consistent with the clear language used."

Green v. Wood, 7 G. B., 178, 185.

Sedgwick on S. and C. L., 245.

If it be argued that the repealing clause in the act of 1870 repeals absolutely the 59th section of 1799, what force and effect is to be given to the words "and so much," found in the act of 1870?

To hold that the act of 1870 repeals absolutely the 59th section of 1799, it will be necessary to say that no meaning or force whatever is to be given to those words, and it can only be held that the 59th section is absolutely repealed by violating every rule of construction of statutes laid down by the courts and writers on this subject.

If it be contended that the 59th section is repealed absolutely by the act of 1870, it must be by implication or inference only, and by striking out the words "and so much" in the repealing clause.

It is well settled that repeals by implication are not favored; on the contrary, the courts are bound to uphold the prior law if the two acts may well subsist together.

Bowen v. Lease, 5 Hill, 221, 225.

"Where two acts are such that both may stand together the latter does not repeal the former, but they shall both have a concurrent efficiency."

Broom's Legal Maxims, p. 22.

It is now a well-settled principle in the construction of conflicting statutes of different dates, that the last statute, so far as it is inconsistent with the former, repeals it by implication, but only to the extent of the inconsistency or repugnancy.

The authorities on this point are numerous.

Statutes should be so construed that both may stand if possible.

Johnson v. Bird, Hempstead, 434.

Statutes levying duties on citizens or subjects are to be construed most strongly against the government and in favor of the citizen or subject, and their provisions are not to extend by implication beyond the clear import of the language used.

U. S. v. Morse, 3 Story, C. C. R., 87.

Laws imposing duties are never construed beyond the natural import of the language used, and duties are never imposed upon the citizen upon doubtful interpretations, for every duty imposes a burden upon the public at large, and is construed strictly and must be made out in a clear and determinate manner from the language of the statute.

Adams v. Bancroft, 3 Sumner, C. C. R., 387.

Power v. Banney, 5 Blatchford, 202.

It is a familiar doctrine that acts "pari materia" are to be taken together as one law, and are to be so construed that every provision in them may, if possible, stand. This rule has been invariably applied in the interpretation of the revenue laws.

The revenue laws, as modified from time to time by Congress, are construed and administered as one entire system, the latter acts not superseding the prior ones unless they are in conflict with or expressly repeal them.

Wilson v. Maxwell, 2 Blatch., 319.

Aldridge v. Allson, 3 How., 1.

In case of doubt (and it must be admitted that in the most favorable view that can be taken on behalf of the Government in this case it is a question of great doubt whether or no Congress intended to abolish all allowances under the 59th section) between the authority and the individual, the benefit of the doubt, all other reasons being equal, ought to be given to the individual and not to the authority.

20 Wendell, p. 561.

The late Chancellor Bibb, when Secretary of the Treasury, in a circular addressed to collectors and naval officers of the customs, dated August 5, 1844, says:

"It would ill-become the Executive Department of the Government to take money from the pockets of the people by implication and constructive enlargement of the acts of the legislature.

"When Congress, in the exercise of their power of taxation, have not spoken expressly and clearly, when the words of the law leave room for a rational doubt as to a higher or lower rate of taxation, the decision of the executive officer should be in favor of the lower rate.

"In doing so the executive action is certainly within the limit prescribed by law. To take the highest rate of taxation in such dubious cases would be hazarding a supplement to the legislative will, and an inroad into the region of the legislative department. Such a mode of construction by the executive department would not be lenient and remedial, but onerous and penal."

The Treasury Department will consider the effect of a construction which it is asked to give a statute, for this is one of the modes of arriving at the intention of Congress; that is to say, that neither the Department nor the courts will give a construction to a statute which is contrary to natural justice and equity, or which will be necessarily productive of practical inconvenience to a community unless the language of the lawgiver is so plain as not to admit of a different construction.

Donaldson v. Wood, 22 Wendell, 395.

To hold that the repealing clause in the act of 1870 repeals absolutely the 59th section of 1799, would be in effect to decide that an allowance for breakage should be made on "wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors" imported in bottles to be ascertained by count by the appraisers, and no allowance for breakage under any circumstances shall be made in beer, ale, and porter, or leakage on spirituous liquors imported in casks. It is a well-known fact that the actual breakage on beer, ale, and porter is equal to, if it does not exceed, the statutory allowance. What reason can be assigned why Congress should take away the allowance for breakage on beer, ale, and porter, and continue the allowance on wines, brandy, &c., in bottles, when, as a matter of fact, the liability to loss by breakage is, from the very nature of the article, much greater in the former case than in the latter? In other words, to so hold will be to assume that Congress intended to abolish the allowance for breakage upon articles which from their nature are subject to great loss by breakage, and continue the allowance upon articles which from their nature are not liable to any great loss by breakage. This would be an unnatural and unreasonable conclusion to arrive at, and would be a reflection upon the intelligence of Congress.

It is evident from the language of the 21st section, that the framers of it had before them the 59th section of the act of 1799, and that they did not intend to abolish all the allowances provided by the 59th section, for had that been their intention, they could have repealed the section absolutely and in terms, by simply saying that the 59th section of the act of 1799 is hereby repealed; or by saying that there shall hereafter be no allowances for leakage and breakage except as herein provided or as provided in this act.

This latter language is found in various tariff acts where Congress intends to limit its provisions to the act under consideration. A departure from the usual and ordinary language used by Congress, when intending an absolute and entire repeal of a previous law, would clearly indicate that there must be some reason for such departure or change, and that if they had intended an absolute repeal, they would not only have said so in clear, plain, and unambiguous language, but have adopted the usual and ordinary form and words used for such purposes in previous tariff acts.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., February 26, 1873.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 4th instant, indorsing a communication from Mr. A. R. Culver, relative to a decision of the Treasury Department, made in January, 1871, declining to grant allowances for leakage and breakage upon bottled porter, and the opinion of this office is asked upon the question involved.

The question presented appears to be, whether or not the 59th section of the act of March 2, 1799, has been absolutely repealed by a certain provision in the 21st section of the act of July 14th, 1870.

The 59th section of the act of 1799 is as follows: "That there shall be an allowance of two per cent. for leakage on the quantity which shall appear by the gauge to be contained in any cask of liquors subject to duty by the gallon, and ten per cent. on all beer, ale and porter in bottles, and five per cent. on all other liquors in bottles, to be deducted from the invoice quantity, in lieu of breakage, or it shall be lawful to compute the duties on the actual quantity to be ascertained by tale at the option of the importer to be made at the time of entry."

The clause of the 21st section of the act of 1870 which contained words of repeal, relates exclusively to wines in casks, and to wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors in bottles, and the word, effecting a repeal of previous legislation are as follows:

"No allowance shall be made for breakage, unless such breakage is actually ascertained by count and certified by a custom-house appraiser, and so much of section 59 of 'An act entitled an act to regulate the collection of duties on imports and tonnage,' approved March 2, 1799, as provided for allowance for leakage and breakage is hereby repealed."

The 59th section of the act of 1799 relates simply to the subject of allowances for breakage and leakage, and to nothing else. The clause of the 21st section of the act of 1870, which has been regarded as repealing in toto the 59th section of the act of 1799, relates exclusively to wines in casks, and to wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors, in bottles.

The words of repeal, above quoted, form a part of this clause, have an unbroken connection with what immediately precedes it, and do not stand independently. The repealing phrase is qualified by the introduction of the words "so much of," showing clearly that it was not the intent of Congress to repeal the 59th section entirely, but that it was intended to leave something upon which that section could still operate.

An examination of the portions of the statutes under consideration shows that all there was left in the law upon which an allowance could still be made is breakage upon beer, ale, and porter in bottles, and leakage upon brandy and other spirituous liquors in casks.

The rule of law is well established that effect is to be given to all the words of a statute, if the same can be done. Effect, therefore, is to be given to the limiting words "so much of," if it can be done. It is to be supposed that Congress intended that those words were to have effect upon something.

It is an equally well established rule that repeals by implication are not to be inferred, but they must be clear and explicit. It must be the clear language of the statute that the repeal should extend to all articles claimed to be within the purview of its provisions. It is to be noticed that the repealing clause above quoted only repeals the arbitrary allowance of a certain percentage for breakage on wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors in bottles, and provides instead thereof for an allowance for breakage, to be ascertained by actual count. If, therefore, the repealing clause is held to cover beer, ale, and porter, no allowance can be made for breakage thereon in either form, for these articles are not embraced in the enumeration of articles upon which allowance for breakage by actual count is still to be made.

The repeal enacted in the act of 1870 is therefore in no sense, taking the whole clause together, an absolute repeal of allowance for breakage, but only one form of allowance, and, as it seems to me very clearly, even then only to affect such articles as are the subject-matter of that portion of the act, to wit, wines in casks, and wines, brandy, and other spirituous liquors in bottles.

I return the papers herewith.

I am, very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., March 18, 1873.

SIR: Among the questions which arose in carrying into effect the tariff act of July 14, 1870, was that of the repeal of the arbitrary allowances specified in the fifty-ninth section of the act of March 2, 1799.

By the fifth paragraph of the circular of the Department, dated December 28, 1870, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, it was held that "the repeal by said act of the fifty-ninth section of the act of March 2, 1799, operates to prevent any allowances for leakage and breakage thereunder upon goods of the character mentioned in said section of the act of 1799."

These instructions were issued for the general guidance of customs officers, and were based upon the idea that the act of July 14, 1870, prohibited all arbitrary allowances for leakage and breakage, leaving in force and re-enacting so much of the act of 1799 as allowed the actual leakage and breakage, to be properly ascertained.

From the action of the collectors, under these instructions, numerous appeals have been taken as to the right of ale, beer, and porter, in bottles, and liquors in casks, to such allowance, followed by suit to recover the excess of duties claimed, the Department having affirmed the decisions of the collectors.

In one of these cases, that of George Miln vs. Thomas Murphy, upon beer, ale, and porter, which arose at your port, Mr. A. R. Culver, attorney for the plaintiff, has submitted a communication, dated January 30, 1873, reviewing the law and the decisions of the courts bearing upon the case, and asking for a reversal of said ruling so far as it applied to the articles above named, and offering to discontinue all suits brought by him in the premises upon payment of the amount claimed for such allowances, with interest and actual disbursements, waiving all other claims and questions of law involved therein.

Mr. Culver's communication was duly referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury, who has given the matter due examination and stated his conclusions of law in a communication dated the 26th ultimo, a copy of which is herewith inclosed, which conclusions you will see are favorable to the claim of the parties.

His views may be summarized as follows: The 21st section of the act of July 14, 1870, repeals only the arbitrary allowances of certain percentage provided by the act of 1799, for breakage and leakage of wines in casks and bottles, and for breakage on brandy and other spirituous liquors in bottles, and leaves the arbitrary allowances for breakage specified in said section of the act of 1799 still to be made on beer, ale, and porter in bottles, and for leakage on liquors in casks.

Upon a review of the case, the Department accepts the conclusions of the Solicitor as the proper rule of action to be observed in the premises, and directs that your practice be changed to conform thereto.

The necessary steps will also be taken by you to refund the excess of duties exacted, but in cases only where all the requirements of law have been fully complied with, upon the suits being discontinued on the terms before mentioned. This, however, of course, will be limited to cases where the allowance for actual leakage or breakage was not made on liquidation of the entry.

A circular of instructions will shortly be sent to collectors and other officers of the customs to make the practice upon the subject uniform.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,

EXHIBIT No. 5.—WINES.

REFUND OF DUTY ON WINES.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

The 21st section of the act of July 14, 1870, imposes duty on still-wines in bottles, as follows:

On wines of all kinds imported in bottles and otherwise herein provided for, the same rate per gallon as wines imported in casks, but all bottles containing one quart or less than one quart and more than one pint shall be held to contain one quart, and all bottles containing one pint or less shall be held to contain one pint, and shall pay in addition three cents for each bottle. Then follows a provision for champagne and all other sparkling wines, in bottles, at $6 per dozen for quarts, $3 per dozen for pints, and $1.50 per dozen for half pints.

Under this statute three questions came up for decision by the Department:

1st. Whether an ad-valorem duty was a rate per gallon, so as to render wines in bottles valued at over one dollar per gallon liable to the duty of 25 per cent. imposed on that kind of wine in casks.

2d. Whether the cost of the bottles should be added to the cost of the wine to determine its grade for duty.

3d. Whether the quantity of wine contained in bottles holding less than one quart and more than one pint should be taken at any less value than the value of an actual quart, for the purpose of determining whether the wine was worth under or over forty cents, or under or over one dollar per gallon, so as to determine the rate of duty to be paid thereon, or, in other words, whether the arbitrary gallon prescribed by said provision of law should, for the purpose mentioned, be taken at any different value from that of an actual gallon, at the time and place of exportation.

Upon the first two points the Department decided in the affirmative, and upon the latter in the negative, so that the effect of such ruling on the last point named was, first, to have the value of the actual gallon ascertained so as to determine the rate of duty, and then apply that rate to as many gallons as were found in the importation, according to the rule laid down by said section of law.

Copies of decisions hereto annexed, marked A, B, and C.

From these rulings appeals were taken by importers followed by suit, and at a term of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, held in February, 1873, at the city of New York, the case of Bensusan vs. Murphy, which involved all the points of law before named was brought on for argument, upon an agreed statement of facts, which resulted in a decision adverse to the Government, upon the first and third points named, leaving the second undecided.

Copy of decision with agreed statement of facts annexed, marked D.

The counsel for the importers, Messrs. Chase, Hartley & Coleman, thereupon made application to have the decision of the court acquiesced in, copy marked E, and upon submission of the matter to the district attorney at New York, and the Solicitor of the Treasury, those officers recommended an acquiescence in this decision without taking the case to the Supreme Court, as per copies of letters hereto annexed, marked F and G.

Upon due consideration, I decided to adopt their recommendations, and gave instructions to the collector at New York accordingly; copy marked H.

It will be seen that the statute of 1870, as thus construed, so far as it prescribes that bottles containing more than a pint and less than a quart shall be held to contain a quart confers a benefit upon importers, as in many cases wine which is worth per actual gallon over forty cents, is by this process reduced to below forty cents, and made to pay only twenty-five cents instead of sixty cents per gallon, while the quantity upon which duty is assessed is seldom more than five statutory quarts to the actual gallon, which in such a case would effect a reduction in the duties to the extent of nearly fifty per cent. below that which would have accrued under the rule first adopted by the Department.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
April 7, 1871.

SIR: Messrs. Schultze & Tailer have appealed (27) from your decision assessing duty at the rate of one dollar per gallon, and twenty-five per centum ad valorem on certain claret wine in bottles withdrawn by them from warehouse, on January 28, 1871.

It appears that the wine in question was returned by the appraiser as valued at over one dollar per gallon, and that you thereupon assessed duty at the rates aforesaid, in accordance with the 21st section of the act of July 14, 1870, which provides that all wines in bottles, excepting champagne and other sparkling wines, shall pay the same rates of duty as if imported in casks, which, as the value of the said wines over one dollar per gallon, is "one dollar per gallon and, in addition thereto, 25 per centum ad valorem."

Your decision is hereby affirmed.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary.

THOS. MURPHY, Esq.,
Collector, &c., New York.

B.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
May 22, 1871.

SIR: Messrs. J. H. Brower & Co. have appealed (447) from your decision assessing duty at the rate of 60 cents. per gallon and three cents per bottle on certain wine in bottles imported by them into your port per Concordia, March 24, 1871.

It appears that the appraiser returned the value of the wine in question as being over forty cents, and not over one dollar per gallon, (the said value being obtained by adding to the value of the wine the cost of the bottles, cases, &c., as prescribed by the 9th section of the act of July 28, 1866,) thereby, under the 21st section of the act of July 14, 1870, making it liable to duty at the rate aforesaid of 60 cents per gallon, as well as by reason of it being in bottles, to the specific duty of three cents for each bottle.

Your decision, therefore, is hereby affirmed.

I am, very respectfully,

——— ———
Secretary.

THOS. MURPHY, Esq.,
Collector, &c., New York.

C.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 13, 1870.

SIR: Referring to the letter of Messrs. Ives, Beecher & Co., of the 8th instant, addressed to you, and by you referred to this Department, presenting certain questions touching the duty on claret wines, under the act approved July 14, 1870, I have to state that said wines, whether in casks or bottles, will be graded for duty at their value per actual gallon in the country of exportation, and what is such value per actual gallon, is a question for the appraiser to determine.

The provision in said act, which prescribes that all bottles containing one quart, of less than one quart and more than one pint, shall be held to contain one quart, and all bottles containing one pint or less, shall be held to contain one pint, does not enter into or affect the principle above mentioned, nor does the fact that a case of wine of one dozen bottles containing two and one-quarter or two and a half gallons, can be purchased for a less sum than a case of three gallons, affect or alter the grade of the former for assessment of duty, which must be by its value per actual gallon.

The provision of law referred to affects only the quantity upon which duty is to be assessed.

I am, very respectfully,

GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary.

C. R. CORNWELL,
Washington, D. C.

Similar instructions were soon afterward given to collectors of customs.

D.

AGREED STATEMENT OF FACTS.

The plaintiff imported from Bordeaux, in France, and entered at the custom-house, at New York, for consumption, thirty-seven cases claret wine in bottles, on the 3d day of April, 1871. The invoice duty presented in entry, stated the cost of the wine to be 337 francs and 50 centimes, and the price of the bottles and amount of charges due to be 166 francs and 50 centimes, and the commission 12 francs and 90 centimes, making the total value 516.90 francs, or $96, United States coin. The charge of 13 francs for consul's certificate was also included in the invoice, but not stated in the entry. The appraisers returned the invoice to the collector, noting thereon: "Wine, in cases of twelve bottles each, two and one-quarter gallons to the case, $1.25 per cent., 3 cents. The collector caused the entry to be liquidated as follows:

111 gallons of wine, at $1 per gallon	$111 00
$96, (value claimed,) at 25 per cent. ad valorem	24 00
444 bottles, at 3 cents	13 32
Total duty	148 32

exacting a duty of $68.40 in excess of the duty estimated on entry, which was paid under protest, before the commencement of this suit, to get the goods. Each case contained two and one-quarter standard gallons. The plaintiff made protest and appeal in due time against the rate and amount of duty, pursuant to the provisions of sections 14 and 15, act of June 30, 1864, copies of which protests are hereto annexed and admitted. The Secretary of the Treasury having affirmed on said appeal the decision of the collector, this action was brought within ninety days after such affirmance to recover $68.40, gold duty, claimed to have been illegally exacted. As the invoice does not separate the price of the bottles from the charges, it is admitted that the dutiable value of said bottles is at the rate of 20 francs per one hundred, and, for the one hundred and forty-four bottles, 88.80 francs, being $16.51 in coin.

It is admitted that the protests, (to be produced and read in the trial, subject to objection to sufficiency,) and the appeals and bills of particulars required by law, have been filed, and that the action is properly brought. The entry, liquidations thereon, and invoice, appraiser's return, and protest, shall be taken as a part of this case, and may be referred to by either party on argument. It is also admitted that defendant was, during all the time named in this case, the collector of customs at the port of New York, duly qualified and acting, and is the person referred to as such in the pleadings and papers herein; also that the said thirty-seven cases of claret wine and the bottles containing the same are liable to duty as "wine of all kinds imported in bottles, and not otherwise herein provided for," under section 21, act of July 14, 1870. Chase, Hartley & Coleman, attorneys for plaintiff; Noah Davis, attorney for defendant.

The protests referred to in the foregoing, and which were produced and read on the trial, are as follows, viz:

"NEW YORK, May 6, 1871.

"SIR: I hereby protest against your assessment of duty at $1 per gallon and 25 per cent. ad valorem on certain wine in bottle (not champagne or sparkling) imported in the Daniel Webster from Bordeaux, and entered by the undersigned for consumption April 3, 1871, because—

"First. The act of July 14, 1870, section 21, under which duty is assessed, imposes no ad-valorem duty on wine in bottles.

"Second. Because the quantity of said wine is fixed under said law at three gallons per case, (owing to the size of the bottles;) but, in estimating the value per gallon, you have taken a less quantity than three gallons as the contents of each case, thereby increasing the value of said wine per gallon beyond $1, and illegally increasing the rate of duty from 60 cents to $1 per gallon, with the further addition illegally made by you of 25 per cent. ad-valorem.

"We pay the excess exacted under compulsion solely to get the goods.

"Very respectfully,

"JOS. BENSUSAN, JR.,
"By CHASE, HARTLEY & COLEMAN,
"Attorneys, 51 William Street.

"COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, New York."

"NEW YORK, May 13, 1871.

"SIR: In addition to objections named in my protest of the 6th instant against the rate and amount of duty assessed by you on my entry of wine in bottles, per Daniel Webster, for consumption, dated April 3, 1871, I protest also against the value of the bottles being included in the dutiable value of the wine, as they pay a separate duty as bottles, and against the inclusion of the price of the consular certificate in said dutiable value. I have paid the amount exacted, over 60 cents per gallon duty on said wine, under compulsion to get the goods.

"Very respectfully,

"JOSEPH BENSUSAN, JR.,
"By CHASE, HARTLEY, & COLEMAN,
"Attorneys, 51 William Street.

"COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, New York City."

Judge Shipman's decision.

The duties on the merchandise in question were levied under the act of July 14, 1870, (Stats. at Large, vol. 16, p, 262, sec. 21,) which, so far as applicable to this class of goods, is as follows: "After the 31st day of December, 1870, in lieu of the duties now imposed by law on the articles hereinafter enumerated or provided for, imported from foreign countries, there shall be levied, collected and paid the following duties and rates of duties, that is to say: On all wines imported in casks, containing not more than 22 per centum of alcohol, and valued at not exceeding 40 cents per gallon, 25 cents per gallon; valued at over 40 cents, and not over $1 per gallon, 60 cents per gallon; valued at over $1 per gallon, $1 per gallon, and in addition thereto 25 per centum ad valorem. On wines of all kinds imported in bottles, and not otherwise herein provided for, the same rate per gallon as wines imported in casks; but all bottles containing 1 quart, or less than 1 quart and more than 1 pint, shall be held to contain 1 quart, and all bottles containing 1 pint or less shall be held to contain 1 pint, and shall pay an additional 3 cents for each bottle."

The first question raised by the protest is, whether this wine in bottles is subject to an ad-valorem duty. The statute provides that "wines of all kinds, imported in bottles and not herein otherwise provided for, shall be subject to the same rate per gallon as wines imported in casks; but all bottles containing one quart, or less than one quart and more than one pint, shall be held to contain one pint, and shall pay, in addition. 3 c. for each bottle." I think it very clear that the words "the same rate per gallon" refer exclusively to the specific duty imposed on wines in casks, and do not include the ad-valorem duty. The latter can, in no just sense, be regarded as a "rate per gallon." The rate per gallon is specific and fixed by the clause regulating the duty on wine imported in casks, at 25 cents, 60 cents, and $1 per gallon; the specific rate to be applied to each gallon to be ascertained by fixing the commercial value of the gallon. The act then adds to all wines imported in casks an ad-valorem duty of 25 per cent.

These specific rates imposed on wines imported in casks are then applied to wines imported in bottles, but the ad-valorem duty is not referred to in connection with the latter. If Congress had intended to impose on wine imported in bottles both the specific and ad-valorem duties laid on wines imported in casks, they certainly would have so declared in unambiguous terms. That could have been done by simply, in so many words, subjecting wine in bottles to the same rate of duty as wine in casks. I am satisfied that the words "the same rate per gallon" were used only with reference to the specific rate applied to each gallon, and are limited by plain terms to that, and that consequently the wine in question was only liable to the same specific duty on the gallon as it would have been had the importation been in casks instead of bottles. (Laurence vs. Caswell, 13 How., 488.) The exaction, therefore, of the 25 per cent. ad-valorem was not warranted by the statute, and the plaintiff is entitled to recover it back in this suit. The remaining question is whether the rate of duty levied by the collector on each gallon is the one prescribed by the statute. He required the plaintiff to pay $1 upon each gallon. The plaintiff insists that 60 cents per gallon was the rate to which this wine was subject. By the statement of facts agreed upon it is undeniable that the total value of the wine in question was $96. There were 111 gallons. The value per gallon was, therefore, less than $1; and, if this statement is as correct as it is simple, it is obvious that 60 cents is the rate of duty which the law applied to each gallon, instead of $1, applied by the collector. Now, the statement of facts, after giving the total dutiable value of the 37 cases, including the price of the bottles, and the amount of charges as $96, states that "the appraisers returned the invoice to the collector, noting thereon, 'Wine in cases of 12 bottles each, 2¼ gallons to the case, $1.25 per cent., 3 cents.'" The collector then proceeded to liquidate the entry. In conformity to the statute, he fixed the number of gallons at 3 in each case of 12 bottles, in lieu of 24 noted by the appraisers. The appraisers had evidently given the number of standard or commercial gallons, and the number of bottles in each case, in order to enable the collector to fix the number of gallons which they were to be held to contain under this statute, for the purpose of levying the duty prescribed. The return of the appraisers showed that each bottle contained more than one pint and less than one quart. By the statute the collector was to hold them as containing one quart each, and he thus fixed the quantity at three gallons for each case, 111 gallons in all. On this quantity he levied a duty of $111—$1 per gallon. Obviously, he took the value of the commercial or standard gallon as noted by the appraisers, which was $1, and then applied the value of that gallon to the statutory gallon, as arbitrarily fixed by this act.

There is no pretense that there was any re-appraisement or re-valuation. The whole process was arithmetical. The noting on the invoice by the appraisers of $1 is of no importance. It was erroneous and in conflict with the other part of their return. It was based upon the value of the commercial or standard gallon, and arrived at by taking that as the measure of quantity by which the value of the wine per gallon was to be ascertained for the purpose of levying the duty. But the duty prescribed by the statute upon each gallon is to be ascertained by arbitrary rule fixed by the law itself. Nothing can be clearer than that the appraiser took the standard of commercial gallon as the rule of determining the quantity. The number of such gallons in the whole importation was 83¼. The value of the whole importation was $96. Therefore the value of each gallon was over $1. But, applying the rule prescribed by the statute, which declares that "all bottles containing one quart, or less than one quart, and more than one pint, shall be held to contain one quart," this importation contained 111 gallons. The collector so held in fixing the quantity upon which he levied the duty. But the value of the whole invoice was but $96. The value of the gallon upon which duty was to be levied must, therefore, have been less than one $1, and consequently liable only to a duty of 60 cents. It will be noted that the value of the whole importation is not only fixed by the agreed statement of facts at $96, but the collector in estimating the amount of the ad-valorem duty which he levied, took that sum as the basis of his calculation. It is obvious that this plain reading of the statute works neither injustice to the Government nor any unequal discrimination between wine imported in casks and that imported in bottles. It is a fact within the common knowledge of all engaged in this branch of trade, and equally within the knowledge of Congress when it passed this act, that bottles in which wines are imported do not contain exactly a pint or a quart; that what are called "pints" contain less than a pint and those called "quarts" less than a quart. And, consequently, the statute arbitrarily and justly enacted that though in fact these bottles might contain less than a pint or quart respectively, still they should be held in the eye of the law for the purpose of levying duty, to severally hold the full measure which their denomination would indicate. Some such rule is necessary to avoid the endless trouble of gauging the contents of each bottle. Thus, in importations of wine in bottles of this character, the Government secures a duty of about 25 per cent. beyond what it would receive by way of specific duty on wine in casks. This is equivalent to the ad-valorem duty levied on wine in casks, but omitted on wine in bottles, and shows both the equality and harmony of this view of the different clauses of the act under consideration.

On applying the statute governing this case to the agreed statement of facts submitted the conclusion is that the duties levied should have been on the 111 gallons of wine in the 444 bottles, 60 cents per gallon, making $66.66, and three cents each on the bottles, amounting to $13.32, making a total of $79.92, and no more. The excess which the collector levied over this sum, to wit, $63.40, was illegally enacted and the plaintiff is entitled to recover it back, with costs. Let judgment be entered accordingly.

NEW YORK, March 17, 1873.

SIR: We beg to inclose a printed copy of the decision of the United States circuit court at New York, in the case of Joseph Bensusan, jr., vs. Thomas Murphy, affecting the rates of duty upon still wine in cases, and respectfully request that the Department will consider and acquiesce in the same.

We offer to discontinue all pending cases subject to settlement at the custom-house upon the usual terms, upon your acquiescence in said decision.

The case was very fully argued by Judge Davis for the collector, in May last, (since when it has been pending,) and we think that no useful purpose would be subserved by continuing the litigation.

Very respectfully,

CHASE, HARTLEY & COLEMAN,
Attys. for JOS. BENSUSAN.

Hon. SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK,
New York, April 10, 1873.

SIR: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of the 8th instant, checked "H. B. J.," referring to a letter of Messrs. Chase, Hartley & Coleman, asking the Department to acquiesce in the decision of the circuit court as to the case of Bensusan against Murphy, in regard to the rate of duty on certain still-wines in bottles. Under date of the 31st of March, the Solicitor of the Treasury acknowledged the receipt of a letter of the 17th, from myself, in which I transmitted a copy of the opinion and expressed my views upon the subject, and informed me that he was inclined to acquiesce in the opinion of Judge Shipman, and that "no steps need be taken, therefore, to have his decision reversed by a higher court." If I am to understand from your letter that the question is still considered as open, I can, while referring to the views expressed in my letter already referred to, only say that, so far as Judge Shipman decides the questions involved, I do not think that there is any probability that on an appeal, or the trial of another case, his decision would be reversed. As I pointed out in my letter, Judge Shipman does not decide one question which the case presented.

I am unable to say how far that question—to wit, whether the cost of the bottles is to be included in the dutiable value—is of importance. In the view taken by the Department it seems to me that that alone does not present any reason why the decision should not be acquiesced in.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. BLISS, JR.,
U. S. Attorney.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., April 4, 1873.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 19th ultimo, requesting the views of this office as to further proceedings in the case of Bensusan against Murphy, affecting the rates of duty upon wines in bottles, the United States circuit court at New York having decided adversely to the collector upon two material points in the case; and to say, that upon a careful examination of the question involved and of the decision of the court, a full report being on file in this office, I am of the opinion that the Government should acquiesce in that decision, and that the case should not go to the Supreme Court.

In answer to a communication received from the United States attorney upon the subject, I have so advised that officer.

The papers are herewith returned.

I am, very respectfully,

J. H. ROBINSON,
Acting Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., April 15, 1873.

SIR: In the Internal Revenue Record, for March 15, 1873, appears a copy of the opinion of Judge Shipman, of the United States circuit court, in the case of Bensusan vs. Murphy, tried recently in the southern district of New York, brought to recover certain duties exacted by the defendant while collector of the port of New York, on an importation of claret wine in bottles made by the plaintiff in April, 1871.

The first point in the case decided by the court involves the liability of still-wines in bottles valued at over one dollar per gallon to an ad valorem duty under the twenty-first section of the act of July 14, 1870. That section of law provides that, upon wines of all kinds imported in bottles, and not otherwise therein provided for, there shall be exacted a duty at the same rate per gallon as on wines imported in casks. By reference to said decision, it will be seen that the court held that the words "the same rate per gallon" refer exclusively to the specific duty imposed on wines in casks and do not include the ad valorem duty.

In this doctrine the Department acquiesces, and you will hereafter govern your official action in accordance therewith; consequently the ad valorem duty thereon will not be exacted.

The second point passed upon by the court is in regard to the proper interpretation of that part of said act which prescribes that "all bottles (in which still-wines are imported) containing one quart or less than one quart, and more than one pint, shall be held to contain one quart, and all bottles containing one pint or less shall be held to contain one pint." Upon this point the court decided that the gallon thus arbitrarily created should be taken not only as the quantity upon which the proper rate of duty is to be assessed, but that the value of such gallon must be taken as the basis for determining the grade of the wine for duty; reference being also had to the value of the ordinary or actual gallon in the foreign country.

To follow out this doctrine it would seem to be necessary to ascertain the actual quantity of the wine in the bottles, as otherwise it would be impossible to determine the value of such a gallon in the foreign country of export as compared with the ordinary or actual gallon. This interpretation of the law is at variance with the opinions heretofore entertained in this office in this regard, but all the papers in the case having been submitted to the Solicitor of the Treasury, that officer advises an acquiescence in said decision, and the United States district attorney for the southern district of New York also holds to the same view.

The Department is not disposed, therefore, to act contrary to the views of its proper law-officers in the premises, and this part of the decision will be also adopted as the rule for your official action on future importations of this article. Upon past importations where the excess of duties claimed under either of the points so decided has been paid under protest and the other requirements of the fourteenth section of the act of June 30, 1864, have been complied with, the necessary certified statements will be made up and forwarded for a return thereof, upon the suits being discontinued, with an allowance for actual disbursements and the usual fee for discontinuance.

EXHIBIT No. 6.—SILK CRAPE.

REFUND OF TEN PER CENT. DUTY ON SILK CRAPES.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

The act of June 30, 1864, imposes a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem on "all dress and piece silks;" and on all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component of chief value, not otherwise provided for, 50 per cent. ad valorem.

Soon after the passage of the act of June 30, 1864, an appeal was taken by certain parties to this Department upon an importation of silk crape in the piece, which was classified by the collector at the port of importation as subject to 60 per cent. duty as "piece silks," being all of silk and in the piece, while the parties claimed that the article was subject only to 50 per cent. duty as manufactures of silk not otherwise provided for, the article, according to their statements, not being recognized commercially as "silks."

The then Secretary of the Treasury affirmed the decision of the collector under which 60 per cent. was charged, as per copy annexed, marked A, and dated October 20, 1864.

The ruling thus made was followed by a considerable number of appeals, and by suits to recover the amount paid beyond 50 per cent.

At a term of the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, held at New York in December, 1870, the case of Lottimer vs. Smythe, which involved the question before mentioned, was brought on for trial before Judge Woodruff and a jury, which trial resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

In November, 1871, the same case was again tried, and resulted in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, under the charge of the court, that if the goods in question were found not to be known in commercial language as "silks," judgment should be for the plaintiff. The case is reported at length on page 12, vol. 17 of the Internal Revenue Record. The importers through their counsel having requested the Department to acquiesce in the verdict thus rendered, the matter was submitted to the district attorney at New York and to the Solicitor of the Treasury, and I annex copies of their letters upon the subject, marked B and C, in which they favor granting the application.

After due consideration I decided to concur in their recommendation, and I therefore gave instructions accordingly. (Copy annexed, marked D.)

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, October 20, 1864.

SIR: Messrs. Bécar, Napier & Co. have appealed (No. 2351) from your decision assessing duty at the rate of 60 per cent. on certain "silk crapes" imported by them from Liverpool per steamer Louisiana, and claim that the proper rate of duty should be 50 per cent., for the reason that "silk crapes are not known in trade as 'piece-silks,' or 'silks in the piece,' and are not so in reality, as the process of manufacture makes them an entirely different article—an article as distinct in itself as silk laces. As it is not enumerated among the articles which are distinct in their manufacture from dress and piece silks, we claim that they should be returned by the appraisers as 'manufactures of silk not otherwise provided for,' and pay a duty of 50 per cent."

Section 8 of the tariff of June 30, 1864, imposes a duty of 60 per cent. ad valorem "on all dress and piece silks," &c. In the same section it is provided that a duty of 50 per cent. ad valorem shall be imposed "on all manufactures of silk, or of which silk is the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for, fifty per cent. ad valorem." Under this latter provision Messrs. Bécar, Napier & Co. claim to enter the "silk crapes" in question.

Silk crape is undoubtedly a manufacture of silk, and this is true of all silks in the piece; but a distinction is made in the tariff between silk in the piece and a manufacture of silk, so that all silks in the piece, by whatever name or description designated, must be classed and are liable to 60 per cent. ad valorem duty.

Your decision is hereby affirmed.

I am, very respectfully,

W. P. FESSENDEN,
Secretary of the Treasury.

SIMEON DRAPER, Esq.,
Collector, New York.

OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF THE UNITED STATES
FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK,
New York, June 25, 1872.

SIR: My constant engagements in court have prevented an earlier answer to your letter, of May 13th ultimo, in relation to the cases now pending against the collector at New York, and known as the silk-crape cases, and asking my views as to continuing the defenses under the circumstances stated in the letter of Mr. Solicitor Banfield, a copy of which you inclose.

Mr. Banfield's letter is mistaken in supposing that two cases involving the question have been tried, both of which have resulted adversely to the Government. The facts are that the same case has been tried twice; on the first trial the jury failed to agree, on the second a verdict was found for the plaintiff. On both occasions the trial took place before Judge Woodruff, to whose rulings of law there seemed to be no just ground of exception. I had the best of reasons for saying that the judge was not well satisfied with the verdict. The question became one purely of fact, and it must be conceded that there was much conflicting evidence, so much at least that the court declined to entertain a motion on its own minutes to set aside the verdict as against the weight of evidence.

There is great force in the suggestion of the Solicitor that if the verdict on the trial of another case should be obtained in favor of the Government, other parties interested in the question would not acquiesce, but insist upon again taking the chances of obtaining a verdict in their own favor.

The question in the cases is a somewhat singular one, and affords the plaintiff a fine opportunity to avail himself of the popular idea that "crapes" are not known in the retail trade as "silks" to common purchasers, and are not called by that name.

I confess my impression is that unless the court will construe the statute as matter of law to include all goods made in the piece of which the material is silk within the phrase "piece silks," the probabilities are that juries will find against the Government. When I wrote my former letter I had fears that, owing to peculiar circumstances, (which I have orally explained to the Solicitor,) the verdict might have gone against me through some default of mine, and I felt anxious to retry the question on that account. But, on reviewing the whole ground, I am not able to see that the trial was not a fair one, nor to discern any satisfactory assurance that a contrary result can be produced.

I think it my duty, therefore, to say that I shall cheerfully acquiesce in your conclusion if it be against the views of my former letter and in favor of submitting to the result of the case already tried.

I am, very respectfully,

NOAH DAVIS,
United States Attorney.

Hon. GEO. S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

C.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., April 19, 1874.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, inclosing a communication from B. L. Luddington, with accompanying papers, which have been presented with a view of procuring a settlement of certain suits pending in the United States circuit court at New York for refund of duties on silk crapes, upon the basis of the verdict rendered in the case of Lottimer vs. Smythe, recently tried.

You desire to be informed whether, in the light of the papers now presented, there appears to me any valid reason for adopting any other course of action than that recommended by the Assistant Solicitor in his letter addressed to you on the 29th of January last.

It appears that two cases have now been tried, involving the question of the proper rate of duty upon silk crapes. Both these trials resulted adversely to the Government. On the first trial the jury disagreed. Notwithstanding this fact, the United States attorney has advised the Department not to acquiesce in these verdicts, but to persist in the trial of another case. It was in view of this recommendation of the United States attorney, I apprehend, that the letter of the 29th of January last was written. My opinion is that it is not the duty of the Department to insist upon repeated trials in this class of suits, except for very urgent reasons. When a case has been presented to a court and jury fully and fairly, and there is no reasonable expectation of obtaining a different verdict, upon substantial grounds, by further trial, and there is no reason for taking exceptions to the rulings of the court, I cannot well see why there should be any further contest over the question. I have no doubt that the rule has hitherto prevailed in the Department to acquiesce in the result of test cases where the trial has been a full and fair one. I have looked over the testimony and rulings of the court in this case, and fail to see any special reason for expecting a different result upon another trial. The rulings of the court were satisfactory to the Government. The evidence was somewhat conflicting, as it undoubtedly will continue to be, but upon the question of fact the jury have twice been adverse to the Government.

Of course it is possible that upon another trial a jury may find for the Government, but such finding would settle nothing. The plaintiffs would not acquiesce, but would persist in still another trial. The result would probably be that trials would continue, with possibly varying verdicts, as long as the court would consent to hear the cases.

With these views I should naturally advise that the result of the trials already had should be accepted by the Department as in accordance with what I believe has been the rule, and what I regard as a proper rule to govern this species of litigation.

I hesitate, however, to press this view in the present instance, as the district attorney has expressed so strong a desire to try another case of this same class, and may have reasons for expecting a different result, of which I am not aware.

The application of Mr. Luddington and accompanying papers are herewith returned.

I am, very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. GEO. S. BOUTWELL,

D.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 31, 1872.

SIR: Application has been made to this Department for a reversal of its decision whereby silk crapes are classified as silks in the piece, and charged with 60 per cent. duty, and for a refund of the difference in duty between that rate and the rate claimed by the parties, viz, 50 per cent. ad valorem.

A suit involving this question has been twice tried. On one trial the jury disagreed and on the other trial a verdict was had against the Government. The application of the parties has been submitted to the Solicitor of the Treasury and to the United States district attorney at New York, both of whom state substantially that, in their opinion, the question involved is mainly, if not entirely, one of commercial designation; and in view of the trials already had, and of the conflict of evidence likely to be presented on any further trial of the case, they do not recommend that a further trial be had.

As it is the desire of the Department to avoid undue litigation in doubtful cases, I am disposed to join in the view taken by the law-officers before mentioned, and have, therefore, to direct that your practice in this respect be changed, and that such goods hereafter be classified of 50 per centum as "manufactures of silk not otherwise provided for," and you are authorized to prepare the necessary certified statements for the refund to the importers of the amounts found due them upon certificates of discontinuance of the various suits being filed; and also in cases where protests and appeal have been duly filed and no suits instituted where time for commencement of suit has not expired.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary.

EXHIBIT No. 7.—FRUIT.

REFUND OF DUTY ON FRUITS.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

The free list of the tariff act of June 6, 1872, contains the following provision:

"Fruit, plants, tropical and semi-tropical, for the purpose of propagation or cultivation."

This provision went into force on the 1st of August, 1872, and soon thereafter parties in New York appealed from the assessment of duty upon oranges, lemons, and other perishable fruit, which the collectors charged with duty under the act of July 14, 1870; the claim of the importers being based upon the ground that the provision for fruit in said free list was absolute and had no connection with the qualifying words which follow.

The Department, however, being then of opinion that the qualifying words, "tropical and semi-tropical for propagation or cultivation," qualified as well fruit as plants, declined to accede to the position taken by the importers, and affirmed the decision of the collector. (Copy of decision, dated September 23, 1872, marked A.)

A considerable number of appeals followed this decision, and the collector's decision continued to be affirmed by the Department.

Under date of October 31, 1873, Mr. A. R. Culver, of counsel for the importers, submitted to the Department two briefs, (copies inclosed, marked B and C,) requesting a review of the ruling of the Department in the premises.

The question involved being purely one of law, the papers were submitted to the Solicitor of the Treasury for his opinion in regard thereto, and under date of December 2, 1873, the Solicitor returned said documents with an opinion in writing, (copy inclosed, marked D,) in which he took the ground that the claim of the importers was in accordance with a fair and just construction of the law, and that the effect of such law unquestionably was to place fruit upon the free list.

The opinion of the Solicitor was accordingly adopted as the rule of action by me, I concurring with him in the view that a fair interpretation of the law sustained the opinion thus given, and that no advantage to the Government was likely to follow a trial of the question in the courts.

Instruction were therefore given to that effect to the collectors of customs, under date of December 3, 1873. (Copy of decision, marked E.)

In order, however, to satisfy myself further upon the matter, I caused telegrams to be sent to the collectors at the several ports on the 10th of December to suspend action under said instructions until otherwise ordered, and on the 11th of December, my opinions having on further consideration of the subject undergone no change, I telegraphed to the several collectors to carry out said decision.

The instructions to refund overpaid duties were confined to those cases in which importers had properly protected their rights by protest and appeal in the manner required by the 14th section of the act of June 30, 1864, and no refunds have been made in cases other than those which were also covered by suit, where suit was necessary, except on entries which were unliquidated at the date of said decision, and on which deposits of duty had been made.

A.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 23, 1872.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 18th instant, reporting on the appeal (No. 5748, A) of Messrs. Chamberlain, Phelps & Co., from your decision assessing duty at the rate of 20 per cent. ad valorem on certain oranges and lemons imported by them per Alexandria, August 20; Egypt, August 5; Pollux, August 8, 1872; Spain, August 26, 1872.

It appears from your report that you assessed duty thereon in accordance with section 21, act July 14, 1870, which provides on oranges, lemons, pine apples, and grapes, a duty of 20 per cent. ad valorem.

Your decision, therefore, is hereby affirmed.

I am, very respectfully,

W. A. RICHARDSON,
Acting Secretary.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, New York.

B.

United States circuit court for southern district of New York

CHESTER A. ARTHUR, COLLECTOR of customs, &c. } Action commenced January 4, 1873

This is a suit brought by the plaintiffs against the defendant to recover money exacted by the latter, as collector of customs at the port of New York, on certain fruits imported under the following designations and rates of duty :]

Names of fruit.	Rate of duty.	Under what act levied.
Grapes	20 per cent.	Act July 14, 1870, § 21, 16 Stat., p. 265.
Lemons	20 per cent.	Act July 14, 1870, § 21, 16 Stat., p. 265.
Oranges	20 per cent.	Act July 14, 1870, § 21, 16 Stat., p. 265.

The plaintiffs contend that all the aforesaid articles are exempt from duty under the clause of the fifth section of the act of June 6, 1872, which enumerates "fruits plants, tropical and semi-tropical, for the purpose of propagation or cultivation." They are advised that this dispute between themselves and the defendant turns upon the following questions of fact and of law:

I. The question of fact is whether the articles named were known at the time of the enactment of the law of June 6, 1872, in trade and commerce, as "fruits."

II. The questions of law are:

(a) Whether the words "for the purpose of propagation or cultivation" apply to the word "fruits."

(b) Whether the word "fruits" in the act of 1872 includes bananas, grapes, lemons, limes, mangoes, oranges, pine-apples, plantains, and shaddocks, which are specially named in the act of July 14, 1870.

In respect to the first inquiry of fact, they submit that the accompanying certificates in writing of the largest importers and dealers in New York, who, under the revenue laws, must be considered experts in such question, leave no doubt that all the articles mentioned not only are in fact "fruits," but always have been commercially known as "fruits."

It is believed that the same certificates effectually dispose of the second point; for, Congress having used the word "fruits," the executive must give some sensible interpretation to the word, and it seems impossible to say that Congress intended to legislate about fruits imported for the purpose of propagation or cultivation, when the fact is, they are never imported for such purposes. Plants are imported for such a purpose, but never fruits. Indeed, one hardly needs to go to experts in trade or horticulture to learn how absurd would be an attempt to bring into this country "fruits" for the purpose of propagating or cultivating them; and such an absurdity it would be unjust to attribute to Congress. A "plant" may be propagated from ripe seeds, (which are provided for in the first section of the act of June 6, 1872,) but seeds in commerce and in botany are not "fruits." If the word in the law were "fruit" instead of "fruits," it would make no difference in the legal construction of the clause, because there is no difference in the significance of the two words.

The English statutes use the word "fruit" instead of "fruits." An "Act to consolidate the duties on customs," chapter CX, 23 and 24 Victoria, 1860, (see Law Journal, Statutes, 1857–'60, p. 224,) declares as follows:

"Fruit, not raw nor preserved in sugar, viz, currants, figs, fig-paste, plums, commonly called French plums and prunelloes, each the cwt., 7*s*.

"Fruit, dried or preserved, (except in sugar,) not otherwise described: Prunes, raisins, each the cwt., 7*s*."

The British free list embraces the following:

"Fruit, raw, dried and preserved, unenumerated, viz: Preserved, without sugar, in its own juice, or with salt, including tamarinds, however preserved, pound; raw, however preserved, bushel; dried, however preserved, bushel."

In a London publication for 1873, called "The Imperial Tariff," which is a manual used by the British customs officers, oranges and lemons are classed as free under the last-named designation of "fruit," raw, dried, &c.

In the same publication (page 26) is given an alphabetical list of certain unspecified imports, and the denominations under which they are to be entered, viz: Cherries, raw, as fruit; grapes, raw, as fruit; olives, raw, as fruit, (preserved with salt;) plantains; pomegranates.

These citations leave no doubt as to what, in the English law, is embraced under the term "fruit." The word "fruits" is employed in our statute as is the word "fruit" in the English, with a generic signification only.

III. If it be conceded that the articles in controversy are, as matter of fact, known in commerce and to the revenue laws as "fruits," and that the words "for the purpose of propagation or cultivation" do not apply to or qualify "fruits," then there was no warrant in law for the defendant to go back to the tariff act of 1870 to ascertain rates of duty chargeable on these articles, because the word "fruits," as used in 1872, sweeps into the free list everything commercially known as "fruits" at the date of the passage of that law.

Just this construction was given by the Treasury Department to the phrase "fruits, green, ripe, or dried," in the second section of the tariff act of 1857, which transferred fruits into Schedule G of the act of 1846, thereby taking the very description of articles now in dispute between the plaintiffs and defendant out of schedules where they were enumerated, eo nomine, as oranges, lemons, &c. And it will not be claimed that the qualifying words, "green, ripe, or dried," add to the comprehensiveness of the word "fruits" when unqualified.

It will be borne in mind that the act of June, 1872, was, as its title declares, enacted to "reduce duties on imports;" that the phrase of its enacting clause, "in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed by law," &c., is a direct repeal of duties heretofore levied on the articles, including fruits, named therein, (see Gossler's case, and Washington Mills vs. Russell, decided by Clifford, Shepley, and Lowell;) that neither bananas grapes, lemons, limes, mangoes, oranges, pine-apples, plantains, nor shaddocks are mentioned, eo nomine, in any other portion of that act; and the fifth section thereof distinctly declares that "fruits" shall be exempt from duty.

Upon general reasoning, therefore, as well as upon the precedent of the act of 1872, the word "fruits" in the act of 1872 (if unaccompanied in the same sentence by the words "for the purpose of propagation or cultivation") would repeal the rates levied in the act of July 14, 1870, on the above severally-named articles.

IV. It is ordinarily very unsatisfactory to endeavor to discover the intent of Congress by inquiring what are the history and several legislative steps of an enactment. There is little continuous thought in our tariff legislation. But it appears in this first report of the tariff bill of 1872 from the committee, (April 16, 1872,) the free clause reads, "fruits perishable, not dried or preserved and not otherwise specified."

The effect of this was to make ripe fruits exempt from duty if "not otherwise specified." The specification was not confined to this act of 1872, and therefore, under the clause, the collector might refer to other acts, as that of 1870, where certain fruits were dutiable. This, however, would defeat the evident intention of the committee to put ripe fruits on the free list. So it appears that in the bill, when recommitted and reported back, on May 31, 1872, the clause was amended by leaving the first word, "fruits," untouched, and striking out all after it, and inserting instead thereof, "plants tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation or cultivation." The reason of this amendment is probably stated in the remarks made on the bill by Mr. Sumner in the Senate. By its first section shrubs and plants were and are to pay a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem, unless "otherwise provided for." And while Congress was disposed to assess duty on all plants imported for trade, it was willing to exempt from duty all "plants, tropical and semi-tropical, imported for the purpose of propagation or cultivation." This, no doubt, is a true explanation of the change in the phraseology of this clause.

V. If it be claimed that there is sufficient obscurity and confusion in the language and punctuation of this clause as to leave room for doubt as to what Congress really intended, then the plaintiffs submit there is a well-recognized rule of interpretation of revenue statutes which must decide the inquiry in their favor. The latest exposition of this rule in the Federal courts is that made by Judge Blatchford in the cases of the United States vs. Ullman, (4 Benedict's District Court Reports, 553,) where he said: "That principle, enforced many times by the courts was well expressed by Mr. Justice Nelson in a case (Powers vs. Barney, 5 Blatch., C. C. R., 202) in which he said, in the circuit court for this district, that duties are never imposed upon a citizen in cases of serious ambiguity in the language of an act, or doubtful classification of articles, or vague or doubtful interpretation, and that in all such cases the construction must be in favor of the importer."

In an earlier case, tried in the circuit court for the southern district of New York, in the year 1840, and reported in the second volume of Executive Documents, first session Twenty-sixth Congress, document No. 49, page 32, where the question was whether articles were dutiable at 50 per cent. as ready-made clothing under the act of July 14, 1832, or at 25 per cent. as hosiery under the same act, Judge Betts, in giving the opinion of the court, said: "If, then, these articles might be indifferently placed under either class, and are known in trade as well by the one name as the other, then they are to be subjected to the lesser duty; because, if the description by which the impost is laid is ambiguous or susceptible of two interpretations, equally conformable to its general import, that one is to be adopted which is least burdensome to individuals. It is not to be supposed that Congress designed to impose the higher rate of duty where different ones may apply to the same subject, unless they express that intent by plain and definite language." At that time the Secretary of the Treasury transmitted to Congress reports of revenue cases received from the several district attorneys, and in transmitting this case, with the doctrine announced by Judge Betts, District Attorney B. F. Butler said: "Being satisfied with this charge, I did not take any exception to it."

Applying this well-settled rule of interpretation to the articles now under discussion, it cannot be doubted that the defendant was in error in the exaction of the duties in question, and that the plaintiffs are entitled to a refund of the money thus taken from them.

Respectfully submitted, by

ANDREW R. CULVER,
Attorney and Counsel for Plaintiffs.

United States circuit court, southern district of New York.

JOHN S. LAWRENCE ET AL. vs. CHESTER A. ARTHUR, COLLECTOR, &c. } Supplemental brief in behalf of the plaintiffs.

If it be contended that fruits which are particularly described by name in the act of 1870, section 21, are not included in the free list of the act of 1872, under the word "fruits," what commercial or reasonable application can be given to the word "fruits" as used by Congress in the act of 1872? That the word is to be taken in its ordinary and commercial meaning, and, being significant, must have full force and operation, are principles so well settled by judicial decisions and practice that they are not open for discussion.

The rules governing the construction of a doubtful statute are—

1. That the act must be construed according to the intention of the Congress which passed the act. The only rule, says Lord Chief-Justice Tindal, for the construction of acts of Parliament is, that they should be construed according to the intent of the Parliament which passed the act. (Dukedom of Sussex, 8 London Jur., 795; Herman vs. City of New York, 5 Sand., 16.)

"The reason of the law or of the treaty, that is to say, of the motive which led to the making of it, is the most certain clew to lead us to the discovery of its true meaning." (Vattel's Rule of Con. of Statutes; Sedgwick on Stat. and Con. Law, p. 272.)

"While it is the duty of the courts in construing statutes to give effect to the intent of the law-making power, and to seek for that intent in every legitimate way, yet it is to be sought, first of all, in the words and language employed, and if the words are free from ambiguity, and express clearly the sense of the framers, there is no occasion to resort to other means of interpretation."

"The natural and obvious meaning should be taken without resorting to subtile and forced construction. (Lieber's Pol. and Leg., H, 87; 2 Ruth. Inst., chap. 7, sec. 2; Story, Const., sec. 292; 4 Hill, 328; 20 Wendell, 561; McCloskey vs. Cromwell, N. Y., [1 Ker.,] 593.)

"Revenue and duty acts are to be construed according to the true import and meaning of their terms, and when the legislative intention is ascertained, that and that only is to be our guide in interpreting them." (United States vs. Breed, 1 Sumner, C. C. R., 160.)

When a statute is revised, some parts being omitted, the parts omitted are to be considered as annulled. (Pingee vs. Snell, 42 Maine, 53.)

That Congress intended to revise the twenty-first section of the act of 1870, which levied duties on oranges, lemons, &c., by name, is shown from the fact that cocoa-nuts are also named in said twenty-first section, and are transferred to the free list of the act of 1872 by name. Cocoa-nuts not being known commercially as fruit, it was necessary to name them specially, and this is conclusive evidence that Congress had the twenty-first section under consideration, and intended to transfer all the articles embraced in it to the free list.

It will also be observed that the duties on all dried fruits are reduced by this act, as follows, to wit:

Figs, from five cents to two and one-half cents per pound.
Currants, from two and one-half cents to one cent per pound.
Raisins, from five cents to two and one-half cents per pound.
Dates, from two cents to one cent per pound.
Prunes, from two and one-half cents to one cent per pound.

The act of 1872 as before stated, is entitled "An act to reduce duties on imports." In making the reductions Congress reduced the duties on all dried fruits, and what reason can be given why Congress did not intend to reduce the duties on green fruits as well, particularly when they have used language that includes green fruits, and when the words employed by Congress can have no practical meaning or application unless it is held to apply to and include green fruit?

The fifth section of the act of 1872 declares that fruits shall be exempt from duty, and the enacting clause of the act declares that the duties imposed by the act shall be in lieu of all duties, &c. This, as has already been shown in the brief to which this is supplemental, is a direct, positive, and unequivocal repeal of all duties and rates of duty imposed upon imported merchandise mentioned in said act.

Even if this were not so, under the decisions of the courts the word fruits in the act of 1872 would repeal the words oranges, lemons, &c., in the act of 1870.

"A statute revising the whole subject-matter of a former statute, and evidently intended as a substitute for it, will operate as a repeal of the former statute, although it contains no express words to that effect." (Farr vs. Brackett, 30 Vt., 1 Shaw, 344.)

"If a subsequent statute professes or manifestly intends to regulate the whole subject to which it relates, it repeals all former statutes, so far as it differs from them." (Gorham vs. Luckett, C. B. Mon., 146; Davies vs. Fairbairn, 3 Howard, 636; D. & L. Plank-Road Company vs. Allen, 16 Barbour, 15; Illinois and Michigan Canal vs. Chicago, 14 Illinois, 342.)

"In case of doubt between the authority and the individual, the benefit of the doubt, all other reasons being equal, ought to be given to the individual and not to the authority." (Liebers, 17, Rule of Con. of Statutes; Sedg. on Stat. and Con. Law, p. 289.)

"Statutes levying duties on citizens or subjects are to be construed most strongly against the Government and in favor of the citizen or subject, and their provisions are not to be extended by implication beyond the clear import of the language used." (United States vs. Wigglesworth, 2 Strong, C. C. R., 369; United States vs. Morse, 3 Story, C. C. R., 87.)

"Laws imposing duties are never construed beyond the natural import of the language used, and duties are never imposed upon the citizen upon doubtful interpretations, for every duty imposes a burden upon the public at large, and is construed strictly, and must be made out in a clear and determinate manner from the language of the statute." (Adams vs. Bancroft, 3 Sumner, C. C. R., 387.)

The late Chancellor Bibb, when Secretary of the Treasury, in a circular addressed to collectors and naval officers of the customs, dated August 5, 1844, says: "The sovereign power of taxation is the source from whence the most wide-spread wrongs, oppressions, and ruin of the people flow in all governments. The safeguard against the abuse of the taxing power of the Government intended by our Constitution is in confiding that power to the Congress. It would ill become the executive department to take money from the pockets of the people by implication and constructive enlargement of the acts of the legislature. When the Congress, in the exercise of their power of taxation, have not spoken expressly and clearly; when the words of the law leave room for rational doubt as to a higher or lower rate of taxation, the decision of the executive officer should be in favor of the lower rate. In so doing, the executive action is certainly within the limit prescribed by law. To take the highest rate of taxation in such dubious cases would be hazarding a supplement to the legislative will, and an inroad into the region of the legislative department. Such a mode of construction by the executive department would not be lenient and remedial, but onerous and penal."

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., December 2, 1873.

SIR: I am in receipt of your letter of the 10th ultimo, inclosing a communication from A. R. Culver, esq., with an accompanying brief upon the question of the dutiable classification of oranges and lemons.

The question arises under a clause of the act of June 6, 1872, entitled "An act to reduce duties upon imports, and to reduce internal revenue, and for other purposes," which places in the free list, among numerous other articles, "fruit, plants tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation or cultivation." It is stated that upon the first case, which arose under this clause, it was held by the officers of the customs that the words "tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation and cultivation" were held to qualify both the preceding words "fruit" and "plants." This decision was confirmed by the Secretary of the Treasury on that ground, but subsequent investigation seemed to show that "fruit" was never imported for propagation or cultivation. The Department has therefore allowed subsequent appeals to be filed, without decision, to await further action on the part of the importers looking to a settlement of the question.

Such action has now been taken, and the Department is asked to reconsider and reverse the former decision and decide the subsequent appeals now on file accordingly.

Two questions are, therefore, proposed for my opinion:

First. Should the words "tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation and cultivation," be construed as qualifying both the preceding words "fruit" and "plants," or only the immediately preceding word "plants?"

Second. If the qualifying words shall be held as only applying to and limiting the word "plants," does the special enumeration of oranges and lemons and certain other fruits in the act of July 14, 1870, exclude such enumerated articles from the operation of the general provision for "fruit" in the act of June 6, 1872?

In reply to the first question, I will say that, in my judgment, the qualifying words cannot be held to relate to fruit, for the following reasons: It is a rule of law that limiting and qualifying words are held only to affect the subject words with which they are immediately connected, unless the plain sense of the law requires their extension to other preceding words. The sense of the sentence in the present case does not require that the qualifying words under consideration shall relate back to the word "fruit." Such a relation would in fact, as has been ascertained by the Department, be creating an absurdity, for "fruit" is only imported as an article of consumption, and not of propagation or cultivation; while on the other hand "plants" are only imported for propagation or cultivation.

In reply to the second question, I will say that in the construction of revenue-laws the object is to ascertain the intent of Congress. If that intent is plain, it only remains for the Department to carry the same into effect. As I understand the provision of law in question, Congress has said that "fruit" shall be free of duty. A previous law has said that oranges, lemons, &c., shall be subject to a certain rate of duty. If the term "fruit" is obscure, incapable of a plain commercial definition, then it may not effect a repeal of the previous provision of law, and may be practically disregarded. But if, on the other hand, it is plain and is capable of a ready application to well-known articles of commerce, then the rule of law requires that effect shall be given to the word, in accordance with the well-known commercial meaning.

The word "fruit" is popularly known to embrace oranges and lemons, as well as many other products. In commerce the same meaning is given to the word, and there is no commercial dictionary which does not define it as embracing oranges, lemons, and various other productions.

In my view, therefore, the word fruit has a meaning so well recognized and plain that no reason can be found for declining to give it full force and effect in the law in question.

I have considered the other objections to the construction sought by the applicants, contained in the brief submitted with the other papers, and can only regard them as ingenious suggestions rather than a fair and just construction of what seems to me to be a plain provision of law.

The papers inclosed with your letter are herewith returned.

I am, very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

E.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., December 3, 1873.

SIR: Respectfully referring to the various appeals hereto forwarded from your office on the question of the dutiable classification of oranges and lemons and other perishable fruit imported from foreign countries, I have to say that the importers of this class of merchandise having, through their counsel, Mr. A. R. Culver, submitted a brief of their views upon the question of law involved in the premises, I have given the same a careful consideration.

Your decision assessing duty on certain importations of oranges and lemons under the act of July 14, 1870, was at first affirmed, upon the ground that the act of June 6, 1872, which placed upon the free list "fruit, plants tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation or cultivation," only made free such fruit as was intended for the purpose mentioned in the latter part of the sentence, the term "tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation or cultivation" having been held to qualify both fruit and plants. Subsequent examination, however, seemed to show that fruit was never used for such purpose, and accordingly the appeals thereafter arising were filed to await further action on the part of the importers looking to a settlement of the question.

In considering the case, two questions present themselves:

First. Should the words "tropical and semi-tropical for the purpose of propagation or cultivation" be construed as qualifying both the preceding words, "fruit" and "plants," or only the word "plants" immediately preceding?

Second. If the qualifying words shall be held as only applying to and limiting the word "plants," does the special enumeration of oranges and lemons and certain other fruits in the act of July, 1870, exclude such enumerated articles from the operation of the general provision for "fruit" in the act of June 6, 1872?

I am of opinion that the qualifying words cannot be held to relate to "fruit," for the following reasons: It is a rule of law that limiting and qualifying words are held to apply only to affect the subject-words with which they are immediately connected, unless the plain sense of the law requires their extension to other preceding words. The sense of the sentence in the present case does not require that the qualifying words under consideration shall relate back to the word "fruit." Such a relation would, in fact, be creating an absurdity, for, from the investigation made, it is shown that fruit is imported only as an article of consumption, and not of propagation or cultivation, while, on the other hand, "plants" are only imported for propagation or cultivation. Upon the second point I have to say that in the construction of revenue laws the object is to ascertain the intent of Congress. If that intent is plain, it only remains for the Department to carry the same into effect. In this case Congress has in terms said that "fruit" shall be free of duty. A prior law has said that oranges, lemons, &c., shall be subject to a certain rate of duty. If the term "fruit" is obscure, incapable of a plain commercial definition, then it may not effect a repeal of the previous provision of law, and may be practically disregarded. But if, on the other hand, it is plain and capable of a ready application to well-known articles of commerce, then the rule of law requires that effect shall be given to the word, in accordance with the well-known commercial meaning. The word "fruit" is generally understood to embrace oranges and lemons, as well as many other products. In commerce the same meaning is given to the word, and I know of no standard or commercial authority which does not give it such a definition as would embrace oranges, lemons, and various other productions. In my judgment, therefore, the word "fruit" has a meaning so well recognized and plain that no justifiable reason can be found for declining to give it full force and effect in the law in question.

I am consequently led to the conclusion that, as matter of law, the term "fruit," in the free list of the act of June 6, 1872, includes oranges, lemons, and other perishable fruits not otherwise specified in said act, and that they are, therefore, free of duty.

You will, therefore, govern your practice accordingly, and forward the necessary certified statements for the refund to the importers of the duties heretofore paid on this class of merchandise since the act of June 6, 1872, went into effect, where such duties were paid under protest and appeal.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

To COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS,
New York.

EXHIBIT No. 8.—EARTHENWARE.

REFUND OF DUTIES ON EARTHENWARE.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

The duties on earthenware, under the act of June 30, 1864, section 9, are ad valorem; and under dates of October 23, 1871, and February 23, 1872, circulars were issued by the Staffordshire pottery manufacturers proclaiming certain advances in the prices of their goods by a reduction in the discounts. Copies of said circulars were forwarded to the Department, and it appeared therefrom that the advance in prices was to go into operation on all orders received by the manufacturers on and after said dates. And from the information then before the Department it was also understood that these advances applied to all shipments made subsequently to the dates mentioned. Under date of May 16, 1872, the Department issued a circular to collectors of customs, ordering that invoices of earthenware made out subsequent to the advance established by said circular, should be considered subject to the new rates of discounts.

Action was taken by the appraising officers accordingly, and importers thereupon made a claim that the advance in prices was not to go into effect for a considerable time after the dates of the respective circulars.

Appeals from the decisions of the appraisers under this order of the Department were accordingly taken for re-appraisement, and after a considerable lapse of time re-appraisement was had, and it was ascertained upon such re-appraisement that the advance in prices created by said circulars did not take effect until about four months after the dates thereof, the custom of the pottery manufacturers being to make goods only upon orders, and it requiring that time, on an average, to fill orders. The conclusion thus arrived at on re-appraisement was sustained by a large amount of documentary evidence filed in the Department by the parties interested.

On one re-appraisement, however, held at Baltimore, the general appraiser advanced the invoice to correspond with the value declared by the Department, which advance was sustained by the collector, the merchant appraiser dissenting, and in view of that fact importers felt that there was no certainty of obtaining the relief they sought by appealing for such re-appraisement if the action of the re-appraisers was to be controlled by the instructions of the Department. Consequently on many of the cases no appeal for re-appraisement was taken, but there was an understanding with the importers that the Government would deal justly by them, when the proper result should be arrived at, as it did in the steel cases, some four years since.

In view of this state of facts, the then Secretary of the Treasury gave orders, under date of December 21, 1872, to the several collectors, that all invoices of earthenware then not passed by the appraisers, the appraisers should be at liberty to appraise accordingly, and the advance in values be only made on invoices of earthenware shipped after said last-mentioned dates.

Subsequently instructions were given also to the collectors to send back to the appraisers for review invoices which had already been advanced by them, they having based their action in making such advance upon the orders of the Department construing said circulars. The invoices were accordingly returned to the appraisers and their former returns of value were modified, and the invoices passed at the prices thus shown to be correct, and the excessive duties previously paid were refunded.

Some of the cases were covered by protest and appeal in the manner prescribed by the act of 1864; but as it was a question of value, upon which there was a conflict of opinion between the Department and the importers, and the action on one re-appraisement having precluded the importers from relief by that mode of procedure, it was felt not to be a question involving merely "the rate and amount of duty," and the action of the Secretary in refunding the overpaid duties in the cases not covered by protest and appeal was based upon the authority conferred by the 7th section of the act of July 28, 1866.

EXHIBIT No. 9.—LINEN DRILLS.

REFUND ON LINEN DRILLS.

Statement of facts and reasons for refund.

The tariff acts of March 2, 1861, and July 14, 1862, together, placed a duty of 30 and 35 per cent. ad valorem, according to value per square yard, "on all brown or bleached linens, ducks, canvas, paddings, cotton bottoms, burlaps, drills, coatings, brown Hollands, blay linens, damasks," &c., "and other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp," &c.

The act of June 30, 1864, advanced the duty "on brown and bleached linens, ducks, canvas, paddings, cotton bottoms, burlaps, diapers, crash, huckabacks, handkerchiefs, lawns," and other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, not otherwise provided for, to 35 and 40 per cent. ad valorem, according to value per square yard.

After the passage of the last-named act the question was presented to the Department on protest and appeal by importers from New York as to how far the words brown and bleached qualified the articles which succeeded, and the decision of the Department then was that they qualified all the articles named in the sentence. This practice was based upon an opinion given by the Solicitor of the Treasury on the 17th of April, 1868. (Copy of opinion inclosed, marked A.)

Under date of May 8, 1872, Messrs. Hunt and Phillips, of counsel for the importers in the premises, submitted an application for a review of the question, with a brief upon the subject, (copy of brief inclosed, marked B;) and some of the revenue officers having expressed doubts as to the legality of the Department's decision in the premises, this brief was referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury, Mr. E. C. Banfield, for his views upon the question as to whether the previous decision of the Department should be adhered to.

The Solicitor accordingly gave his opinion, dated May 24, 1873, (copy inclosed marked C,) which arrived at the conclusion that the claim of the importers was in accordance with law; that the words brown and bleached only qualified linens, and that drills, not being named in the act of 1864, were remanded for duty to the prior acts of March, 1861, and July, 1862.

The question was also submitted to the district attorney at New York, where several suits involving this question were on the calendar of the circuit court for trial, and after a careful examination of the question he came to the conclusion that the position originally taken by the Government on the question was untenable, and allowed judgments to be taken against the collector in the premises. (Copy of district attorney's report, dated June 12, 1873, marked D.)

In view of the action of the district attorney, the Department, under date of the 16th of June, 1873, issued instructions to collectors to thereafter collect duty on linen drills, under the acts of 1861 and 1862, and to take the usual steps for refunding the excessive duties paid, where the parties were entitled thereto. (Copy of decision inclosed marked E.)

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Solicitor's Office, April 17, 1868.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a communication from you, dated March 14, 1868, transmitting certain papers numbered from 1 to 7, inclusive, in the appeal of L. A. Friend & Co. from the decision of the collector of customs at New York, assessing duty under the seventh section of the act of June 20, 1864, at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem, as "manufactures of flax, &c.," on certain colored drills which cost under 30 cents per square yard, and which the importers claim are specifically provided for at 30 per cent. ad valorem under the acts of March 2, 1861, and July 14, 1862.

My opinion is asked as to what drills are provided for in the acts last mentioned.

Paragraph 4 of section 14 of the act of March 2, 1861, provides as follows: "On all brown or bleached linens, ducks, canvas paddings, cot-bottoms, burlaps, drills, coatings, brown Hollands, blay linens, damasks, drapers' crash, huckabacks, handkerchiefs, lawns, or other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, or of which flax, jute, or hemp, shall be the component material of chief value, being of the value of 30 cents and under per square yard, 25 per cent. ad valorem; valued above 30 cents per square yard, 30 per cent. ad valorem." * * *

Paragraph 5 of section 10 of the act of July 14, 1862, imposed an additional duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem on each of the above-mentioned articles.

In reply, therefore, to your inquiry, I have to say that in my opinion the drills provided for in the paragraphs recited are brown or bleached drills only. The grammatical construction of these paragraphs leads to this conclusion, and the rule is that in the construction of statutes the grammatical sense of the words is to be adhered to, unless such a construction involves an absurdity, repugnance, or inconsistency in their different provisions, which I conceive is not the case here.

I think also that reasoning from the nature of the subject would induce the same conclusion. The argument of the importers that the acts of 1861 and 1862 are not restricted to brown or bleached drills, but include within their provisions drills of whatever description if composed of flax, &c., because the word "coatings" following the word "drills" is immediately followed by the words "brown Hollands," thereby showing, as they suppose, that it was not the intention to apply the qualification "brown or bleached" to the word "drills," I think of but little force, and is fully met by the consideration that brown Hollands is an article well known in commerce, while Hollands without any prefix is not descriptive of any such article. It was therefore quite natural that the draughtsman of the law should write "brown Hollands," that being the only proper description of the thing to which the duty was intended to be applied. The drills in question being neither brown nor bleached, but colored, and for the reasons given not provided for in the acts of 1861 and 1862, were, in my judgment, properly assessed a duty of 35 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of flax, &c., under the 7th section of the act of June 30, 1864.

I herewith return the papers inclosed, and have the honor to be, very respectfully,

EDWARD JORDAN,
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

B.

Colored and printed "drills"—manufactures of flax or of which flax is a component material of chief value.

The collector assessed duty on the above-mentioned goods at 35 per cent. ad valorem when valued at thirty cents or less per square yard, and 40 per cent. ad valorem when valued at above thirty cents per square yard, claiming that they were liable thereto by the provisions of section 7, subdivision 1, of the act of 30th June, 1864, which reads as follows:

"First. On brown and bleached linens, ducks, canvas paddings, cotton, buttons, burlaps, diapers, crash, huckabacks, handkerchiefs, lawns, or other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, or of which flax, jute, or hemp shall be the component material of chief value, not otherwise provided for," &c.

We claim, on behalf of the importers, that the goods were liable only to a duty of 30 per cent. ad valorem when valued at thirty cents or less per square yard, and 35 per cent. ad valorem when valued at above thirty cents per square yard, as provided for by section 14, subdivision 4, of the act of 2d March, 1861, which reads as follows:

"Fourth. On all brown or bleached linens, ducks, canvas paddings, cotton battons, burlaps, drills, coatings, brown Hollands, blay linens, damasks, diapers, crash, huckabacks, handkerchiefs, lawns, or other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, or of which flax, jute, or hemp shall be the component material of chief value," &c.

(Amended and duty increased 5 per cent. by act of 14th July, 1862, section 10, subdivision 5.)

ARGUMENT.

First point.

The goods in question are provided for by the act of 1861, (amended by the act of 1862, as to rates,) as claimed by the importers.

1. They are drills, and are in no respect different from other drills, except being printed or colored.

2. Being drills they are provided for in the act referred to under that name, which is employed in a generic and unqualified sense. (Lane vs. Russell, Clifford J., Internal Revenue Record of September 24, 1870.)

3. The words "brown or bleached," as employed in the sentence, only apply to linens, according to the punctuation, grammatical construction, and natural meaning of the whole provision. This is made more obvious by the fact that, in this enumeration of articles, the qualifying adjectives are expressly used and repeated wherever required, as "brown" Hollands and "blay" linens.

The words "brown and bleached," if applied here to drills, must, by the same construction, be applied to each of the other enumerated articles, and then we should have to read "brown and bleached brown Hollands," and "brown and bleached blay linens," involving a singular tautology in one case and in the other an absurdity.

If the legislators had meant to apply the adjectives "brown and bleached" to all the enumerated articles it is not likely they would have thought it necessary to repeat the adjective "brown" as a qualification to one of those articles. Nor, if that is what they meant, is it probable that, after providing for all "brown and bleached linens," they would consider it necessary, in the same sentence, to provide for "brown and blay bleached linens," even supposing them to be ignorant of the fact that "blay" linens, being dyed, cannot be either "brown" or "bleached."

Not only are the words "brown or bleached," as matter of fact, inapplicable to "blay linens," but one or the other is inapplicable to several other of the enumerated articles as "burlaps" and "canvas paddings," which are never bleached.

We may test the sense of Congress further by supposing they had chosen to leave out of this enumeration the several articles from "ducks" to "coatings" inclusive, and to provide for them elsewhere; could we then imagine them as meaning to apply the terms "brown or bleached" to any articles in the clause except linens? If not it is clear they meant to confine the application of those terms to linens as the clause stands.

4. If the term "drills," as employed in this section, does not include printed or colored drills, then the act of 1861 did not provide for printed or colored drills at all.

Certainly they could not be brought under the head of "other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp," &c., because, if the words "brown and bleached" in the beginning of the clause be construed to apply to drills, they must for the same reason be held to apply to all the articles there enumerated, including "other manufactures," &c. And there is no other provision in the whole act which can be suggested as embracing any kind of drills.

The notion is not to be entertained that Congress, while providing for drills by name, intended, without expressing it, to leave particular kinds of drills either unprovided for or to the enactments of some then existing law, for the act in question was one to increase rates of duty, and if they did mean the latter, then the duty would be even less than that insisted upon by these importers, as will presently be shown.

5. The plain object of the act was to levy a uniform duty upon all "manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp," &c., as well those enumerated by name as all others, with the qualifications annexed to each of several articles specified.

6. It is understood (and will be shown) that the practice of the Government under this act was to levy the same duty upon all drills until after the act of 1864 went into effect.

7. The claim of the collector that colored or printed drills are not provided for by the act of 1861 is quite inconsistent with his claim that they or any kind of drills are provided for by the act of 1864. Manifestly, if the words "brown or bleached" apply to and limit the provision as to drills in the one act, then the same words employed in the same way, apply to and limit the provision as to all the articles enumerated in the other act.

Second point.

The act of 1864, section 7, subdivision 1, under which the collector assessed the duty in question, contains no provision for drills of any kind.

1. This act increased the duties upon a portion of the articles specified, leaving the remainder to the provisions of the act of 1861. This was done by repeating the very words of the act of 1861, (as to the description of the goods,) omitting five articles, namely, "drills, coatings, brown Hollands, blay linens, and damasks."

Obviously the five articles so omitted were excepted, and meant to be excepted from the operation of the act, and left to the provisions of the act of 1861. What but that can the omission mean?

Drills, then, provided for by name in the act of 1861, were purposely excepted from the increase of duties (5 per cent.) imposed upon certain kindred articles by the act of 1864.

2. The inconsistency of saying that colored drills are not provided for by the act of 1861, but that they are provided for by the act of 1864, has been before pointed out. It is very clear that if the words "brown or bleached" apply to all the articles enumerated in the act of 1861, they equally apply to all the articles enumerated in the act of 1864. Nay, it is more plausible to claim that construction in the case of the later act, because there the separate objections used in the earlier act before several particular articles are omitted, and no qualifying objections except "brown or bleached" at the beginning of the clause are employed. If, then, the words "brown or bleached" apply to all the articles named in the one act, they do the same in the other case, and where is the provision for printed or colored drills? Certainly not in either of these acts, and the legal duty in that case must be looked for in the provision for non-enumerated manufactured articles, namely, section 24 of the act of 2d March, 1861, 20 per cent. ad valorem.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, D. C., May 24, 1874.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your Department letter of the 24th of September last, stating that there are grave doubts in the minds of some of the revenue officers as to the correctness of the position taken by that Department in conformity to an opinion expressed by my predecessor on the 17th of April, 1868, as to the rate of duty on linen drills not brown or bleached, on the appeal of L. A. Freund & Co., and in which letter a re-examination of the question at issue and an expression of my views are requested.

At or about the time of the receipt of this letter a case involving this question was set for trial at New York, which promised a desired opportunity to obtain an authoritative decision of the courts; and it was deemed advisable to await the issue and delay a reply. The term went over, however, without a trial of the case.

The question presented for my consideration is attended in my mind with some doubt, and is one as to which I cannot, with any degree of hope, hazard an opinion as to what would be the decision of a court of law.

The "drills" in question are colored, costing less than thirty cents per square yard, and were imported during the year 1867.

The 14th section of the tariff act of March 2, 1861, as amended by the 10th section of the act of July 14, 1862, imposes duty at the rate of thirty per centum ad valorem on "all brown or bleached linens, ducks, canvas-paddings, cotton-bottoms, burlaps, drills, coatings, brown Hollands, blay linens, damasks, diapers, crash, huckabacks, handkerchiefs, lawns, or other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, or of which flax, jute or hemp shall be the component material of chief value, being of the value of thirty cents and under per square yard;" and it is by the virtue of these sections that the importers claim the article to be dutiable as "drills" simply, whether the fabric be brown, or bleached, or colored.

On the other hand, it was held by the decision of your Department, before referred to, that the article not being brown or bleached, which words were held to qualify all the fabrics specifically named in the succeeding lines of the sentence, were provided for in the subsequent tariff act of June 30, 1864, § 7, under the general description of other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, &c.; the goods known as "drills" not being in that act specifically mentioned, which provision reads as follows: "on brown or bleached linens, ducks, canvas, paddings, cotton-bottoms, burlaps, crash, huckabacks, handkerchiefs, lawns or other manufactures of flax, jute, or hemp, or of which flax, jute, or hemp shall be the component material of chief value" &c.

It is conceded that if the drills in question had been "brown" or "bleached" they would have been dutiable under the first-named act.

If the adjectives "brown" and "bleached" are properly to be taken in the sense of a qualification of all the fabrics enumerated in the classification, instead of as applying alone to linens, with which they are immediately connected in the text, then it follows that colored drills must depend for their dutiable character upon the general description of "manufactures of flax * * * not otherwise provided for," because there is no provision but the one embodying that description that will apply.

The question then presented is, what is the effect, looking to the intention of the lawmaker, to be given to the words "brown or bleached" in the act of 1861, first quoted? Is the qualification limited to the succeeding word "linens," or does it extend to "ducks," "canvas paddings," "drills," "brown Hollands," "blay linens," "handkerchiefs?" &c. As a mere grammatical rule, the adjectives would be treated as qualifying the succeeding enumeration; but it is essential, in order to arrive at a proper legal construction of the language, and to get at the intention of the legislature, to consider the terms used with reference to their commercial meaning, and to reconcile whatever contradictions and absurdities this or that construction may involve by the test thus imposed.

If it was intended to use "brown or bleached" in connection with each fabric in the enumeration named, it seems to me that the draughtsman of the law would have chosen a different order of phraseology, and would not have brought the qualifying words into connection with objects with which they cannot possibly stand without evident absurdity. He would not have made the law utter such a contradiction as "brown or bleached;" "brown hollands" or such a one as "brown or bleached blay linens." Then, following out the commercial meaning of things, or even the popular understanding of their characteristics, he would not have framed such phrases as "brown or bleached handkerchiefs," and "brown or bleached burlaps."

If it is held that the qualifying words apply to the enumerated fabrics, they must by the same course of reasoning be applied to the general descriptive words immediately following, viz: "other manufactures of flax" and if so, then there was no provision of the act subjecting colored drills to duty, and they would consequently revert, as a "manufacture of flax," to the act of 1857, fixing very low rates of duty compared with the act in which I think they were specifically named.

I am inclined to think that the words "brown or bleached linens" first occurring in the enumeration meant to designate a particular class of goods well known in commerce; just as "dress and piece silks" and "broad-cloths" are known to the trade; the qualifying words not being used in the sense of dimension, &c., but as characteristic of the goods known in the trade by the names so given. "Words and phrases employed in the revenue-laws must be understood as having been used in their known commercial signification, unless it satisfactorily appears that they were used in some special and different sense as collected or inferred from the language of the same provision or some other part of the same act." (Lane v. Russell, Int. Rev. Rec., vol. 12, p. 105; 9 Wheat, 438; Sedgwick, 388; 8 Peters, 279; 10 Peters, 151; 3 How., 109.) In the case of Lane and Russell, first cited, the court refuted the argument of the plaintiff, that the term "ribbons" as used in the 8th section of the act of June 30, 1864, means only silk ribbons or ribbons composed wholly of silk, because of the phrase "dress and piece silks" immediately preceding it, holding that this phrase is there used, not in a technical sense as strictly descriptive of the material of which the fabrics, but as more particularly expressive of their denomination as commonly known among mercantile men.

If we must treat the words "brown" and "bleached" as qualifying all the fabrics succeeding it by name in the sentence of the act of 1861, under consideration, I do not see how we are to escape the same construction of the act of 1864, not only as to the specific fabrics, but as to others which would be embraced in the general description of manufactures of flax following in the series and bearing the same "qualification."

The reading of the sentence under this construction must necessarily be in this wise: "On brown and bleached linens," "ducks," "canvas," "paddings," * * * "burlaps," * * * "handkerchiefs" * or other "brown and bleached" "manufactures of flax," &c. This similar reading of the two acts would exclude the material in question, because of the coloring which the latter contained.

It is to be observed as materially bearing upon the solution of the question at issue. I think, that the fabric known as "drills" is omitted from the section of the act of 1864 referred to, as are likewise "coatings" "brown hollands" "blay linens" and "damasks," the phraseology being otherwise the same as in the previous tariff act of 1861, levying duty on these and the remaining articles. There must have been some reason for this as we are bound to suppose. What that reason was we can only conjecture. But it is nevertheless the case, these articles are left with their rates of duty in the old law, which is still operative as to them, they not being specifically mentioned in the new act, and not being embraced in the general description, by reason of the exceptional phrase "not otherwise provided for." A stronger argument in this direction is afforded by the language of the repealing clause of the act of 1864, in section 22, viz: "And provided further, That the duties upon all goods, wares, and merchandise imported from foreign countries, and not provided for in this act, shall be and remain as they were according to existing laws prior to the 29th of April, 1864."

The words of the enacting clause of the linen section of the act of 1864 are, "in lieu of the duties heretofore imposed by law on the articles hereinafter mentioned there shall be levied, collected," &c. The articles so mentioned, as I have said before, do not include the article in question, and the latter being otherwise provided for, as in the case of the other omitted articles, such as "brown hollands," &c., it is not subject to duty under that act, but under the act of 1861, as amended by the act of 1862.

This would seem to be the view taken by Mr. Heyl, in his Digest of 1868 of existing laws, for he enumerates these omitted articles in his citation of the 4th paragraph of section 14 of the act of 1861, detached from the words "brown and bleached linens," "ducks," &c., and he omits them—including "drills"—from his citation of the similar provision of the act of 1864, quoting the re-enactment beginning with the words "on all brown and bleached linens;" the plain inference being that these qualifying words belong to the word linens alone, with which they are carried into the new act.

And this, it seems to me, balancing all doubts upon the subject, must be the proper situation of the article known as "drills," as regards the dutiable rate, without regard to whether it is brown, bleached, or colored.

Very respectfully,

E. C. BANFIELD.
Solicitor of the Treasury.

Hon. WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF THE UNITED STATES
FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK,
New York, June 12, 1873.

SIR: After writing you on June 2, 1873, with reference to the cases involving the question of the duty upon colored drills, under the acts of 1861 and 1862, I gave to them that more careful attention necessary in the immediate preparation for trial. After seeing a large number of witnesses, examining samples and decisions, I came to the conclusion that the position originally taken by the Government was untenable, and that the importers were entitled to judgment and refund. It was not until yesterday that I finally arrived at this conclusion, having been delayed by the fact that the Government samples were lost. The cases were on the calendar to-day for trial, and as there was no time to communicate with you, as the circuit would close within two or three days, and the plaintiffs were unwilling to lose the circuit, I allowed judgments to be taken for the sums claimed by the plaintiffs in the three cases on the calendar, a jury being waived.

I was influenced to this course in a manner by the fact that it seemed to me possible for the importers to make, with a fair chance of success, a considerably larger claim than they now make.

I return the papers forwarded to me.

Your obedient servant,

GEORGE BLISS,
United States Attorney.

Hon. WILLIAM A. RICHARDSON,

E.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., June 16, 1873.

SIR: The Department is in receipt of a communication, dated the 12th instant, from the United States attorney, George Bliss, in reference to certain suits at your port which involved the question of the rate of duty on colored linen drills, in which he states that after seeing a large number of witnesses and the examination of samples and decisions, he arrives at the conclusion that the position heretofore taken by the Government, that such drills were dutiable as "manufactures of flax," &c., under the ninth section of the act of June 30, 1864, could not be successfully maintained in the trial of the cases, and that, therefore, he allowed judgment to be taken by the plaintiffs, whereby the importers claim that such goods are liable to duty under the provision for "drills" in the fourteenth section of the act of March 2, 1861, and tenth section of the act of July 14, 1862, was sustained.

A communication, dated the 24th ultimo, from the Solicitor of the Treasury, has also been received, in which, after a careful review of the whole subject, he expresses the opinion that the qualifying words, "on all brown or bleached," as contained in the acts of March 2, 1861, and July 14, 1862, aforesaid, apply only to linens, and not to the other articles therein specified, and that, therefore, all linen drills, whether brown, bleached, or colored, are liable to duty under the provision for "drills" in the said sections of law.

In view, therefore, of such opinion of the Solicitor, and also of the action of the United States attorney on the suits which were ready for trial, the Department decides that the decision heretofore applied to these goods shall be reversed and that the suits still pending and undecided, where the same question is involved, should be disposed of accordingly.

You are therefore authorized, upon judgments being entered in such suits for the plaintiffs, upon the terms heretofore prescribed in all cases where the provisions of the fourteenth and fifteenth sections of the act of June 30, 1864, have been complied with, to adjust the entries of such "colored drills," under the provisions of the acts of 1861 and 1862 aforesaid, and to take the usual steps for refunding the excessive duties.

The decision of April 21, 1868, (Synopsis 97,) on the subject is accordingly hereby revoked, and in future you will be governed by the views above set forth.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

C. A. ARTHUR, Esq.,
Collector of Customs, New York.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,

IN RELATION TO

The resolution of the House of January 8, 1874, transmitting a detailed statement of like refund made at the port of San Francisco, which had not been received at date of said resolution.

JUNE 19, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and ordered to be printed.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., May 22, 1874.

SIR: Referring to Department's letter of the 8th ultimo, transmitting, in accordance with the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 8th of January, a statement of the amount of money refunded from the 4th of March, 1873, to the date of said resolution, on account of customs duties and internal taxes previously paid into the Treasury, &c., I have the honor to transmit herewith detailed statement of like refunds made at the port of San Francisco, which had not been received at date of said letter.

I am, very respectfully,

WM. A. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

TREATY WITH THE CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW INDIANS.

LETTER

FROM THE

ACTING SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,

IN RELATION TO

A treaty made with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians April 28, 1866.

APRIL 14, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., April 4, 1874.

SIR: I have the honor to invite your attention to articles second and third of a treaty made with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians April 28, 1866, (Stat. at L., vol. 14, p. 769.)

The second article of said treaty provides for the abolition of slavery.

The third article of the treaty provides that, in consideration of the sum of $300,000 to be paid to said Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians by the United States, the said Indians agreed to cede to the United States that territory west of the 98th degree of west longitude, known as the leased district. Said sum of money to be invested and held by the United States at an interest of not less than 5 per cent., in trust for the said nations until the legislatures of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations respectively shall have made such laws, rules, and regulations as might be necessary to give all persons of African descent, resident in said nations at the date of the treaty of Fort Smith, and their descendants, heretofore held in slavery among said nations, all the rights, privileges, and immunities, including the right of suffrage, of citizens of said nations, except in the annuities, moneys, and public domain, claimed by or belonging to said nations respectively.

That treaty also provided to give to such persons who were residents as aforesaid, and their descendants, forty acres each, of the land of said nations, on the same terms as the Choctaws and Chickasaws, to be selected on the survey of said lands, after the said Indians and the Kansas Indians had made their selections as elsewhere provided. Immediately upon the enactment of such laws, rules, and regulations by the legislative councils of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, the said sum of $300,000 was to be paid to the said Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, in the proportion of three-fourths to the former and one-fourth to the latter, deducting therefrom such sum, at the rate of $100 per capita, as should be sufficient to pay such persons of African descent, before referred to, who within ninety days after the passage of such laws, rules, and regulations, should elect to remove, and actually remove, from said nations respectively.

Said article third furthermore provides that should such laws, rules and regulations not be made by the legislatures of said nations respectively within two years from the ratification of said treaty, then the said sum of $300,000 shall cease to be held in trust for the said Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, and be held for the use and benefit of such of said persons of African descent as the United States shall remove from the said territory in such manner as the United States shall deem proper. The United States agreed in said article within ninety days from the expiration of the said two years after the enactment of said laws, to remove from the said nations all such persons of African descent as might be willing to remove.

Almost eight years have passed since the ratification of the treaty above referred to, and the legislatures of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations have not enacted any laws, rules, and regulations in behalf of the persons of African descent above referred to.

The ancestors of these negroes came to the Indian territory with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations from the State of Mississippi, and have been with them continuously since that time in the capacity of slaves. They were freed by the treaty of 1866, and have been since then enjoying the privileges of freedom. They are reported to be industrious, sober, and frugal people, desirous to learn, anxious to secure to themselves homes in severalty, and, above all, anxious to remain in the country where they now live, and which is the only home they have ever known. And, so far as the Department has been able to ascertain, none of them will ever leave that country voluntarily. They have formed strong attachments to the soil; they have acquired, as far as the peculiar laws and regulations governing the Indian nations will permit, homesteads, and have cultivated farms. A strong prejudice seems to exist against these freedmen on the part of the Choctaws and Chickasaws, which will account in some measure for the failure of these nations to provide by law for the division among them of the lands of the nations.

The Creek, Seminole, and Cherokee Nations have each adopted the freedmen into their tribes, and given them equal rights and privileges with other citizens of the nation. The Choctaws and Chickasaws, I understand, have refused to do so. The condition of these negroes strongly appeals to the United States Government for some action that will fix their status, and give them all that they are entitled to by the terms of the treaty above quoted.

I have the honor to submit, herewith, the draught of a bill which, in my judgment, will secure to these freedmen all the rights and privileges to which they are entitled under the treaty. The bill also gives them the right of suffrage, and an equal share in the annuities, moneys and public domain claimed by or belonging to said nations respectively. While this may not be exactly in accordance with the letter of the treaty, I am satisfied that it is simply a matter of justice to this class of persons who have always been residents of said nations, and who are now industrious, law-abiding, and useful citizens thereof.

I respectfully invite the attention of Congress to this subject, and trust that it may receive favorable consideration.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. R. COWEN,
Acting Secretary.

Hon. JAS. G. BLAINE,
Speaker, House of Representatives.

AN ACT for the relief of certain persons of African descent, resident in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, on the 28th day of April, A. D. 1866.

Whereas, by the treaty concluded April 28, 1866, and proclaimed July 10, 1866, between the United States and the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians, it was provided that slavery and involuntary servitude should cease in said nations and that the said Indians should, and thereby did, cede to the United States certain territory west of the 98° west longitude, known as the leased district, and, in consideration thereof, the United States bound themselves to pay the sum of $300,000, which sum was to be invested and held by the United States at interest, not less than five per cent. interest, for the said nations, until the legislatures of the said Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations should make such laws, rules, and regulations as might be necessary to give to all persons of African descent resident in the said nations at the date of the treaty of Fort Smith, (September 10, 1865,) and their descendants theretofore held in slavery among said nations, all the rights, privileges, and immunities, including the right of suffrage, of citizens of said nations, except in the annuities, moneys, and public domain claimed by or belonging to said nations respectively, and should give to each of said persons, resident as aforesaid, and their descendants, forty acres of the land of said nations on the same terms as the Choctaws and Chickasaws held the same, to be selected on the survey of said land after the Choctaws and Chickasaws and Kansas Indians had made their selections as provided in said treaty; and

Whereas it was further provided by the said treaty that, immediately after the enactment of said laws, rules, and regulations, the said sum of $300,000 should be paid to the said Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations in the proportion of three-fourths to the former and one-fourth to the latter, less such sum, at the rate of $100 per capita, as should be sufficient to pay the said persons of African descent who, within ninety days after the passage of said laws, rules, and regulations, should elect to remove and should actually remove from said nations respectively; and

Whereas it was further provided by the said treaty that, in the event that said laws, rules, and regulations should not be enacted by the legislatures of said nations respectively within two years from the ratification of said treaty, then the said sum of three hundred thousand dollars should cease to be held in trust for the said Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, and should thereafter be held in trust for the use and benefit of said persons of African descent as the United States should remove from the said territory; and

Whereas the United States did thereby agree, within ninety days from the expiration of the said two years, to remove from said nations all of said persons of African descent who were willing to remove therefrom; and

Whereas the said sum of $300,000 has not been paid or invested in the manner above specified, or otherwise, and the said legislatures have not, nor has either of them, made the laws, rules, or regulations hereinbefore referred to, or any of them, and the United States have not removed any of said persons of African descent; and

Whereas the said persons of African descent are now anxious to remain in the territory of said Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations and to become incorporated with the citizens thereof: Therefore

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all persons of African descent who were resident in the territory of the Choctaw or Chickasaw Nations on the 28th day of April, A. D. 1866, and who had, before that, been held in slavery among said nations, or either of them, and all the descendants of such persons, shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges, and annuities, including the right of suffrage of citizens of said nations, respectively, and the annuities, moneys, and public domain claimed by or belonging to said nations, respectively.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and required to issue bonds of the United States, payable in twenty years from date, principal and interest in gold coin, bearing interest at five per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, for the sum of $300,000, each of said bonds to be for the sum of $500, or some multiple of said sum, as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem best, and to deliver the same to the Secretary of the Interior, to be by him held in trust for the use and benefit of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations in the following proportions, to wit: three-fourths for the Choctaw and one-fourth for the Chickasaw Nation; and, upon the same being done, the said leased district, ceded by the said nations to the United States for the sum of $300,000, shall be deemed to have been paid for, and the United States released from any further obligation for the same.

THE JUAN DE MESTAS PRIVATE LAND-CLAIM IN NEW MEXICO.

FROM THE

TRANSMITTING,

In compliance with the act of July 22, 1854, the report of the surveyor-general of New Mexico on the land-grant to Juan de Mestas, private land-claim reported as No. 80.

APRIL 14, 1874.—Referrred to the Committee on Private Land-Claims and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., April 6, 1874.

SIR: Pursuant to the eighth section of the act approved July 22, 1854, (10 Stats. at L., 308,) I have the honor to submit, for the consideration of Congress, the report of the surveyor-general of New Mexico on "land-grant to Juan de Mestas, being private land-claim reported as No. 80, for land in Santa Fé County, New Mexico."

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. R. COWEN,
Acting Secretary.

Hon. JAMES G. BLAINE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Transcript of land-grant to Juan de Mestas, being private land-claim reported as No. 80, for land in Santa Fé County, New Mexico.—Date of grant, December 9, 1699.—Reported by the United States surveyor-general February 5, 1874.

PRESENT CLAIMANTS' PETITION.

To the Surveyor-General of New Mexico:

Your petitioners, José de la luz Raibal and Jesus Ma. Montoya, for themselves, and as the legal representatives of other inhabitants, residents of and owners of the ancient Spanish grant of land donated and granted to Juan de Mestas in the year 1699, respectfully represent that they herewith file, in connection with this petition, the bona fide grant title-papers, originally executed by Pedro Rodrigues Cubero, governor and captain-general of the province and district of New Mexico, and castellan of the royal forces and garrison of His Majesty therein during the sovereignty of the Spanish government over the same, to one Juan de Mestas, for three fanegas of planting-land, with the usual quantity of pasture and wood land south of and adjacent thereto, in compliance with the petition for the same by him, the said Juan de Mestas, made and presented for that purpose, and which original grant-papers bear date at the city of Santa Fé, 9th day of December, year 1699, and to which royal and legal possession was given to him for said grant on the 10th day of said month and year by the lieutenant-general, Roque Madrid, chief alcalde and war-captain, in obedience to the decree and instructions therein contained, and which tract of land is situated on the south side of the Pojoaque River, below the town or village of Pojoaque, in the county of Santa Fé, and Territory of New Mexico, and bounded as follows: From the side of a hollow and above a house-lot, and from said side and lot the line runs from east to west to the river below the pueblo of Pojoaque toward the pueblo of Jacona to a bluff, within which there are given said Juan de Mestas three fanegas of planting-land; and from north to south along said river to the hills descending from Cuyamungue, without including any of the said land of said pueblo of Cuyamungue, but including appurtenances [pertenensia] of the pueblo of Jacona; and from north to south along the said Pojoaque River, where the junction of the rivers is, from a stake which is driven in said hollow; that its length from north to south from said Rio de Pojoaque on the north to the hills descending from Cuyamungue on the south is about four thousand varas, more or less, and that its width from east to west from the western line of the old pueblo of Cuyamungue grant on the east, to where it includes the appurtenances [pertenensia] of the pueblo of Jacona on the west, is about four thousand five hundred varas, more or less; that the said tract has never been surveyed, hence an exact and accurate statement of its contents cannot now be given, but that the landmarks therein stated are well established and visible natural boundaries, well known to the inhabitants of that section of country; that the said three fanegas of planting-land lie along the south margin of said Pajoaque River, and vary in width from ten to two hundred varas from north to south, said river running south of a westerly direction, but that there are several points at which the current flows against the banks rising from the river-bottoms, forming an uneven and broken country, where no planting-land exists, but occupied as pasture-lands; and that only the bottom-lands along said river were ever cultivated, for only the even bottom-lands could be irrigated, without which no agricultural pursuits even could be maintained in this province, and that the lands southward from said planting-land to the hills descending from Cuyamungue Pueblo (its southern boundary) were the commons and pastures referred to in the decree and grant of said governor and captain-general; that a certified and duly-authenticated copy of said original grant-titles, made and executed by proper and legal Spanish officials, also accompanies said original titles, bearing date in the year 1751, and that the official signatures attached to both the originals and copies thereof can be fully verified and authenticated by a comparison of the same with numerous original titles and documents in the original archive-files in the custody of your office, in the original manuscript, which were executed by these Spanish officials about the same time that these same accompanying title-papers were issued and signed, and which original Spanish manuscript archive-files have remained in the official custody of the ancient Spanish and more recent government of Mexico, up to the date of the conquest of this province of New Mexico in anno Domini 1846 by the United States forces, at which time they were transferred to the United States authorities, in whose custody they have remained ever since; that true and duly authenticated translated copies of said accompanying title-deeds from the Spanish into the English language also accompany this petition, as also a map or plat of the grant herein claimed, showing, as near as can now be ascertained, the relative position and location of said grant; and that said grant of land has been in the full and undisputed possession and enjoyment of said Juan de Mestas, his heirs and successors, from the date thereof, and up to the date of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848, and is now owned and enjoyed by your petitioners and other settlers, which they represent herein.

Your petitioners pray for an approval of said grant as an absolute and perfect grant and title in accordance with the act of Congress approved July 22, 1854, and respectfully request a transmittal of the same through your office to Congress for its confirmation.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

Petition.

His excellency the governor and captain-general:

I, Juan de Mestas, resident of the jurisdiction of Cañada, appear before your excellency in due legal form and state, that I register a piece of land extending from the house erected by Captain Jacinto Pelaes, toward the river-side below the pueblo of Pojoaque and to a bluff and a hollow formed thereby, which are the boundaries, and on the south side to the hills and on the north side the same. And thus I pray your excellency to be pleased to make to me the said grant, with its entrances and exits, uses and rights of way. I ask and pray your excellency, in all submission, that you be pleased to provide further as may be proper, and I declare in due form that this my petition is not in dissimulation, but only to obtain justice, and I implore the royal aid of your excellency, and as may be necessary, &c.

JUAN DE MESTAS.

Opinion of surveyor-general.

This claim for a grant of land is brought before me for confirmation, under the eighth article of the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo and the act of Congress approved July 22, 1854, establishing this office.

It is a very ancient grant, having been made to Juan de Mestas by Don Pedro Rodrigues Cubero in the year 1699, the said Cubero being at that time governor and captain-general of the province of New Mexico, one of the ultramarine possessions of the crown of Spain.

On the 10th day of December, 1699, the said Juan de Mestas was duly placed in possession, and I have no doubt that he and his descendants and legal representatives have so remained to the present time. Although apparently the boundaries are incoherently stated in these ancient papers, yet I am informed, and verily believe, that from tradition and otherwise the premises can be so located by a competent surveyor as to do justice to the claimants and the United States.

The tract contains in all about 3,000 acres English. The fanega is an ancient measure of land used under Spanish rule in this region, but it is now obsolete. The fanega of grain now in use is about two and one-half bushels English, and it is the general belief that the fanega of planting-land was the same amount on which a fanega of wheat would ordinarily be used for seed. A large extent of pasture or grazing lands was usually conceded in addition to the planting-land in these old grants. The Spanish vara is thirty-three inches English.

I recommend that the grant be confirmed by Congress to the legal representatives of Juan de Mestas, deceased, the original grantee, according to the boundaries and description set forth in the act of possession.

I transmit complete copies of the record in triplicate.

ESTATE OF MAJOR WILLIAM B. SCOTT.

FROM

THE SECRETARY OF WAR,

RELATIVE TO

An appropriation to pay the claim of the estate of Maj. William B. Scott.

APRIL 15, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 2, 1874.

The Secretary of War has the honor to transmit to the House of Representatives, for the information of the Committee on Appropriations, copy of the report of the Assistant Judge-Advocate-General, in the matter of the claim of the estate of Maj. William B. Scott, for balance of claim on "Dalecarlia farm," amounting to $276.49.

From the copies (herewith) of indorsements on said papers, it will be seen that there are no funds to the credit of the Washington Aqueduct applicable to the payment of this claim. It is therefore recommended that in the appropriation for the Washington Aqueduct provision be made for its payment.

WM. W. BELKNAP,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., October, 1873.

In the matter of the claim of the estate of Maj. William B. Scott, for balance of claim on "Dalecarlia farm."

To the honorable the SECRETARY OF WAR:

This is a claim for a small balance alleged to be due the estate o Maj. William B. Scott, on the acquisition by the United States of the "Dalecarlia farm" as a site for the receiving reservoir of the Washington Aqueduct, April 27, 1857. Said farm was conveyed to the United States by Charles Jenkins and wife of New York. It had been purchased by the said Jenkins from the said Scott, and a part of the purchase-money secured by a deed of trust. The United States procured a deed from the trustee, and after clearing off several prior incumbrances paid the said Major Scott, May 27, 1857, five thousand dollars on account of the balance.

Major Scott died shortly after, and March 31, 1859, his widow wrote to Captain Meigs to inquire what had been done with the remainder. Captain Meigs is said to have replied that it was still retained to secure the United States from any other liens.

The supervision of the Aqueduct having been transferred to the Department of the Interior, Mrs. Scott afterward applied to that Department, and was informed by letter of the Assistant Secretary, dated December 12, 1864, that the balance due was $276.49, and that several unsatisfied claims existed which were not known at the time the purchase was made; and further, that her claim having once been fully considered and adversely decided by competent authority, could not be re-opened unless some new and material facts were disclosed.

Said claim was next presented to the War Department, and referred to Major Babcock, who reported, November 23, 1871, that the claim had twice been decided adversely, and no additional information had since been received; and further, that there were several liens on the farm yet unsettled, which, if admitted, would bring the estate in debt to the United States.

August 23, 1873, Mrs. Scott again presents her claim to the Secretary of War, with the following request: "That the balance of the purchase-money ($265.78) may be paid her, with interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, she giving the necessary bonds to secure the United States from any claims that may be made on account of liens or judgments against her husband to an amount not exceeding the balance aforesaid."

With regard to the present application, the new points are the lapse of time and the offer of security. It seems that in Maryland and this District a judgment or specialty of twelve years' standing is no longer good unless the creditor has been under some impediment. Inasmuch as Major Scott has been dead upwards of thirteen years, and the alleged claims, liens, or judgments, do not appear to have been pressed or enforced against the United States, and the amount in question is small, ($276.49,) it is respectfully recommended that the balance due be paid to the estate of the said Maj. William B. Scott, without interest, on the execution to the United States of a bond of indemnity with good and sufficient sureties.

W. M. DUNN,
Assistant Judge-Advocate-General.

Approved.

To be referred to the Chief of Engineers for settlement in accordance with above recommendation.

WM. W. BELKNAP,
Secretary of War.

[Indorsements.]

OFFICE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, October 30, 1873.

Respectfully referred to Col. O. E. Babcock, with directions to carry out the order of the Secretary of War, and pay the amount from any money in his hands applicable to the purpose.

By command of Brigadier-General Humphreys:

J. G. FOSTER,
Lieutenant-Colonel Engineers and Brevet Major-General.

OFFICE WASHINGTON AQUEDUCT,
Washington, November 1, 1873.

Respectfully returned to the Chief of Engineers with the information that there are no funds to the credit of the Washington Aqueduct applicable to the payment of this claim.

O. E. BABCOCK,
Colonel of Engineers, United States Army.

OFFICE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, November 3, 1873.

Respectfully referred to First Comptroller United States Treasury, with request that, as there are no appropriations in the hands of the present disbursing officer of the Washington Aqueduct applicable, he will inform this office whether there is any balance of appropriations prior to June 10, 1872, from which this payment can be made.

By direction and in the absence of Brigadier-General Humphreys:

J. G. FOSTER,
Lieutenant-Colonel of Engineers and Brevet Major-General.

OFFICE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, March 26, 1874.

Respectfully submitted to the honorable Secretary of War, for instructions.

Colonel Babcock reports no funds to the credit of the Washington Aqueduct applicable to the payment of this claim, and the First Comptroller replies to inquiries that he finds no balance of appropriations for the Washington Aqueduct prior to June 10, 1872, from which it can be paid.

It is suggested that a recommendation be made to Congress that the appropriation for the Washington Aqueduct provide for this payment.

A. A. HUMPHREYS,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Engineers.

REDUCTION OF THE CLERICAL FORCE IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

FROM

THE CHIEF CLERK OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT,

RELATIVE TO

The reduction of the clerical force in the War Department.

APRIL 15, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service and ordered to be printed.

In the absence of the Secretary of War, I have the honor to transmit to the House of Representatives, for the information of the Committee on Appropriations, the inclosed letter of the Adjutant-General of the Army relative to the reduction of the clerical force in his office, proposed in the pending legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The views expressed in this letter have received the approval of the Secretary of War, and it is his earnest desire that the bill may be modified so that it will provide for the number of clerks estimated for.

H. T. CROSBY,
Chief Clerk.

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 6, 1874.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, April 6, 1874.

SIR: I have the honor to respectfully call your attention to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill (H. R. 2064, page 40) now under consideration by the House of Representatives, which contemplates a reduction of the clerical force of this office by twenty clerks from the number estimated for in the last annual estimates of the War Department. (See Book of Estimates 1873–'74, page 29.)

I have, in conversations with the Hon. Mr. Coburn, chairman of the Military Committee, and Hon. Mr. Williams, chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department, fully, and, I believe, to their satisfaction, explained the necessity of the number of clerks now employed and the reasons for their continuance. If this bill becomes a law in its present condition, the office will be deprived of twenty clerks who are necessary for the prompt dispatch of the public business, and the efficiency of the office will be seriously impaired. I have, therefore, respectfully to request that the matter may be brought to the attention of the committee, with a view to a modification of the bill as reported, so that it may correspond with the number of clerks estimated for, who cannot be dispensed with without detriment to the public service.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Adjutant-General.

Secretary of War.

COQUILLE RIVER, OREGON.

FROM THE

CHIEF CLERK OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT,

RELATIVE TO

The survey of the mouth of the Coquille River, Oregon.

APRIL 15, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 4, 1874.

I have the honor, in the absence of the Secretary of War, and by his direction, to transmit to the House of Representatives, for the information of the Committee on Commerce, a letter of the 3d instant, of the Chief of Engineers, and copy of report of Maj. N. Michler, Corps of Engineers, upon the survey and examination of the mouth of Coquille River, Oregon, provided for in the river and harbor act of March 3, 1873.

H. T. CROSBY,
Chief Clerk.

Washington, D. C., April 3, 1874.

SIR: Provision was made in the river and harbor act of March 3, 1873, for a "survey or examination of the mouth of Coquille River, Oregon;" and, upon investigation of its object, instructions were given to the officer of engineers placed in charge, to extend his examinations so as to embrace the general question of a navigable outlet to the Coquille River. The report of Major Michler, a copy of which is herewith submitted, is made in obedience to these instructions.

The difficulties to be overcome and the great cost of any useful improvement of the channel at the mouth of this river, have led the officer in charge to the conclusion that the best outlet to the sea would be secured by the cutting of a canal to connect the river with the waters of Coos Bay.

The estimates submitted by him place the cost of such a cut at about $350,000.

The greater part of the distance between deep channels of the river and bay is low. The length of a canal along the line selected would be a little more than five miles. The dimensions deemed sufficient are, width at water-surface thirty feet, and depth four feet below low water at ebb-tide. The canal would be without locks.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. A. HUMPHREYS,
Brig. Gen. and Chief of Engineers.

Secretary of War.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE,
Portland, Oregon, March 12, 1874.

SIR: The following report in regard to the proposed canal to connect the waters of the Coquille River with those of Coos Bay, State of Oregon, is respectfully submitted, in compliance with your instructions. Maps of the line of the lake survey made under my direction, and of the adjacent country, compiled from different authorities, are inclosed for your information. A profile of the entire length of the canal, as contemplated, is also furnished, in order to exhibit the nature of the cut to be made and of the cubic contents of the material to be removed.

Before proceeding to discuss the canal question, a few remarks are deemed necessary to elucidate the matter. The most natural way to reach the waters of the Pacific Ocean from the Coquille River would be by passing out through its mouth. This would, of course, necessitate the improvement of the latter, which, from the character of the entrance, would prove a very difficult and expensive operation. No survey has as yet been made by this office to ascertain the nature and cost of such an undertaking, but by an examination of the Coast Survey Pilot and Charts, and through information gained from other sources, a correct conclusion can be reached.

"The south point of the entrance to this river is a high bluff headland," a mass of rocks, "while the north point is a long, low, narrow spit of land, overlapping, as it were, the southern head, so that the channel runs parallel with and close under it." The channel still continues to run along the northern shore, and then makes a sudden turn to the south. In passing out or in there is great danger of going upon the rocks. "A short distance off it (the mouth) lie several rocks, but not of sufficient size to lessen the western swell which breaks continually across the bar." It is a very difficult entrance, and is seldom attempted. A rocky reef extends across it, which, at low water, is almost bare. Through this an expensive cut will have to be made to render it passable for sea-going vessels. "The widest part of the mouth is less than two hundred yards, after which the river spreads out into a large sheet of shallow water, about two miles long by three-quarters of a mile broad, and bounded by low ground." This basin is not deep enough to accumulate sufficient water at flood-tides, by means of which a strong current could be created to wash out and keep open the channel, which is constantly shifting. Owing to the extreme low shores, they are covered with a few inches of water at the very highest tides. It is reported, at very low tides the river can be crossed by wading over the bar.

The mouth of the river is fifteen miles from Port Orford, and sixteen from Empire City on Coos Bay; a ferry is established about half of a mile above it. In the last sixteen or seventeen years not more than the same number of small vessels have crossed over the bar. A small steamer built on the river lately passed out, bound for San Francisco. A high tide, a smooth sea, no wind, everything favorable at the same time, are requisite in order to insure success. Above the basin the river becomes beautiful; it is from two hundred and fifty to three hundred yards in width, and in appearance like a natural canal. The tide water now runs up forty miles to the mouth of North Fork; formerly, only a few years ago, it ascended to the junction of the Middle Fork. For this distance the depth of water is very great. The river is navigable for about sixty miles. The facts stated explain the difficulties to be overcome, and the correspondingly large amount of money to be expended, if any contemplated improvement, even at the risk of its remaining a permanent one, should be undertaken to improve the channel at the entrance to the river.

The Coquille River and its branches drain a large tract of mountainous country, the coast range, about nine hundred square miles. Its valley is described as being remarkably rich, some two hundred square miles in area; already over two hundred farmers cultivate the soil, with the necessary quota of stores, shops, and mills; all kinds of cereals grow flourishingly, although not as yet much planted; potatoes and fruit (apples and pears) excel; in fact all kinds of esculents can be produced. Most superior and valuable timber profusely cover the land, such as myrtle (laurel) maple, white cedar, white ash, alder, fir, spruce, hemlock, and other species, large quantities of which are being destroyed for want of means to transport the lumber to market. Several projects have been considered for obtaining means of transportation by which to forward the wealth of this valley to the commercial points on the coast, and thereby open a fine country to the many emigrants now seeking homes in Oregon. The initiative in the undertaking has been made by the building of a wooden railway over what is called Isthmus Divide, connecting Beaver Slough, a branch of the Coquille River, with the Isthmus Slough, a tributary or arm of Coos Bay; the accompanying maps and profile indicate the location of the road. It was built by Judge Gilbert Hall, some four years ago, at a cost of about $8,000, in coin; it is a wooden tram-way, consisting of longitudinal wooden rails laid on rough sleepers, the ravines intersecting the divide being crossed by trestle-bridges; it is little more than one and a half miles in length. The means of transportation over this portage consists of a platform-car drawn by a mule, and conducted by one man. Small light-draught steamers are run from the different localities on Coos Bay up the Isthmus Slough to Hall's northern landing, where passengers and freight are transferred to the car, and transported over the tram-way to Hall's southern landing at the head of Beaver Slough. At that point they are placed in canoes, or small boats, which descend the latter to the Coquille River, along which they are distributed at different points. The entire distance from the first landing to the river, following the sinuosities of the sloughs, is about six miles. An entire day is consumed in making the trip, about two tons of freight being transported over the route each day. The amount passed over the portage during the year 1873 was about six hundred tons, consisting of a variety of articles, such as merchandise, mining-apparatus, steam-engine and boiler, farming implements, and produce of every description.

The quantity has been yearly on the increase. In this connection, while considering the annual extension of trade from the ordinary consequences of additional and growing settlements on the river, one important fact must be considered, the obtaining for shipment of many thousands of feet of lumber and many hundreds of tons of coal, the former to be found along the valley of the Coquille, and the latter imbedded in the Isthmus divide within less than a mile of the portage, the production of which alone awaits development when more enlarged means of transportation can be obtained. In place of the very limited kind described as now in use, three several plans have been proposed at different times. The first is the building of a wagon-road, the Coos Bay wagon-road, from the river to the Isthmus Slough. The second is the construction of a narrow-gauge railway between the same points. The third is the digging of a canal to connect the waters now separated by a narrow divide, to enable steamers of small draught to run between the different localities along the river to points on Coos Bay, carrying freight for shipment upon ocean steamers without breaking bulk en route. Surveys have been made of each of the plans, and each have their advocates. The third would seem preferable; by it an uninterrupted line of water-course would be had from the country between the head of navigation and the mouth of the Coquille, a distance of sixty miles, with the present or contemplated wharves at Empire City for sea-going vessels bound in and out of the harbor of Coos Bay. From the point of departure on the river to that sea-port is about 25 miles. A line of steamers already makes regular connections between the latter and San Francisco. The first cost of building a canal would be the greatest, but then again in connection with its utility it would offer an additional outlet to the overcharged waters of the river during the heavy freshets which sometimes occur. These latter, it may be here remarked, would in all probability inundate and seriously damage, owing to the marshy nature of the land upon which they will have to be constructed, any wagon or rail road that may be built to subserve a like purpose as that of the contemplated canal. It must be borne in mind that the greater part of the distance between deep channels of the river and the bay is low, not many feet above the average stage of water in each, as will be seen from the following description of the line of the proposed canal, and as shown on the profile.

The following dimensions are deemed sufficient for all immediate practical purposes: The width of the canal to be 30 feet, and its depth 4 feet below low-water mark at ebb-tide. Commencing at the Coquille, it will at first follow the general course of Beaver Slough. The entrance to the latter will have to be deepened and widened by dredging. The first section of the work, which follows up and continues in the slough 5,280 feet, (one mile,) will also have to be widened and dredged in addition to straightening some of its bends. The second section, 13,200 feet, (two and a half miles,) will be the first cut of from ten to fourteen feet, and will have to be made through a marsh covered with prairie-grass and thick brush, the course running in a northeasterly direction. The third section is 1,500 feet in length, a cut from fourteen to seventeen feet through a swamp that overlays a hard soil. The fourth section is through the thickly-timbered isthmus divide, first following up a deep ravine, the continuance of Beaver Slough, the line being parallel to the tramway; then across the divide proper, intersecting the railway, to the head of a second ravine, and following down the latter, the course again becoming nearly parallel to the road, until the head of the Isthmus Slough is reached. The length of this cut (the fourth) is about three thousand feet, its depth varying from twelve to ninety-three feet; the latter is the greatest height of the summit of the divide. The nature of the soil is loam; some soft or loose rock will be encountered, and perhaps coal be discovered. The fifth section, which will finally complete the work, is through marsh for some four thousand two hundred feet, at about an average depth of nine feet. This cut follows the line of the Isthmus Slough. To recapitulate, the termini of the proposed canal are at Low's place, on the Coquille River, (mouth of Beaver Slough,) and at Aiken's steamboat landing, at the head of Isthmus Slough, arm of Coos Bay. Its entire length will be 27,180 feet, or about five and one-seventh miles.

Owing to the distance being greater from the entrance of the bay to the northern terminus than that from the mouth of the river to the southern one, and in consequence of the different physical formations of the respective localities on the coast, the high water at flood-tide will not reach the terminal points at the same time, the interval being one hour. No locks, however, are necessary, the bed of the canal being on the same level, unless it may prove desirable to retain the water in the canal at high tides for some purpose, and to prevent a too rapid current from passing through the cut on the occurrence of freshets, or during the interval of high tides at the termini. At Aiken's steamboat-landing the depth of water at low tide is 4 feet; the greatest extreme between the highest and lowest water marks known from actual observation is 10 feet; between average high and low tides there is 5 feet. The Coquille, at mouth of Beaver Slough, is over thirty-four feet in depth at low water. The highest water noted, that during the freshet of 1867, was 19 feet above the lowest water gauge; there the mean rise and fall of the tide is also about five feet. There is scarcely any appreciable difference between the tides at the two ends of the proposed canal.

The cross-sections of the canal will be determined by the natural slope of the soil, which upon the isthmus divide is at an angle of thirty-three degrees, or by the character of the rock that may be encountered. The sides of the cut through the low, marshy soil will have to be protected by sheet-piling from the wash of the tides and the scouring effects of the currents. By a proper disposition of the material removed from the cut many acres of marsh-land may be reclaimed.

The principal nature of the work will be the excavation through the divide; the cutting and removal of timber; the dredging of parts of the two sloughs; the cutting of turf from the surface of marsh, and the clearing off of brush.

The following estimate of the cost of the work is respectfully submitted:

Excavation 769,182 cubic yards, at 35 cents	$269,213 70
Dredging 225,979 cubic yards, at 10 cents	22,597 90
Cleaning surface of trees and brush, 40 acres, at $50	2,000 00
Cutting turf and brush from surface of marsh, preparatory to dredging	1,500 00
Sheet-piling, 500,000 feet, at $15 M.	7,500 00
Engineering, transportation, and superintendence	15,000 00
Contingencies, 10 per cent	31,781 16
	349,592 76

The sum total of estimate of cost of construction of proposed canal, as above computed, is $349,592.76.

The survey was commenced and completed during the month of November, 1873. Since that time the maps, estimate, and report, have been in course of preparation when not interrupted by attendance upon other duties.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. MICHLER,
Major of Engineers, United States Army.

PAYMENT OF TROOPS BY CHECKS.

FROM

INCLOSING

A letter from the Paymaster-General, stating in full the objections to the scheme of making payments to troops by checks, as proposed in House bill 2546.

APRIL 15, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 2, 1874.

The Secretary of War has the honor to transmit to the House of Representatives, for the consideration of the Committee on Military Affairs, the inclosed letter of the Paymaster-General, stating in full the objections to the scheme of making payments to troops by checks, as proposed in sections 13 and 14 of bill H. R. 2546.

WM. W. BELKNAP,
Secretary of War.

PAYMASTER-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
March 25, 1874.

SIR: I promised you verbally yesterday to send you in full a statement of the objections to the scheme of making payment to the troops by checks, as contained in sections 13 and 14, of the bill H. R. 2546, reported by the House Military Committee on the 17th March, 1874.

Section 14 is as follows:

"That from and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, all muster and pay-rolls, when made out, shall be forwarded to the paymaster of the department for which such muster and pay-rolls are made out; and the said paymaster shall make out drafts, drawn on the Treasury of the United States, for the amount due to each person respectively whose name shall appear on said muster and pay-rolls; and each of said drafts shall be made payable to the person who shall be entitled to receive such amount. And the said paymaster shall "immediately send all such drafts, together with the aforesaid muster and pay-rolls, to the officer by whom such muster and pay-rolls were made out; and the said officer shall deliver such drafts severally to the persons who shall be entitled to receive them, and who shall have signed the proper pay-roll; and, at any time after receiving such draft, the payee, at his discretion, may indorse it in the presence of his commanding officer, who shall attest such indorsement by his signature: Provided, That the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, in cases where troops are located at remote points, or where payments as hereinbefore provided would work hardship to the men, direct payment in currency as heretofore."

In general terms I can say that this scheme would be very odious to the soldiers; would deprive them of facilities for checks and making deposits heretofore possessed; would put them at the mercy of the post-traders; would injure discipline; would delay and complicate the rolls, the personal presence of the paymaster in conference with the company commander being constantly needed to clear up vagueness in the rolls and lead to intelligent payment of the troops. Onerous and inconvenient to the soldiers and officers, if not impracticable in time of peace, the scheme would be utterly impracticable in time of war.

The objections more in detail can be arranged under the following heads:

1. The scheme would be very objectionable and onerous to the soldier. He wants not a check but the money for three purposes: a little for his own uses, some, perhaps, to send in a check or checks to make remittances, and some to deposit. For all of these purposes the presence of the paymaster is required. He is always provided with funds in New York to give soldiers or officers checks on New York if they apply for them.

If paid in a check, not seeing the paymaster, he would accomplish none of these purposes, and would generally be placed at the mercy of the post-trader. If near a city, and he goes on leave to get his check cashed, he is absent from his duty, and tempted to spend his money and make no deposits.

2. The deposit system would be broken up by this scheme. Under the act of May 15, 1872, the soldier can make deposits to remain with the Government until discharged, when he would receive four per cent. per annum for the same. This system is working admirably, and is calculated to raise the character of enlisted men and prevent desertions. Under it about twenty-five thousand dollars per month is being deposited; the number and amounts of the deposits increasing as the law is getting to be better known and understood in the Army.

The effect of this scheme would be to seduce the soldier from making deposits, and thus in great measure defeat the beneficent purposes of the law.

3. This programme proposes that the rolls shall go from the company commander to the paymaster, who, after making out the figures, sends checks and rolls to the company commander who takes the receipts of the men. Thus between the paymaster and the captain there would be a divided responsibility, and these valuable vouchers intrusted to mails often unsafe and uncertain.

The personal presence of the paymaster in conference with the company commander when the amounts due are carried out, is necessary on account of the omissions, vagueness, and errors often occurring on the rolls. There is scarcely a roll on which some such question does not arise, which under the proposed system would cause long delays for transaction of the business by correspondence; thus for a long time the paymaster would be deprived of his vouchers. Meantime rolls covering subsequent periods would have to be prepared, and how could the soldiers' accounts be assuredly stated without knowledge of who had been paid and how? Meantime deaths, desertions, and absences occur, giving rise to questions of unused checks, and the complications of final accounts.

Now by the present system the paymaster arrives at the post. The rolls are made out and examined on the spot. Each soldier receipts the roll with opportunity to question its correctness; any such question is forthwith settled and payment made. The company commander is left in possession of assured data upon which to base his next roll.

4. The proposed system would demoralize and change the whole theory of the Pay Department. It is now the ambition of the paymaster to reach the rank and file with currency, and be as active as possible. Whereas the other method would tend to make him as inactive as possible, and to keep him in his office, to an extent injurious to the public service.

5. The proviso at the close of the section says that "The Secretary of War may, in cases where troops are located at remote points, or where payments as hereinbefore provided would work hardship to the men, direct payment in currency as heretofore."

This clause betrays a justly founded consciousness that the scheme would work hardship to the men. If the most remote posts are visited, why not all; why not those nearer, which are generally intermediate? To exempt some posts from those visits would make an odious and invidious distinction. Classification of the posts into two kinds, one visited, the other not visited by the paymaster, would inevitably make discontent. Three-fourths of the Army are west of the Mississippi, and the method of payment for the whole Army should be uniform. Thus the number of posts not visited would become small, and the number of paymasters named in the thirteenth section of this bill (thirty) would not be sufficient for the service. Indeed, the War Department might well decide that the method proposed would "work hardship to the men" throughout the whole Army, and thus so far as practicable make little change from the old system.

But at the posts most accessible to banks, say those east of the Mississippi, the proposed method would be objectionable, and injurious to discipline. After the payment, the soldiers would seek leaves of absence in large numbers to visit the adjoining cities to get the currency on their checks, and they would thus get their money in places where there would be the greatest temptation to waste it in dissipation. Thus discouraged from making remittances to their friends or from making any deposits, could a better plan to promote the demoralization of the rank and file be invented?

6. It has been announced that this project is based on the example of the Pension Bureau, which pays the pensioners in checks. But the cases are not parallel. The latter receive quarterly an invariable sum, and generally live in fixed abodes, accessible to banks, where they can readily get their checks cashed. Even with that Bureau, as with every other Bureau paying by checks, there is much delay and vexation by questions growing out of lost checks, forged indorsements, &c. In this office these questions are still arising on checks issued by the Bounty Bureau at least five or six years since. In cases of lost checks the system of duplicates is fraught with annoying delays. (See act 2d Feb., 1872, and General Orders Nos. 6 and 15 of 1872.) The law provides that a period of six months must elapse before a duplicate can be issued.

7. The Pay Department now makes payment by check whenever practicable, especially to officers and discharged men, either to them personally or by use of the mail. The law now contemplates that the greenbacks shall not be held in hand except when absolutely necessary, as for payments to the rank and file. The duty of such payments was satisfactorily accomplished during the late war to millions of troops. It was accomplished with a remarkably small percentage of expense and loss to the Government. And if the experience of the past is worth anything, it should, for economical reasons, serve to deter changing the basis of an organization which has been thus tested.

8. In time of war the difficulties herein urged would be so multiplied as to render payments by checks quite impracticable.

All branches of the staff and the whole machinery of the Army should be habituated in time of peace to the modes of proceeding necessary in time of war.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BENJ. ALVORD,
Paymaster-General, U. S. Army.

DEPUTY SURVEYORS OF PUBLIC LANDS.

FROM THE

TRANSMITTING

A petition of deputy surveyors of public lands asking for an appropriation.

APRIL 15, 1874.—Referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., April 3, 1874.

SIR: The 7th section of the act approved 12th July, 1870, (16 Stat., 251,) declares "that it shall not be lawful for any department of the Government to expend in any one fiscal year any sum in excess of appropriations made by Congress for that fiscal year, or to involve the Government in any contract for the future payment of money in excess of such appropriations."

I have the honor to transmit herewith a petition, addressed by certain deputy surveyors of public lands in Dakota Territory to the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, setting forth the injury to the public interests in the practical working of this section, in the surveying service. The fiscal year begins in July, while May and June are the most favorable months for such service.

The Commissioner can, of course, do nothing to remedy the evil while the law remains unchanged. In transmitting the petition to the Department, he expresses the opinion that the public interests would be greatly subserved by making the appropriations for surveys available from and after the passage of the act.

I fully concur in this opinion, and commend it to the favorable consideration of Congress.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. R. COWEN,
Acting Secretary.

Hon. J. G. BLAINE,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

To the honorable Commissioner of the General Land-Office, Washington, D. C.:

Your petitioners would respectfully beg leave to present to your consideration some of the evils arising from the present restriction or practice in regard to the time of the commencement of surveys by deputy surveyors in the field, and the advantages that would arise to the service from allowing them to commence earlier in the season, with the hope that the subject-matter of this petition, and the facts herein set forth, may be considered of sufficient importance to warrant such a change in regard to the time of beginning their field-work as shall give deputies, in all parts of the United States, the full benefit of that season of the year best adapted to field-operations.

The practice for some years has been to prohibit deputies from executing any surveys before the 1st day of July, thus taking from the surveying season two, at least, of the best months in the year, to wit, May and June. The effect of this prohibition is not merely to shorten the surveying season two months or more, but to prevent any lines from being run by deputies in the United States during that period of the year when the days are longest, and the sun (on which deputies principally depend) has a meridional altitude nearer the zenith, and consequently has less refraction, than at any other time in the year.

The manual of surveying instructions provides that, where the needle can be relied on, the ordinary compass may be used in subdividing and meandering; in all other lines the deputy must use Burt's improved solar compass, or other instrument of equal utility.

The solar compass, on account of its comparative reliability and general adaptation to meet the wants of deputies in the field, is now almost universally in use throughout the United States in running township-lines, guide-meridians, standard parallels, &c. But since the sun is at no time, in the United States, even in June, exactly in the zenith, it follows that the results obtained from this instrument in observations on the sun—like the results obtained from any other astronomical instrument in observations on any other celestial object—will be modified in some degree by atmospheric refraction. In order to make the proper allowance for this refraction, and clear our observations from the error resulting therefrom, it becomes necessary to determine just what this refraction is at different altitudes and at different temperatures, in order to obtain entirely correct results.

The determination of the exact amount of refraction to be allowed at all hours of the day, at all seasons of the year, and in all latitudes, in running lines with the solar compass, appears to be the greatest difficulty which has to be encountered by the deputy in the field, and the principal cause of error in running his lines. The refraction produced when the sun is on the meridian at the time of its greatest northern declination (June) is very small throughout the United States, especially in the southern part, but the refraction at noon, when the sun is on the equator, or has a southern declination, (from the 21st of September to the 21st of March, or thereabouts,) is considerable, especially in northern latitudes. An allowance for this meridional refraction may be made with tolerable accuracy by the deputy, (especially where the sun has a considerable altitude,) for the reason that at twelve o'clock the sun's altitude may be very closely and readily determined by the solar compass; but when the meridional altitude of the sun is only 18°, as would be the case in the northern part of the United States about the 21st of December, or only about 41° when the sun is on the equator, (about the 21st of September,) the determination of the proper allowance, even for meridional refraction, is a matter of some difficulty to the deputy, and a frequent source of error. When we consider that it is only at noon (when we cannot use the solar) that the sun has an altitude even as great as stated above, and that at all other hours of the day the sun is even nearer the horizon than 18° or 41°, (in the northern part of the United States at the time spoken of;) that the laws and amount of refraction, at low altitudes, are not, even at the present day, so thoroughly understood and determined as to furnish the deputy with an infallible guide in making the necessary allowance therefor; that the most that the scientific men can do is to instruct the deputy to make some allowance when the sun is near the horizon, without being able to say just how much; that if the proper amount is not allowed his lines must be affected thereby, it would seem to be the part of wisdom and good policy on the part of the United States to have all surveys (at least all principal lines and township lines) run at that time of year when the work would be as little affected by the effects of refraction as possible. This would be at that time of year when the sun is highest and the days longest. We think it is the experience of all deputies who have run long, independent lines, (as standard parallels and guide meridians,) that these lines can be run with more accuracy and satisfaction (especially in northern latitudes) during the months of May, June, July, and August, when the sun is high and the days are long, than at any other time of year.

It is even doubtful whether, in northern latitudes, it is policy to allow deputies to run principal lines with the solar compass much after the 21st of September. In mountainous regions, where there are deep valleys, and in heavily-timbered districts, it is a short time during even the longest days in the year that the solar compass can be used. In such districts the deputy can do work to much better advantage, both as regards the character of the surveys to be executed, and the time required to complete a given amount of line, if he commence his operations in the field early in the season, when the sun is high. Besides the arguments already adduced in favor of allowing the deputy to commence his field-work earlier in the season, we would beg leave to present the following facts, also: Much of the public land yet remaining unsurveyed throughout the United States is in a prairie country, where horses, mules, or oxen are used by the deputy in transporting the necessary stakes, fuel, and supplies used on his work. In all prairie regions throughout the United States the natural grasses are matured sufficiently to furnish abundant means of subsistence for his stock by the first or at least by the middle of May. The grass is even better in May and June (in northern latitudes, at least) than at any other time of year. There is also a more abundant supply of water, which is a very important consideration in some prairie countries, during the early part of the season, at least in northern latitudes. Furthermore, where the deputy cannot commence his field-work before the 1st of July, the winter is liable to overtake him before he can finish his contract, thus obliging him to make two trips in order to complete his work, or, if he finishes it, often causing great inconvenience and suffering to himself and assistants, on account of cold weather, and, as frequently happens, being obliged to work up the frozen earth with a pick, in order to get the material for building a mound. Mounds built under these circumstances must of necessity be very defective and incomplete. For these and other considerations, not necessary to mention, we respectfully beg leave to ask that the law or practice may be so changed as to allow

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF ENGINEERS.

ARMY BUILDING,
New York, March 18, 1874.

Brig. Gen. A. A. HUMPHREYS,
Chief of Engineers, U. S. A., Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: The board of engineers convened by Special Order 17, War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, January 27, 1874, to examine and report upon the James River and Kanawha Canal project, respectfully report that they met and organized at the office of the engineer in charge, at Richmond, Va., on the 5th of February. By invitation of the president of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company, Col. C. S. Carrington, they thence proceeded, in the steam-yacht kindly placed at the disposition of the board by General W. F. Bartlett, to examine so much of the existing canal from the basin at Richmond as far up as could be compassed in a day's excursion. The following day, after having examined the locks connecting the basin with the docks along the river, they were met by a committee of both houses of the general assembly of the State of Virginia, by whom they were introduced to and received by the senate and house of representatives in session, and were presented to his excellency the governor of the State.

The same night they took passage on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, accompanied by the president and chief engineer of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company, (Col. C. S. Carrington and Mr. J. H. Harris,) and the chief engineer of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, (Mr. H. D. Whitcomb,) for Charleston, W. Va.

As the proposed route down the Great Kanawha below Charleston is to consist of a sluice-dam navigation, it was not deemed necessary to extend the present examination further west than Charleston, especially as the season of the year was unpropitious, and the character of the project could be perfectly understood without such examination. Passing Sunday, February 9, in Charleston, the board had opportunity to obtain much valuable information concerning the proposed route and the extraordinary geological features of the great Kanawha Valley.

On Monday the 10th the board, accompanied by the gentlemen already named, took a special train placed at its disposal by the courtesy of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, and proceeded eastward, examining as they went the location of proposed dams for the slack-water navigation of the Kanawha and New Rivers, and stopped for the night at White Sulphur Springs, on Howard's Creek. The western end of the tunnel being about two and three-quarters of a mile below the Springs, and two and a half miles from its junction with the Greenbrier River, and the eastern end but a few miles eastward, the Springs offered the most convenient point for an examination for the location of the tunnel, and of its shafts, as well as for obtaining a comprehensive idea of the topography of the region of the summit-level. That the ground was covered with snow was of course an obstacle to that thorough examination which the members of the board would have liked to make; nevertheless, the essential features of the location, so far as the canal and tunnel were concerned, were, it is believed, thoroughly understood.

The board visited both of the proposed tunnel termini, and, besides, examined commanding points with relation to modifications, and perhaps change of location for the tunnel. They were of course unable to penetrate the mountain region where the proposed Anthony's Creek reservoir is located; but this is a matter where mere personal examination could have added little or nothing to the information furnished by the surveys and long protracted observations of the competent engineers who have prepared the plans and estimates.

On the following day, February 11, the board, completing its examinations in this region, proceeded to Goshen, and stopped for the night. They had intended at this point to take stage-coaches for Lexington, and thence, taking boat on the North River branch of the James River and Kanawha Canal, to follow it and the main stem to Buchanan, and through the Blue Ridge to Lynchburgh. The state of the roads was reported to be such that the board concluded to proceed by rail to Lynchburgh, where they arrived Wednesday evening, the 12th. One of the members and the recorder proceeded thence down the canal the same evening. The others, all except General Weitzel, who, in consequence of pressing duties, left the board at Goshen for his station, remained at Lynchburgh throughout the next day, Thursday, during which, accompanied by the president and chief engineer of the canal, and by several prominent citizens of Lynchburgh, they made an excursion up the canal to the upper end of Judith Pond and return, thus occupying nearly the entire day. On the following day, Friday, the president of the board left for New York by rail, while the two remaining members, Mr. Latrobe, and Colonel Craighill, passing the day in Lynchburgh, took the canal-packet the ensuing night for Richmond, arriving there Sunday morning.

The board having made, as well as the season of the year would permit, examination of the route, separated, to enable members, while continuing their investigations, to attend to their individual duties.

Before the reconvention of the board, on call of the president, March 9, two of the members, Mr. Latrobe and Colonel Craighill, who had been appointed a committee to examine the estimates, devoted much of their time to this duty, in which they were assisted by Mr. Harris, Mr. Hutton, and Mr. Turpin. They also visited the Hoosac tunnel for the purpose of obtaining information bearing upon tunnel construction, and the president visited Syracuse to obtain from the actual experience of the Erie Canal important facts concerning water-consumption and lock arrangements.

The board having re-convened in New York on the 9th, were favored with the attendance of Mr. Harris (chief engineer of the James River and Kanawha Canal) and of Mr. Hutton; and their several reports and estimates were again gone over by the full board.

The foregoing account of the proceedings of the board will show that, for so vast a subject, these examinations could be but of a very general character. In such a case the obvious mode of proceeding was first to satisfy themselves that the projects presented had been conscientiously made up by competent engineers, and that their data, their facts, their surveys, &c., (to the extent at least purported,) were reliable. The board at the outset unhesitatingly affirms this to be the case in the projects submitted. The project differs, by a world-wide difference, from a mere reconnaissance of a new route. A large part of it lies over a work actually constructed; another portion over an extension of that same work actually commenced, but as yet incomplete; another portion connecting with the last-named and extending over the summit to the Greenbrier as early as 1825–'26, the subject of very accurate surveys and estimates by the subsequently eminent engineer, the late Major McNeill, United States Topographical Engineers. With his accurate topography before them, the surveys have been repeated, and again repeated since, and projects revised, and plans made with all this accumulated information. A great modification, indeed, of the first plans has been made: first, by the late lamented Mr. E. Lorraine, (approved by all subsequent inquiries,) in the introduction of the long tunnel. But to modern engineers such tunnels are no novelty, and its existence in the present plan throws no element of uncertainty, either as to practicability or cost. So, too, with regard to water-supply There can be no reason to call in question the results of the surveys and the protracted observations extending through a whole year of the late Mr. Lorraine.

With regard to a very important part of the line—the Greenbrier and New River slack-water improvement from Howard's Creek to the Great Falls of the Kanawha—the engineer in charge has officially stated that he has not had adequate means of surveying, and therefore that the plans have not been founded on such perfect knowledge of the bed of the river and of its regimen as would be desirable; nevertheless, the board bear witness that the efforts of the late Mr. Lorraine and of his successor, (at the time assistant on this work,) Mr. Harris, have been most strenuous to supply the deficient information, and that their plans for locks and dams have been most carefully and conscientiously made up, while lacking in some elements for satisfactory location or for precision of estimate.

Having convinced themselves of the reliability of the data, by proper evidence, the board must necessarily make these data the basis of their own opinions; and if these diverge from those upon which the plans have been based, it must, in general, be in consequence of modification of those plans being judged necessary.

With these preliminary remarks, a brief description of the project, as presented to our consideration, will now be given.

The James River and Kanawha Canal is a project for connecting the James River at Richmond with the Ohio River at Point Pleasant, by means of a canal and slack-water navigation. The canal to be constructed will have a width of 70 feet at the water-line, with a depth of 7 feet; its locks to be 120 feet between the gates and to have a width of chamber of 20 feet. The tonnage of the boats to be used on it will be about 280 tons. The slack-water navigation is to begin at the Greenbrier River, at the end of the canal, and to continue down this, the New, and the Kanawha, to the Ohio River. The locks for this navigation are designed to be 240 feet by 40 feet, with 7 feet depth of water, and to accommodate a barge of 700 tons, or four boats for the enlarged canal.

From Paint Creek Shoals, on the Kanawha, to the Ohio River, it is proposed to improve the navigation by means of open sluice-dams.

To furnish the supply of water for this improvement, it is proposed to construct two reservoirs, the first in the valley of Anthony's Creek, a tributary of the Greenbrier River, and the second in the valley of Meadow River, a tributary of the Gauley River.

The execution of the project involves work which may be subdivided as follows:

1st. The enlargement of the existing canal from Richmond to Buchanan.

2d. The construction of the projected and definitely-located portion of the canal from Buchanan to the mouth of Fork Run.

3d. The construction of the canal up Fork Run to the summit-level, 1,700 feet above tide, under the Tuckahoe and Katis Mountains, by a tunnel seven and four-fifths miles long, and thence down the valley of Howard's Creek to the Greenbrier River.

4th. The slack-water improvement of the Greenbrier, New, and Kanawha Rivers to Paint Creek Shoals, (with occasional short canals to avoid expensive location of dams.)

5th. The open sluice-dam improvement of the Kanawha River from Point Creek Shoals to its junction with the Ohio River.

Concerning this project, the board is required to report upon "all questions of practicability, plan, and probable cost for a water-communication to the Ohio by the way of the James and Kanawha Rivers, together with the probable time required for its completion, and the cost of maintenance when built."

On the first point, practicability of a water-communication, a resolution, adopted unanimously, shows the sense of the board:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this board, it is entirely practicable to connect the waters of the James and Ohio Rivers by a water-navigation 7 feet in depth.

In this connection we remark that the route from Richmond as far as Covington (243.77 miles) is, from the first-named place to Buchanan, 196½ miles, an established work, to be merely enlarged, and between Buchanan and Covington (47.27 miles) a partially-executed work. There could be no doubt of the practicability of enlargement, unless some unusual obstacle interposed. On the contrary, we are assured by the engineers in whose charge the existing work now is, and to whom it is thoroughly well known, that not only is enlargement practicable, but that it has been carefully estimated for.

The remaining portion of open-canal route between Covington and the Greenbrier has been, almost throughout its whole length, examined by the board, and it is their opinion that it is as practicable to make the open-canal part as in parts where the work has been already executed.

With regard to the tunnel, as presented to us, it is of about the same length as the Mont Cenis Tunnel, and it has a very great advantage over that, in this, that whereas that was wholly driven from the ends, the proposed tunnel will be driven from shafts of moderate height, and at distances seldom exceeding one mile. The rock, too, is of material very easily excavated.

With regard to the proposed reservoirs on Anthony's Creek and Meadow River, the question of practicability depends solely upon that of building dams of the required height, about which no question has been raised. The drawing of water in large volumes and the controlling of its draught, under a head of 60 or more feet, may indeed require unusual arrangements and extraordinary precautions, all, however, perfectly practicable.

With regard to the extension of the water-line from the mouth of Howard's Creek, on the Greenbrier, to the Great Falls, while the board is unanimous as to the question of practicability of a "water-communication," they are not so as to the proposed method of locks and dams, or slack-water navigation; and the difference involves very material differences in the probable cost of the work. All concur, however, in the opinion, as expressed by formal resolution, "that it may be expedient to adopt canal navigation for this part of the line, with occasional exceptions, where it may be desirable in consequence of peculiarly favorable reaches or the necessity of water-supply."

Concerning the further extension of the water-communication of 7 feet at low water from the Great Falls to the mouth of the Kanawha, no question of practicability has been raised, i. e., that by dams and sluices, or else by locks and dams, it may be accomplished.

In the question of practicability, that of water-supply at the summit is necessarily involved. Accepting as reliable the surveys and observations of Anthony's Creek and its water-shed, the question of quantity of water available from that source is accepted with them. Taking actual experience on the Jordan summit of the Erie Canal, for estimating water-consumption, the demand would be somewhat greater than in the estimates presented to us; nevertheless, a large surplus still remains, while, on the other hand, the whole Greenbrier Valley, from near Howard's Creek to its sources, lies above the proposed summit-level, and a large portion of its water-shed (five times that of Anthony's Creek) may be, by reservoirs, converted into gathering-ground for the canal. The board, therefore, are unanimous in the opinion that an ample water-supply can be commanded.

On the second point submitted, viz, the plan, there are minor differences of opinion applying to all that portion east of the summit, (or, more generally speaking, to all everywhere which shall be open canal,) which, however, will involve very considerable differences as to cost. These differences refer to whether the proposed plans, with single locks, shall be accepted as they are, or whether the locks, remaining single, shall be enlarged; or, finally, whether double locks shall be everywhere constructed, and the sides of the prism be revetted.

So far as regards the tunnel, the board is unanimously of opinion that a tunnel of the dimensions proposed, (52 broad by 34 high,) i. e., wide enough for passing everywhere, should not be attempted, and on the suggestion of one of our members unite on the recommendation of a single tunnel with turn-outs of dimensions which will be fully set forth in his individual report, with which, hereafter, if found necessary, a second tunnel may be combined. It is also suggested that the tunnel and canal construction may be facilitated by raising the level 20 feet, so as to avoid the deep cutting in the narrow valley of Howard's Creek; or improved by a radical change of location, taking a point near the railroad-crossing in the ravine of Brush Creek, or Jerry's Run, for the eastern terminus, and the same point on Howard's Creek for the western. By this it is supposed that two miles of canalling would be saved, and the location laid in a more open valley (Brush Creek) than Fork Run; or, finally, and possibly, by starting from the last-named point and tunneling a distance scarcely exceeding that originally designed by Mr. Lorraine, (nine miles and a fraction,) the valley of the Greenbrier may be reached, by which the expensive canalling in Howard's Creek ravine and the feeder would be wholly dispensed with. These modifications of location are not mentioned as matters of positive recommendation, but as subjects for further survey, with a view to having the best possible location.

The board here remark, too, that in so long a tunnel the question of traction assumes a very predominant importance. Diminution of the great cost of such works impels the fixing of the very narrowest dimensions admissible. On the other hand, resistance to traction increases so rapidly, as the dimension of the tunnel is made to approximate to the dimension of the boat, that it becomes a very important question how those dimensions should be fixed; whether the diminution of width (by which the cost of excavating and arching is much diminished) may not be compensated by an increase of depth; and finally, that the mode of traction be positively fixed before the tunnel section and interior arrangements are finally determined. The long experimental difficulties encountered on the St. Quentin tunnel, three and one-fourth miles long, (Belgium,) and the Pouilly tunnel, two and one-tenth miles long, (France,) in applying horse-power and steam, show that the tunnel cannot be economically and successfully planned till the matter is entirely settled. Were the question still in the form originally presented to us, i. e., of a single tunnel wide enough for passing, this matter of traction would play a less important part, for there would be a wide water-way, (in which, nevertheless, there is still an increase of 25 per cent. in the traction, according to Mr. Hutton's calculations,) but with a narrow tunnel the question becomes of very great importance.

Concerning the plans for lock and dam navigation on the Greenbrier, New, and Kanawha Rivers, there is difference of opinion as to the applicability of the system, while it is admitted that further surveys are necessary to the final adjustment of these plans. The engineer in charge states officially to the board, "I would not build dams on bowlders, but I have no doubt of our ability to carry the work through the New River sections successfully by the use of the ultimate resort of a canal at points where others fail." As four of the New River dams, beside several others, are, in the projects before us, founded where as yet the bed-rock has not been discovered, the above statement is conclusive that the plans need revision. As there is not complete unanimity, as before observed, concerning the success of the slack-water method of navigation in this locality, the objection to it must be left for discussion in the individual reports.

On the third point submitted to the board, viz, the probable cost, the resolution of the board—that, in the opinion of the board, the water-line by the James River and Kanawha route, with 7 feet depth, may be completed in six years at a cost of not more than $60,000,000, allowing an unusually broad margin for contingencies which cannot be accurately measured; the cost may reasonably be expected to be within $55,000,000, and possibly not exceed $50,000,000—expresses the sense of the majority of the board both as to probable cost and time of completion.

It has already been stated that the estimates submitted by the engineer have been revised and in general seemed adequate for the work proposed. Indeed, the only increase in the scale of prices has been a moderate one applied to the summit-tunnel, at the recommendation of one of our members, whose experience has made him particularly authoritative on this subject. One of the members of the board does not concur in the above-specified probable cost, his dissent being founded on non-concurrence in the portion of the plans which involves slack-water navigation and on the necessity of doubling the locks or increasing, with their dimensions, those of the canal-prism in order to accommodate the expected traffic.

Concerning the fourth and last point submitted, viz, "the benefits to commerce to be derived from the construction of such a work," the board can only speak in general terms. Indeed, it cannot be expected of its members, most of whom are little conversant with the statistics of commerce and with those intricate details which are involved in questions merely of profit on capital invested, to speak otherwise than in general terms.

In such terms the following resolution expresses the unanimous opinion of the members:

In the opinion of the board, this route presents extraordinary claims as the measure of relief to the population of the Western States, in furnishing them for their bulky productions cheap transportation to a market, and for fostering the commerce of the United States by developing immense mineral resources now neglected.

A glance at the map of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains shows that the northern frontier is skirted by the great lakes and the Saint Lawrence River, furnishing, with the adjunct of the Erie Canal, water-transportation to the seaboard to the entire northern border. The Mexican Gulf forms the southern boundary, and, by aid of the rivers which it receives, and especially by the Mississippi, furnishes water-transportation to the regions through which they ramify. On the other hand, there is a great central region for which these routes to the seaboard and a market are too long. If we regard the Mississippi River as a great north and south or meridian line of water-transportation, bisecting the country, as distinguished from the lakes and the Gulf which skirt the northern and southern boundaries, we shall find that, while this great central axis sends out to the westward its numerous great and parallel arms to the foot of the Rocky Mountains, by which it draws to itself the freight-commerce of this vast region, it directs one single central arm—the Ohio—to the eastward and toward the Atlantic seaboard, and that the natural and shortest prolongation of this arm to the Atlantic seaboard is the Kanawha, and, by implication, the "central water-line" upon which we are called to report. With these general remarks, we believe we may, in this report, dismiss the subject, referring, for statistics especially relating to it, to the numerous printed documents and to appended statements of several of the individual members.

It could hardly be expected that on all points connected with so vast a project there should be perfect unanimity. Hence, while unanimous in the foregoing, the several members deem that the full exhibition of their several views requires individual expressions of opinion, which will be appended to this.

Respectfully submitted.

1. Remarks of General J. G. Barnard supplementary to the general report of the board on the James River and Kanawha Canal project.

In the general report it is stated that "one of the members of the board does not concur in the above specified probable cost, his dissent being mainly founded on non-concurrence in the portion of the plans which involves slack-water navigation, and upon the necessity of doubling the locks, or to increase, with the dimensions of the locks, those of the prism, to accommodate the expected traffic."

Concerning the increase in lock dimensions without enlargement of prism, width, and depth, (and the measure is understood to be in accordance with the views of the engineers of the existing canal, and as it has been unanimously not only approved but recommended by all my colleagues on the board,) I do not care to press my non-concurrence further than its verbal expression, merely stating that, not having had practical experience on canals, I could only form my opinion upon the well-developed experience of the great work from which actually proposed dimensions of the work submitted to us, and of most other like canal projects, have been taken—the Erie Canal.

So far as I have had opportunity of learning that experience, the tonnage estimated for the proposed canal (three times as great as the Erie has yet ever carried) demands either double locks or much enlarged tonnage in its boats, to be obtained only by increasing the lock dimensions, and with them the prism dimensions.

For another reason I have found myself unable to acquiesce in the conclusions of the majority with regard to the plans and probable cost of the work. I refer to the proposed "lock and dam" navigation of the Greenbrier and New Rivers, on a scale such as to admit steamers, or tow-boats with canal-barges, (locks 240 feet long and 40 to 50 feet wide.)

In order to be brief, I will allude first to that portion of the work which is least suited to that kind of navigation, viz, that portion of the New River from Bowyer's Ferry to the mouth of the Gauley. It is eighteen miles in length, and has an average fall of 15 feet per mile. The expressive term "cañon," though sometimes extended much further, is more especially confined to this portion. "The river here breaks through Sewell Mountain, and is confined throughout within narrow limits bounded by rugged banks and precipitous cliffs rising many hundred feet above the surface of the water." Along this chasm the project shows 15 dams, averaging one and one-fifth miles apart, and 20 locks; the longest dam is 607 feet, and the shortest 317 feet. The average length is 404 feet; average height, (from foundations,) 30 feet. The least lift of any lock is 9 feet; the greatest 24 feet; lifts of 15, 16, 17, and 18 feet very frequent. The extreme flood-discharge of the river is estimated to be 98,000 cubic feet per second, and to flow over a dam of average length, (404 feet,) with a height of 17½ feet, (about.) The locks are to be 40 feet wide; to be correspondingly increased, (i. e., to 46 or 48 feet,) if the enlarged lock recommended by the majority of the board be introduced into the canal part of the line.

The regimen of the river is scarcely at all known, and even the amount of flood-discharge is calculated upon the "concurrent reports of nearly all the engineers who have surveyed the river, that it seldom, if ever, rises more than 8 feet on the ledge, 1,300 feet long, over which flow the Great Falls of New River; otherwise known as Richmond Falls." The lock-gates and guard-walls are to be built high enough to exclude these floods, which are computed to rise 17½ feet on the average dam, and 19 or 20, probably, on those of minimum length.

The Greenbrier, to junction of New River, forty-nine miles, has an average fall of between 6 and 7 feet; and from thence to Bowyer's Ferry (about the same distance) the New River falls (average) nearly 10 feet; thence to Great Falls, eighteen miles, 15 feet per mile, as before stated. The floods of the Greenbrier are stated by Mr. Hutton to be 20 feet high; of the New River, 30 to 35 feet from Stretcher's Neck (about fifteen miles above Bowyer's) to Bowyer's, and for a few miles below Miller's Ferry 40 to 50 feet.* The Greenbrier and upper parts of New River would be, of course, more amenable to the slack-water system than the extremely unfavorable portion first alluded to; and it is quite possible that reaches of some extent may be introduced. Whenever, however, the leakage is through locks necessarily laid with full exposure to the floods, (as they must be to lock directly from pool to pool,) there will be the danger of destruction and the dangers and obstacles of currents. In the plans before the board there are, in all, 60 dams and 75 locks, the latter with an average lift of 14 feet.

The foregoing statement of the elements which make up the proposed "lock and dam" † navigation will suffice to show that they are very unusual. Neither Mr. Harris, (chief engineer of the James River and Kanawha Canal Company,) in his report on the subject, January 15, 1874, nor his predecessor, the late Mr. Lorraine, in answering the "objections to canals in mountain districts," cite any real precedents. ‡

I would not urge my individual opinion, formed from the most thorough review of this subject of improvement of rivers which I have been able to make, against those of the numerous distinguished engineers who have planned or given their approval to the system; but as an engineer, consulted by the Government on this question, I cannot, while unconvinced of the adequacy and fitness of this link of a "great central water-line" of communication between the trans-Alleghanian States and the Atlantic seaboard, officially affirm its "practicability," though I have no doubt that, so far as mere construction is concerned, it is so. I believe the proper and safe basis for the project for this part of the route to be an independent canal, with perhaps the introduction of occasional reaches of slack-water which may be peculiarly favorable for navigation or necessary for the purposes of water-supply.

The rivers along which this navigation lies are very tortuous, the straight line from Howard's Creek to Great Falls having little more than half the length of their actual course. Thus far the river channel and immediate margins have alone been made the subject of survey and study, and scarcely more than a guess can be made as to the direction and depth of the valleys of the numerous creeks that enter. It is at least within the compass of a reasonable probability that, by skillful use of these ravines as sites for the locks, combined with tunnels of greater or less length, and with occasional slack-watered portions of the river, the canal and locks may be removed entirely from the river-bed, and

* Flood-marks of a height very much exceeding these last figures have been unmistakably discovered at one locality in the cañon. As it is exceptional in height, (69 feet,) peculiar to the locality, and never actually observed, I only allude to the recorded fact. The reduction of these floods to less than 30 feet, by the removal of bowlders, is assumed, but, to my mind, far from demonstrated. The dams, even below Bowyer's Ferry, average but 30 feet above foundations, and considerably less than 30 feet above low water. They will, therefore, be overtopped by back-water, by floods of less than 30 feet. Whether, therefore, the guard-locks and short reaches of independent canal (the sole harbors of refuge to boats caught in these floods) be submerged, depends, it would seem, on the tenability of this assumption.

† There is an important distinction to be made between a pure "lock and dam" navigation, such as this is, (with the exception of some short canal-reaches where rock foundations for dams are not found,) and a "slack-water" navigation in which favorable reaches of slack-water are introduced. The latter is not inconsistent with entire removal of lift-locks from the river to dry land.

‡ Where the James River Canal passes the Blue Ridge, with a fall of about 14 feet per mile, the navigation is independent canal. Above and below the Blue Ridge the slack-water consists of occasional favorable reaches connected by canal, the fall being less than 5 feet per mile. So of the North River branch, where the fall is 9½ feet per mile. The locks, moreover, are only 15 feet in width.

the length of the line greatly reduced, doing away with most of the dams, placing the locks where their construction will (diminished to the standard size of canal-locks) cost but a fraction of the sum estimated for those of the proposed plan, and where they will be in perfect security. Against this economy must, however, be set off the increased cost of building a canal trunk on very difficult ground, and of driving numerous tunnels.

In the initiation of a route presented as a great national measure to be undertaken by the Government for accomplishing objects which the board concurs with the warmest advocates in attributing to this, there should be no doubtful element, nor should the increased cost be any objection to the fixing of the whole project on its proper basis. The plans presented for the preparation of these rivers for lock and dam navigation by steamboats and tows are avowedly incomplete, and the estimate not presented as accurate. Their modification by the adoption as a basis of an independent canal, in conjunction with the adaptation of the locks and canal section to the proposed traffic, may, and probably will, increase the cost beyond the highest sum mentioned in the general report of the board.

Respectfully submitted.

J. G. BARNARD,
Col. Engineers and Bvt. Maj. Gen., U. S. A.

NEW YORK, March 28, 1874.

NOTE CONCERNING WATER CONSUMPTION AND SUPPLY.

I. Consumption.—The portion of the line to be supplied from the summit-level is that stretching from Covington to the Greenbrier, and this length, exclusive of the tunnel, is 21.9, or, in round numbers, 22 miles.

The maximum lift of any locks (which governs the calculation) is 14 feet. For single locks Colonel Albert, in his exhaustive treatment of this question, says two locksful per boat should be allowed for passage of summit. For double locks on the Erie nearly one and a half are actually consumed.

As the above number of boats is (for single locks) excessive, however, I retain the computation at 1½, and we require for lockage 10,080,000 per day = 7,000 per minute.

On the Erie Canal, of almost identical section, filtration and evaporation consume, as tested by observation on the Jordan level, fifteen miles long, 200 cubic feet per minute. Hence, for 22 miles, 6,336,000 cubic feet per day = 4,400 per minute.

Leakage at lock-gates, double locks at two extremities of the Jordan level on the Erie Canal, (one lock 7 feet on 5½ feet lift, width 18 feet,) is 3,000 cubic feet per minute.

Our locks are single, but they have twice the lift, and they are one-ninth wider. It is rather within limits to allow the same, 4,320,000 cubic feet per day = 3,000 cubic feet per minute.

There are other causes of waste (see Colonel Albert's report) which, on the Erie, are estimated at 900 feet per minute for this level. I will assume 500 feet; hence, for—

Waste at structures, 720,000 cubic feet per day = 500 cubic feet per minute. Total, 21,456,000 cubic feet per day = 14,900 cubic feet per minute.

Now, it is not certain that the tunnel will consume no water,* and the

* On the Illinois Canal deep cuts through stratified rock have been found to waste water more than other excavations, and to be difficult to puddle.

feeder from the dam on Greenbrier will certainly consume a great deal. (See Colonel Albert's report.) Hence it would be better to assume as—

Total required, 25,000,000 cubic feet per day = 17,360 cubic feet per minute.

II. Water-supply.—The total discharge of Anthony's Creek for the twelve months commencing July 1, 1851, was found by Mr. Lorraine to be 5,670 millions of cubic feet; the area of the basin one hundred and two square miles, showing an actual drainage of two-thirds the usual rain-fall of 36 inches, and more than two-thirds the rain as gauged during these twelve months, (34¼ inches.) The proposed reservoir will contain 4,806 millions of cubic feet; and as a daily evaporation of ¼ inch from its surface is allowed for 900 millions, it will practically store all the available drainage of the basin. The total annual discharge of the Greenbrier can be only inferred from the area of its drainage-basin; and this, from imperfection of maps, can be but rudely approximated to. It is probably four to five times that of its tributary, Anthony's Creek, i. e., its drainage should be twenty-two and a half to twenty-eight thousand millions of cubic feet, the smallest of which numbers greatly exceeds the contents of Mr. Ellet's proposed Meadow River reservoir. How much of this drainage may be gathered and utilized for the one hundred and twenty days of summer, over and above the actual discharge of the river, (estimated by Mr. Hutton at 8⅓ millions of cubic feet per day for the summer months,) can only be determined by survey. Although McNeill says that the Greenbrier Valley is "admirably adapted to reservoirs," (he had in mind comparatively small ones,) a glance at Mr. Ellet's description and map of the Meadow River reservoir suffices to show that no such topography exists in the Greenbrier Valley, and that it would be hazardous to affirm that one-third of its drainage (by resort to numerous small reservoirs) could be collected.*

These two streams, or rather the Greenbrier alone, to which Anthony's Creek is but a tributary, are the main sources of water-supply to the summit; but it would seem that from these the supply could be readily doubled; and, indeed, much more than doubled.

Assuming that 25 millions per day (or 3,000 millions for 120 days) are required for the canal, and 2,232 millions in addition for the Greenbrier slack-water navigation, (which is but a small fraction more than is consumed in the estimated lockages,) and the total contents of the Anthony's Creek reservoir, added to the summer flow of the Greenbrier, is nearly all called for as a supply for the project now presented. A reduction of such unusual "lifts" as 14 feet in locks drawing from the summit-level would be desirable. Arrangements of locks increasing consumption cannot safely be made without increasing the supply arrangements; that is, by constructing other reservoirs, supposing, as I do, that, at the very outset, the number of lockages to be as estimated.

2. Letter to the Chief of Engineers of Mr. Benj. H. Latrobe.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE, ARMY BUILDING,
New York, March 19, 1874.

GENERAL: The joint report of the board expressing the views which I entertain, in common with my colleagues, upon the points embraced in the instructions under which we are acting in reference to the proposed extension of the James River and Kanawha Canal to the Ohio River, I have only to offer some suggestions as to the mode of carrying the work into effect in its final location and construction.

* It is possible, perhaps, though no one reservoir can be made, that by a costly succession of dams and reservoirs along the main valley, the whole drainage might be gathered.

In stating my opinion of its practicability I mean to express my belief that its cost will not be greater than the objects it contemplates will fully warrant. In regard to the dimensions of the work best suited to the accommodation of the trade to pass over it, and to the economy of its transportation, I see no reason to dissent from those upon which the plans and estimates of Colonel Craighill have been founded. I will, however, offer a suggestion on this head further on.

As respects the plans of the different structures, viz, the dams, locks, aqueducts, culverts, &c., they appear to me to be judiciously designed.

From the examination I have made of the prices of the different classes and kinds of work, I believe them to be sufficient, with perhaps one exception, which I will notice in its place. The proposed mode of conducting the work upon the enlargement of the existing canal between Richmond and Buchanan I think judicious—that is, to retain the present locks upon the part near Richmond, where the local trade is heavy, and place the new locks alongside of them, and for the remainder of the distance to let the new occupy the site of the old locks, where those sites are the best, care being taken to suspend the business of the canal for as short a time as possible, which can be done by proper arrangements. The widening and deepening the canal to the new dimensions by removing deposits in it, and by excavating on the berme side, and raising and strengthening the present towing path with the material, seems also the best manner of effecting the object, although at rocky bluffs it may be better to extend the existing embankment outward to a greater or less extent as the particular case may require.

As the improvement is partly to consist of slack-water and partly of canal, I think that the late description of work should be preferred wherever it will not involve too great an increase of cost. From such observation as I was enabled to make upon the Greenbrier and New Rivers, it appeared that good ground for a canal could be found at a number of points, and should be availed of. The dams upon these rivers, as projected, are of necessity high, in consequence of the rapid fall of the stream, and, however well-built, are not altogether free from danger. They should, therefore, be reduced to the smallest number consistent with other proper considerations, and be placed at no points where solid rock cannot be reached. Where that foundation cannot be had, I would advise a canal, at whatever cost it would be attended by, and I will here suggest whether, in view of the many serious difficulties of construction upon parts of those rivers, and especially in the cañon part of New River, approaching the Gauley River, it would not be best to carry the canal and slack-water improvement of the dimensions proposed for the part of it east of the mouth of Howard's Creek, down those rivers to a point a little below the Falls of Kanawha, and make the transfer from barges to canal-boats at that point. The cost of this transfer will be the same at whatever point it may take place, while the locality will be more favorable at the lower point. I am, of course, aware of the reason for extending the barge and steam towing system as far east as may be judiciously done. At the estimates of comparative cost of freightage, which are used in the report of Colonel Craighill, it would seem that the three mills per ton per mile of barge transportation, and 3.6 mills for canal carriage would make for the one hundred and fifteen miles from the mouth of Howard's Creek to a point a mile or two below the Falls of Kanawha a difference of 7 cents per ton. Such a difference should not, of course, be disregarded, but the question remains open whether the difference in the cost of constructing and maintaining the two descriptions of improvement would not more than counterbalance this apparent difference in the cost of carriage. It is certainly necessary to keep the cost of construction always in view, otherwise, in order to cheapen transportation to the public who use the improvement, an amount of capital might be invested in it too large even for the resources of the National Government to meet.

If a canal and slack-water, with locks of half the dimension of those required for the barge and tug system, can not only be built at a largely decreased cost, but maintained too, the tolls, which are an important part of the expense of carriage, may be reduced, even if they are intended to be no higher than will just keep the work in repair. Nor can the fact that the Government, upon which the construction of the line will devolve, may not look for interest upon its cost, render that point one of indifference, as the more dead capital it has on hand the more the people must be taxed in one form or other for its support.

This consideration may possibly be regarded as remote and indirect, especially as the part of the country most urgent for new channels of cheap transportation would, perhaps, bear but a small proportion of such increased taxation.

As I believe it has been expected by the board that I would give some special attention to the summit-tunnel as one of the most marked characteristics of the project, I will now submit what occurs to me to say upon that subject.

Having some years since, in a letter to the late Mr. Lorraine, expressed my entire confidence in the practicability of this apparently formidable feature of the work, I have nothing to recall in that regard. What I saw of it upon the ground recently, made it assume, indeed, a more favorable aspect than before. There are, however, questions open in regard to its location, which have already claimed the attention of the board, and which can only be decided by additional instrumental surveys. The suggestion of General Barnard as to a change in the location of the canal east of the summit, so as to make it approach the east end of the tunnel by the valley of Brush Creek or Jerry's Run, instead of the valley of Fork Run, is fully worthy of careful examination, which may result in showing a tunnel of little if any greater length, with a reduction of length and cost in the canal eastward thereof. This would suppose the west end of the tunnel to remain unaltered in position, and to debouch upon Howard's Creek, as proposed heretofore. I would suggest, however, that the summit-level of the canal be raised 20 feet, or by two 10-foot lift-locks, at the west end, and 18 feet by two 9-foot lift locks at the east end, which would allow a slope in the whole length of the tunnel (of 7.8 miles) of 2 feet, or at the rate of three inches per mile, to facilitate the delivery of the water eastward from the feeder which must enter at the west end of the level, and to create a slight current of about one mile per hour to assist the loaded boats in their passage eastward. If this slope is considered too much it may be reduced to what may be thought better to suit the purpose in view.

The walls and gates of the first lock at the east end would, of course, require to be of 2 feet additional height to prevent waste at the first lock when boats were not passing, and as the canal must be fed mainly from the summit as far as Covington, the surplus water which would flow to the east end of the tunnel if a slope were given would be passed by the flumes down to that point, to maintain the supply required by filtration and evaporation on the east side of the mountain, where this last source of waste will be somewhat greater than on the west side owing to the more southern exposure. My chief reason for suggesting the raising of the summit level is obviously to cheapen the cost of construction, and hasten the time of completion, especially at the west approach in the bed of Howard's Creek, where I apprehend serious difficulty would be met in the excavations, owing to the depth to which the bottom must be reduced, and at a point where the extreme narrowness and precipitous character of the ravine would make it almost impossible to exclude from the cutting the creek when swollen at all.

I have drawn upon the profile what I would propose in this case, and which from such calculations of quantities as I have been able to make, I estimate will effect a saving of about $759,000 in the approach-cuts at both ends, the length of the tunnel remaining the same as before. Another effect of raising the summit-level the proposed 20 feet will be felt in reducing to that extent the depth of the shafts and in cheapening their construction, and the hoisting of the material of the tunnel through them by about $74,000, the aggregate saving equaling $833,000. From this must be deducted the cost of constructing, maintaining, and attending four locks, estimated at equivalent to $147,000; leaving a balance of about $686,000.

This additional lockage will, indeed, practically lengthen the canal about one and two-thirds miles, if we assume a speed of two and a half miles per hour and 10 minutes to pass a lock. The precise value of this virtual elongation, I do not propose to estimate. It may be more than enough to overbalance the advantages of the saving of capital; but we should go into these considerations in every case where a shortening of distance is invited, if we do it in this. I do not myself perceive why the precise elevation of 1,700 feet above tide should be chosen more than any other of about the same height, while I fully approve the great reduction which the late Mr. Lorraine's good judgment proposed, and which meets, I believe, the approval of the entire board.

The location, plans, and estimates before us are entitled to the utmost consideration and confidence, yet, as the gentlemen who have presented them freely admit, may be susceptible of advantageous modification in their details when the work comes to be laid out and executed.

Another advantage of raising the summit-level would be felt in the conclusive reason it would afford for adopting the cut-off line at the bend first above the mouth of Howard's Creek, where the cutting would be much reduced, and about a third of a mile of distance saved over the line around the bend, reducing the loss of equated distance from increased lockage to about one mile. The creek can also on the higher level be passed under the canal by an aqueduct above the bend, and the locking-down into the basin at the Greenbrier River be made after passing through the cut.

In this connection, I would suggest whether it would not be better to move the feeder-dam upon the Greenbrier from where it appears to be placed upon the map down to the point which I have marked A thereon, and where there would appear to be probably a good ledge foundation, judging from the bluff at that point. The dam, if placed here, would, of course, be much higher and more costly than if located at the upper site, as it would feed a 20-foot higher summit-level, and the bed of the river is probably five or six feet lower, so as to make the dam some 35 feet high. The pool, which would be formed as a storage-reservoir, would probably more than compensate the increased cost. About a mile in length of the feeder would be saved upon bad ground. A tunnel of about 900 feet long, and a section of 15 by 10 through the point of hill at the mouth of Howard's Creek, would save a third of a mile more of difficult ground, the entire saving of length of feeder, also, promoting economy of water

It is proper I should say here that if General Barnard's suggestion of a location of the main tunnel, which would make it debouch directly on the Greenbrier River, should be found to be preferable, then the preceding proposal to raise the summit-level may lose its force, as Howard's Creek in that case would, at the point of crossing it, be far above the level of the tunnel, and thus entirely out of the way. The length of the main tunnel would, however, in that event be increased upwards of a mile, and the shafting toward its western end be perhaps separated too widely for the earliest completion of the work.

I submit some diagrams showing three different forms which the tunnel may be made to assume, the notes upon which will make their relative cost appear, leaving their relative advantages to be discussed. If expense of construction is to have the consideration usually given to it, and the reasons for a restriction of outlay of capital, at first at least, and until the trade fully develops itself, are to prevail, my opinion is that the single tunnel, with passing-places for boats at every fourth of a mile, would be the best to estimate for. I doubt whether the rock through which the tunnel will probably pass would stand without artificial support until it could be arched, if driven of the full width of 52 feet within the lining, or 57 feet exterior to it, which width in the form of tunnel proposed would be necessary for but a short length of about 140 feet at the recesses, in each quarter of a mile. If, however, the system of turn-outs or passing-places be rejected, the double tunnel shown on the plan should, except so far as resistance to traction is involved, have the preference over the single wide tunnel. In comparing the estimated cost of the several plans, I have used the prices of the report of Colonel Craighill; although, as I have intimated above, I think that in the case of this tunnel they should be increased, in view of what has been already learned of the cost of the Hoosick Tunnel, and of the contingencies affecting that of any work of the character and extraordinary magnitude of the one now in contemplation. I think it, therefore, prudent (while admitting that Colonel Craighill had good data for his own estimate) to add about 28½ per cent. to the price per cubic yard of excavation and 30 per cent. to that of masonry, as estimated in the report of Mr. W. R. Hutton, of the 21st January, 1871, to Colonel Craighill, increased by the addition to it made by the latter. This estimate of $5 per cubic yard for excavation and $8 for masonry in the tunnel was increased 10 per cent. for contingencies by Mr. Hutton, and 5 per cent. additional by Colonel Craighill, making $5.77½ and $9.24 per cubic yard, which I propose to make $8 and $12 respectively. The price of shaft-excavation, $20 per cubic yard, I consider quite sufficient.

Applying these advanced prices to the quantities given by the single tunnel of 34 feet in clear width and similar height, with recesses every quarter of a mile for passing boats, and assuming the whole length of the tunnel to be lined with masonry instead of one-half its length, as previously estimated, and including the cost of a towing-path of timber, we will have, as the cost of such a tunnel, 7.8 miles in length, $16,192,487, which is $884,914 more than the previous estimate of $41,307,573 for a tunnel of a uniform width of 52 feet in the clear. The narrower tunnel can be widened hereafter without interfering with its continued use, to the same width of 52 feet, (which it is designed to be at the recesses,) whenever the demands of the trade may require, or should another tunnel be constructed alongside of it, the work can be executed at much reduced cost compared with the first, using the original tunnel for removal of the material through cross connecting galleries, and boats upon the canal.

The timber platform is preferable to a solid one for the towing-path, as it enlarges the cross-section of the canal by allowing a free flow of the water within the wood-work, and so reduces the resistance to traction, while it is of cheap construction and readily repaired. Should, however, as is highly probable, steam-power be used on the canal instead of animal, the towing-path may be omitted, with an estimated saving of $123,000.

The estimated cost of the whole work may now be summed up, taking Mr. Turpin's estimate for the two hundred and sixty-one miles from Richmond to the mouth of Fork Run, and Mr. Hutton's thence to the Ohio River, with Colonel Craighill's addition for contingencies, substituting only the estimate just offered by myself for the summit tunnel, in place of the previous one.

From Richmond to the mouth of Fork, 261 miles	$14,781,644
From mouth of Fork Run to mouth of Howard's Creek, excavation of tunnel, 12.6 miles	2,124,662
From tunnel, including towing-path of timber, and with (7.8 miles included in the above 12.6 miles) passing-places for boats each one-fourth of a mile	16,192,487
From feeder and Anthony's Creek reservoir	497,129
From mouth of Howard's Creek to Lyken's Shoals, Greenbrier, and New Rivers, 116.5 miles	14,567,895
* From Kanawha River, Lyken's Shoals, to Point Pleasant, including Meadow River reservoir, 85.1 miles	1,071,290
Total Richmond to Point Pleasant, 475.2 miles	49,235,107
To which add amount allowed by Colonel Craighill upon the estimates of Messrs. Turpin and Hutton, for contingencies	2,377,738
	51,612,845
If the summit-level be raised 20 feet, deduct	686,000
Leaving	50,926,845
And if the Richmond dock and lock is deducted on the ground that it should be built by that city	1,300,000
The aggregate cost of the work would then be	49,626,845

This estimate should, in my opinion, prove sufficient if the work be judiciously conducted, the heavier parts being first got under way and the lighter ones from time to time thereafter, so as not to make too sudden demands upon the capital and labor of the country, with due regard to which consideration the work may still be completed within six years.

I have been confirmed, since submitting the first part of the preceding remarks, in the opinion that it will be best to extend the canal and slack-water system, proposed for the line east of the Greenbrier River, to the Kanawha below the falls, in which case the present estimate for that part of the work should be so much more than sufficient to complete it upon the smaller scale, as probably to cover the additional cost of the cut-off tunnels, at "Big Bend" and "Stretcher's Neck," with a saving of upward of ten miles of distance. The water-supply would also be made more entirely free from doubt, even should the breadth of the locks be enlarged, as suggested by a member of the board.

* This estimate is for an open-dam improvement of the Kanawha River as proposed by Mr. Lorraine. Should an ordinary lock and dam system be adopted, about one million dollars would be added to the estimate.

That double locks will ultimately be required by the demands of the trade, there can be little question, although their cost may be omitted from present estimates, and the addition of them, upon the Greenbrier and New Rivers, can be more readily made on the smaller than the larger seale.

The commercial benefits of such a work, to the country at large, have been fully treated by my associates, and indeed appear to be too obvious for argument; but it is not less clear that an equally effective improvement of the Ohio River, must go hand in hand with it in order that its advantages may be fully realized.

Respectfully submitted.

3. Letter to the Chief of Engineers of General Q. A. Gillmore.

ENGINEER OFFICE, ARMY BUILDING,
New York, March 19, 1874.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit below my individual opinion upon some features of the James River and Kanawha Canal project, not embraced in the general report of the board appointed to report upon that subject, or not treated there with that fullness which I wish to give them.

The board has expressed its unanimous approval of the project as a whole, recognizing its commanding national importance and its entire practicability, reserving divergencies of opinion among its members upon points of detail, for separate individual reports.

The project contemplates a water-line connecting the Ohio and James Rivers, assumed to be capable of carrying 9,720,000 tons annually both ways, of which 7,560,000 tons would comprise the through and way freight going east.

I am convinced, from the examination which I have been able to give the subject, that the line will attract a much larger amount of tonnage than it can possibly carry, even if its capacity should prove to be as great as that claimed for it. I therefore respectfully invite attention to the following remarks upon its commercial importance and the deductions drawn therefrom.

The commercial importance of this line may be considered, first, with respect to the development and distribution of the mineral wealth of the States of Virginia and West Virginia; and, secondly, in respect to its fitness for supplying the growing demand for cheap transportation eastward, for the surplus products of the West.

1. The distribution of the minerals of Virginia and West Virginia:

The manufacture of iron and salt, and the mining of iron ore and coal, are the principal and most important local interests capable of very large development and growth in this region. They only await the means of prompt and economical conveyance and delivery of their productions to market, in a fixed time and at a fixed price, in order to spring at once into industries of vast dimensions and influence. To secure this result a direct and unbroken line of water-transportation is conceded by all to be essential.

At the present time, one single-track railroad, the Chesapeake and Ohio, traverses this region, having its termini, one on the tide-water at Richmond, and the other on the Ohio River about forty miles below the mouth of the Kanawha, while the James River and Kanawha Canal, running westward from Richmond up the valley of James River, stops at the eastern base of the Alleghany Mountains, and is therefore entirely destitute of any commercial significance whatever.

The coal and salt, all west of the Alleghanies, find for about seven months of the year, on the shallow waters of the Kanawha and Ohio Rivers, an inadequate, uncertain, and frequently interrupted means of reaching the only available markets in the West; while, with the exception of the cannel coal, which constitutes but a small fraction of the whole, and is the only variety possessing sufficient value to bear long railroad freights, they are entirely excluded from the eastern markets. The vast mineral wealth of the Kanawha Valley therefore, lies practically idle and useless.

The inadequate facilities for conveying it west, repel capital, while the Atlantic States are not only deprived of all direct participation in its use, but lose the benefits of the competitive prices which its presence among them in certain and regular supplies would create.

The assumption is not without many intelligent advocates, that local interests alone are of sufficient magnitude to render this water-line remunerative, and therefore to justify its construction; that with cheap transportation from the Lower Kanawha to tide-water once established, this dormant mineral wealth, the iron-ores of Virginia and the coal-beds and salt-springs of the Kanawha Valley, to say nothing of the vast forests of valuable timber, and the products of agriculture, would be of such intrinsic worth as to attract and fix the capital necessary for its conversion into articles of trade and commerce; and that it exists in sufficient abundance, not only to require the constant employment of all, or nearly all, of the carrying capacity of the proposed canal, but also to exert a powerful influence proportionate to its magnitude upon ruling prices in the great distributing-markets of the country.

In this aspect the question of constructing this line assumes a national importance, independent of its functions as a conveyor of western productions to the tide-waters of the Atlantic, for domestic and foreign consumption.

In his testimony before the "Senate Transportation Committee," concerning the local trade which the line would command, Prof. David T. Ansted, of England, a mining engineer and geologist of extensive research and experience, makes the following statement, as the result of personal knowledge and investigation:

"With regard to the quantity of minerals which would have to be carried over such lines of water-communication, I can safely say, from my knowledge of the subject in various ways, that it would be, alone, sufficient to justify the construction of the canal, at the cost at which it has been placed," ($50,000,000.)

A brief description of the locality and extent of these mineral deposits will not be out of place in this connection. For more detailed information, reference may be made to various geological reports.

THE IRON-ORES OF VIRGINIA.

Professor Ansted's opinions of these iron-fields, based upon personal examination, condensed from his testimony before the "Senate Transportation Committee," are as follows:

I find upon the line of this proposed communication one of the most remarkable iron-fields that exists upon any part of the world as at present known. It contains every variety of the most valuable ores, and these ores are distributed in such a manner as to be more accessible than, I think, in any other district. These ores extend over a wide range of country, ranging from east to west, intersected nearly at right angles by the railroad, [and also by the line of the proposed canal.] They include the most valuable of all the known iron-ores—magnetic oxide. They include a very large quantity of the red hematite, a very large quantity of the peculiar ore known here as the fossil-ore, which is exceedingly valuable for iron-making; a very large quantity of brown hematite, and I believe other ores, which I have not, however, seen in very great abundance. But these are quite sufficient to justify what I have said with regard to the value of the district for iron production. These iron-ores exist in a belt beginning, I believe, about the position of Charlottesville, or perhaps a little east of that on the line, and they terminate, so far as I know, a little on the western side of Staunton, certain of the groups being found on the eastern side of the Blue Ridge, and others between the Blue Ridge and the Alleghanies. [This belt is about seventy miles wide along the line of the proposed canal.] With regard to mining of the iron-ores, that can be done at a cost below the price of mining similar ores in any part of the world which I have ever visited. [Professor Ansted had previously stated that he "had been accustomed to visit different coal-fields and iron-fields, especially in all parts of Europe, and in some parts of Asia and America, and that he had been occupied in practicing engineering as connected with geology for the last twenty-eight years."] The ridges of ore stand up out of the ground, they have in fact kept up the hills while the country around has been removed, and all that has to be done is to run a tunnel into the hill-side, tap the lode as it comes down, and remove it from below, and bring it down. The quantity of ore which exists in this way, which I have seen, is very large indeed, and the quantity that exists in different parts of the country, which I have not seen, I have every reason to believe is enormously large. The mining for ore in that district could be done at the very smallest possible cost. It has the greatest advantages of position.

In answer to the question, "How would the cost in this region compare with the cost of the manufacturing of iron abroad?" Professor Ansted replied that "the cost of the manufacturing of the best qualities of iron which ought to be made from ores of such very high values would not be much more than one-half, at the present prices of labor here. The actual cost of making Bessemer steel, for instance, would be considered below half the cost in any part of England at the present time."

These emphatic views of a scientist eminent in his profession, and of long and varied experience as an expert, have never been questioned. On the contrary, they have been fully concurred in, without dissent, by all intelligent investigators into the mineral resources of the region under consideration. There is no room for doubt that the line of the proposed canal between the eastern base of the Blue Ridge and the summit of the Alleghanies passes in close proximity to vast and numerous beds of iron-ore, unsurpassed in richness and in the facilities with which it can be mined and delivered to boats.

THE COAL-FIELDS OF WEST VIRGINIA.

The coal-fields of West Virginia, occupying the region traversed by the New, the Kanawha, the Guyandotte, and the Big Sandy Rivers, and their numerous tributaries, for many miles on either side of the main streams, are among the most remarkable in the world; certainly, much the most remarkable in America. It is here, according to the concurrent testimony of experts in geology, that the veins of bituminous coal, found upon the entire western slope of the Appalachian chain of mountains, exhibit their maximum aggregate thickness. Geologists also claim that these coal-fields are superior to those of Great Britain or Pennsylvania, and are indeed the finest in the world. That the cannel coal of this region is fully equal to the best English or Nova Scotia cannel, and is most valuable for making gas; that the ordinary bituminous coal is in every respect as good as that mined in Pennsylvania; and that the Kanawha splint coal possesses every requisite excellence for smelting iron-ore, without coking. Experience in the use of these several varieties of coal, for manufacturing and domestic purposes, has fully confirmed these views. The Kanawha and New River coal-seams are both thicker and more numerous than those on the Monongahela, those of the splint and the bituminous varying from 4 feet to 11 feet in thickness, and those of the cannel from 2½ to 5 or even 5½ feet in thickness.

Mr. Thomas S. Ridgway, formerly of the Geological Survey of Virginia, made, in 1872, a geological report to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, which passes through the coal region side by side with the proposed water-line. After describing the seams of coal which crop out on the banks of the New and the Kanawha Rivers, and several tributaries of the latter, some of which are now being worked, the report upon the coal-beds closes as follows:

The lower coal-measures, which I have described in detail, are comprised in twenty-four seams, eleven of which, containing an aggregate thickness of 51 feet, are workable. The pick and shovel may disclose new beds in addition. Any attempt to estimate, by calculation, the amount of coal contained within a given number of miles of your road, would be futile. Without deeming it necessary to resort a trigonometrical survey of even a small portion of the field, it is quite obvious that there are above the water-level between Big Sewell Mountain and Charleston, within five miles on either side of the line of your road, thousands of millions of tons. The same seams could of course be reached by pits of moderate depth between Charleston and Huntington, and the amount of coal available from West Virginia is incalculably large; sufficient, allowing for a normal ratio of increase in consumption, to supply the western market for a thousand years to come.

The impracticability of sending the coal by rail to tide-water to supply the eastern markets is here recognized.

The tract of country specially referred to by Mr. Ridgway, "between Big Sewell Mountain and Charleston," about fifty miles long and ten wide, does not comprise one-half the area of the best coal-lands. It is traversed midway throughout its entire length by the proposed water-line, by means of either canal, slack-water, or sluice navigation of the New and the Kanawha Rivers. The several workable seams of coal are horizontal, or nearly so, and are separated from each other by various kinds of rock. The coal crops out, not only upon both banks of the New and Kanawha Rivers, but also up Gauley River, Coal River, Paint Creek, Cabin Creek, Armstrong Creek, and other tributaries; thus affording extraordinary natural advantages for mining and delivery to the main line. The aggregate thickness of these parallel workable seams, that is, seams located above the level of high river, varies in different localities from 30 feet to 70 feet, and the estimate that "there are thousands of millions of tons" within a distance of five miles on either side of the proposed line between Charleston and Big Sewell Mountain, is certainly no exaggeration. Indeed, assuming that all the available coal-seams convenient to the route lie within this narrow strip, which we know is not the case, and that the coal covers but one-half of this area, the other half having been swept away during the process of forming valleys, cañons, and mountain gorges, and assuming, furthermore, that the aggregate thickness of the seams is only 27 feet, or 2 feet less than the lowest ascertained thickness, the workable beds would still contain about 7,000,000 tons of coals within five miles of the water-line, an amount sufficient to tax to its utmost limit the entire carrying capacity of the enlarged canal, estimated at 9,720,000 tons per year, to the exclusion of all other freight for a period of seven hundred years. But this estimate does not really include a fourth part of the coal known to exist above the water-level in workable seams within convenient reach of the proposed line. For it has been fully ascertained by the investigation of geologists and by numerous openings, that the cannel-producing region of West Virginia in which the seams attain their greatest aggregate thickness and the coals their best quality, actually covers an area of over one thousand three hundred square miles, in a belt about sixty miles long, lying northeast and southwest, and twenty-two miles wide at right angles to this line. It is estimated by geologists and surveyors that upon about one fourth of this area, or three hundred and twenty-five square miles, much of the coal is wanting in the valleys and gorges, and that it has an aggregate average thickness of 50 feet over the other nine hundred and seventy-five square miles. Professor Anstred places the thickness as high as 60 to 70 feet above the water-level. But, assuming the thickness at only 45 feet, this region would furnish 43,000,000,000 tons of coal, equal to 43,000,000 tons per year for one thousand years, all above the water-line, and all easily reached by short lines of narrow-gauge roads and slack-water navigation up the numerous valleys and tributaries which pierce this section in all directions. The foregoing estimate is not conjectural. It includes only such coals as are in convenient proximity to the proposed water-line which will traverse this region east and west along the New and Kanawha Rivers, dividing it into two nearly equal parts, and cutting the coal-seams to their very base. The total coal production of the world for the year 1872 amounted in round numbers to 227,768,000 tons. Of this amount there were produced by Great Britain 120,000,000 tons, and by the United States 44,000,000 tons.

The United States doubled her production in seven years, (from 1865 to 1872,) while Great Britain in eight years (from 1864 to 1872) did not increase her coal production quite 85 per cent.

At the same rate of increase the amount of coal that will be mined in the United States by the time the proposed water-line will be completed, if begun during the present year, or, say, by the year 1880, will be 100,000,000 tons.

What portion of this vast prospective supply would be at once drawn from the Kanawha coal-fields, if a method of cheap transportation were provided for it, whether one-tenth, one-eighth, one-fifth, or more, I will not undertake to estimate. I should say, however, that one-tenth, or 10,000,000 per year, would be a low estimate. These coals will be able to replace, to a great extent, those sent across the Atlantic from England, for while the Kanawha coals can be delivered to ocean-vessels at Richmond for $3 to $3.15 per ton, after paying for mining, delivery to barge, and one-half cent per ton per mile on the water-line, the English coals cannot cross the ocean at all without paying $3.75 to $4 per ton for ocean-transportation alone.

With regard to the quantity of coal that can be mined annually and delivered to boats on the water-line, all testimony concurs in representing it to be very large, on account of the peculiar topography of the country—a continued succession of ridges and valleys—which affords a multitude of outcrops.

There is, of course, an economic limit to this industry, as to all others, but in my judgment that limit could not be reached by the entire carrying capacity of the proposed line for a thousand years, even if devoted exclusively to the coal business. Professor Anstred says:

There are, I think, about twenty distinctly workable seams of coal in the middle of the district, or what I regard as the middle of the whole series of coal-bearing beds. These middle beds are workable, all of them, above the water-line. They lie almost horizontally, and are capable of being worked at a cheaper rate than any coals which exist on a larger scale in any part of Europe. There is no reason whatever why the coal throughout the whole of this district should not be obtained at a cheaper rate than it is now being got in any of the mines in Europe, and I believe I may say in any of the mines of America. There is practically no difficulty whatever—no power required to lift anything. The quantity that could be mined is very large indeed. The main valley of the Kanawha is a deep cut in the great deposit of the carboniferous beds, and this great cut is intersected at intervals by cross-cuts, which afterward, almost without exception, become more or less parallel with the main line of the valley. In that way the coal is cut out into blocks of convenient size, accessible generally from two or three sides, and that facilitates the getting to a very unusual extent. In a rough way, I can say that the average quantity of coal which would be obtained on every acre of these coal-lands would be about fifty thousand tons. Forty thousand tons per acre would not be at all an unreasonable estimate. The quantity of coal that will be required in America within a comparatively short time must amount, of course, to millions of tons per annum. I believe at present the quantity is somewhere about twenty millions.* In England we are now mining about a hundred and twenty millions of tons per annum. There can be no doubt whatever that the general coal-fields west of the Alleghenies will have to supply all the manufacturing parts of America before long.

Professor Anstred further states that—

The railways cannot certainly carry the quantity of coal that is required, and the quantity of iron that will be required to communicate between the East and West. †

It will be absolutely necessary that there should be other means of conveyance, and of all the means of conveyance for raw materials, or minerals, such as coal and iron ore, nothing can equal water.

The canal communication from east to west seems to be an absolute necessity for this district. I cannot suppose that the coal-field can be properly developed, or that the iron field can be properly open and worked, without such water-communication being completed.

Professor Anstred also expressed the opinion—

That the price of the best West Virginia coals, particularly the splint coals if they could be sent by water to a shipping-place on the Atlantic, would beyond all doubt enable the coal dealer to meet all foreign competitors in the coaling stations of Saint Thomas, Jamaica, and other islands, and secure a permanent demand there, and that these coals would certainly be preferred in the various South American ports.

Mr. Wm. H. Edwards, president of the Kanawha and Ohio Coal Company at Coalburgh, testified before the Senate Committee on transportation that "with the opening of the proposed water-line, mining would commence on all our creeks and all along the river, and we would be equal to filling any demands that might arise on the seaboard."

The same gentleman, in reply to certain inquiries, says, under date of March 11, 1874:

Our company mined in 1873 88,000 tons of coal. If the water-line were completed, and we could send the coal away regularly and promptly, we could easily mine 150,000 tons per year, and hundreds of such companies could mine and deliver 150,000 tons of coal each, if there was a market and sufficient transportation; every lot of 500 acres could sustain one such company whenever the splint coal is found and accessible.‡

Dr. John P. Hale, a gentleman long resident at Charleston, on the Kanawha River, and acknowledged to be thoroughly familiar with the topography of the coal region, and the extent and character of the different varieties of coal, estimates the area of available coal-lands, after deducting one-third for loss by the erosion of streams, at one thousand six hundred and sixty-six square miles, in the valleys of New and Kanawha Rivers and their tributaries. He gives (what he terms to be) a moderate estimate of 30,625 tons of coal per acre, after allowing one-fourth for waste in mining, based upon an average aggregate thickness of 25 feet. This is really the minimum and not the average thickness.

* The census of 1870 gives the production for year ending June 30, 1870, at 32,863,690 tons. More recent coal statistics give the production for the year 1872 at 44,156,263 tons.

† Virginia and West Virginia

‡ Splint coal is found everywhere in connection with other coals in West Virginia.

Dr. Hale, in reply to an inquiry as to the quantity that could be mined annually, writes as follows, under date of March 2, 1874:

Take the distance you mention—say fifty miles along the main river—it would be possible to have an average of one coal operation for every mile in extent on both sides. This would give one hundred mines. If they worked full time, and produced an average of 12,000 bushels, or 480 tons each, per day, making for the whole number of mines 48,000 tons per day, this would give 240 barge-loads of 200 tons each, per day, equal to 10 boats per hour, or 1 boat every six minutes day and night. This is for the main river only, but by going only a moderate distance up the side streams which penetrate the coal-fields in every direction, the above quantity could readily be multiplied by six, giving one boat of 300 tons every minute day and night. Of course I am dealing with possibilities, but you will readily see that the practical limit of these operations is not in the extent of accessible coal in this region, nor in the amount that can easily be mined, but will be in the capacity of the canal to transport it, and in the market for the coal. To any one familiar with the rapid and vast increase in the consumption of coal, the world over, the danger will not appear great of overstocking the markets, when we get cheap access to them through this canal. I think we have coal enough for the canal, and I hope Congress will give us canal enough for the coal.

With regard to the quantity of coal that can be mined annually from horizontal seams, and brought out through a single tunnel, it may be remarked that a company controlled by English capital has recently begun operations in Gauley Mountain, about three miles from the Hawk's Nest Station of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, in the expectation of mining 300,000 tons of coal annually. They have tunneled into the side of the mountain through their lowest coal-seam, which is 11 feet thick, and will communicate from this tunnel with the upper seams through a vertical shaft, through which all the coal from the higher levels will be delivered to coal-cars in the main tunnel, and thence by a double-track narrow-gauge road, to the Hawk's Nest Station. With the water-line completed, and prompt and certain transportation thus secured, 100,000 tons per year would be a very moderate production for one company, and there is ample room for more than two hundred such companies to carry on mining operations, without occupying one-fourth the accessible outcrops, or going far from the main line, producing upward of 20,000,000 tons of coal annually. By going back eight or ten miles from the principal stream, this yearly production could be more than doubled, without touching any but the most easily accessible seams, or encountering any serious difficulties.

The manufacture of iron is also destined to become a business of very large dimensions along the proposed line, and large capital is now awaiting investment in this interest. It is in contemplation to establish furnaces not only at the ores, but at the coals, these minerals being separated from each other by an interval of one hundred miles. A reciprocity of full, and therefore cheap freights will thus be established, the ore moving to the coal, and the coal by return cargoes to the ore, while the manufactured iron, either as pig or rolled iron, will move to eastern or to western markets as may suit the interests of the manufacturers. A heavy business in way-freights may therefore be anticipated.

OTHER SOURCES OF LOCAL WEALTH.

I have thus briefly and imperfectly noticed the two principal minerals awaiting development in immediate proximity to the proposed water-line.

There are, however, besides the iron and coal, other valuable interests now lying practically dormant in the same region, and only requiring cheap means of transportation to become at once objects of great commercial importance. Among these are building-stone, lime, hydraulic cement, roofing-slate, salt, and vast virgin forests of valuable timber.

The manufacture of salt, even under existing disadvantages, has already become an important industry in the Kanawha Valley. At the salines above Charleston, and in Mason County on the Lower Kanawha, where the salt brine is obtained from artesian wells, the annual production has at times reached as high as 7,500,000 bushels. It is doubtless capable of large increase. This salt is considered to be fully equal to that from Turk's Island.

Granite of excellent quality, and unsurpassed in strength, texture, and beauty by any which the New England States afford, is found in vast ledges on the banks of the James River near Richmond. With water-transportation, this granite would find a ready and desirable market in the West, in the section of country bordering the Ohio, Mississippi, and Missouri Rivers, which is destitute of building-stone of this quality and description.

The forests in the valleys of the Greenbrier, New, and Kanawha Rivers and their tributaries, are very heavily timbered with black-walnut, white oak, poplar, (the northern white-wood not bass-wood,) beech, sycamore, and sugar-maple.

It will be seen from the foregoing remarks that the proposed water-line may be expected to derive a large portion of its business from the States of Virginia and West Virginia.

This local business being upon the spot will of course take precedence of through freights, and hence its consideration must necessarily enter prominently into all questions concerning the dimensions and capacity of a water-line that is intended to provide, and should provide for many years to come, without enlargement, an adequate outlet for those surplus productions of the West which, in consequence of their great comparative bulk, are unable to sustain long portage by rail.

It is in this connection only that the foregoing discussion is considered at all pertinent.

2. The fitness of this water-line as an outlet for western produce.

It will appear by reference to a good map of the United States, and to tables of distances and charges upon the various existing and projecting through freight-lines running east and west, that the section of country which would naturally select this Virginia water-line to the eastern markets in preference to all others, because the cheapest of all, comprises the region tributary to the Ohio, the Mississippi, and the Missouri Rivers, from Wheeling to Cairo, from Cairo to Saint Paul, and on the Missouri, from its mouth to its headwaters, comprising the largest portion of the aggregate area of the several States bordering those streams on either side.

The ten States in the region referred to, viz, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Kansas, and Nebraska, contained in 1870 more than one-third of the entire population of the United States.

According to the last census report their aggregate crop in round numbers, for the year ending June 30, 1870, amounted, in cereals and other productions of the soil, to 32,400,000 tons.

	Tons.
For the year 1871 these productions had increased to over..	38,381,000
Neat cattle, swine and sheep, (1871)*	3,500,000

*Address of the Hon. W. J. McAlpine to the New York Chamber of Commerce, May 8, 1873, page 26.

Manufactures are entirely excluded from this statement. What por tion of this total tonnage is an actual surplus, and can be spared for market, it is impossible to determine with great precision. The usual estimates of statisticians fix it at three-fifths in a rich agricultural district, but assuming it to be only one-half, and omitting the hay, and we have for export from these ten States, excluding manufacture altogether, a total for 1871 of 15,300,000 tons. If we suppose that the rate of increase since 1871 has been the same as that for the year previous, the surplus agricultural productions of these ten States for the year 1874, suitable for long portage by water, will exceed 20,000,000. In 1870 the wheat crop alone in these ten States amounted to 155,469,000 bushels; and the corn crop for the same year, to 475,000,000 bushels. Allowing three-fifths of the former, and two-fifths of the latter, as a surplus for export, at a benefit to the producer of only 28 cents per bushel on wheat and 10 cents per bushel on corn, and the same to the consumer, and the aggregate benefit to the country at large, arising from a ready market for these two crops alone for a single year amounts to more than $90,200,000. The normal rate of yearly increase in the production of these two cereals, would lead to much greater results at the present time.

It would not seem immoderate to estimate the annual tonnage that will seek this line within a very few years after its completion at from six to eight millions from the two Virginias, and an equal amount from the West, or say 12,000,000 to 16,000,000 tons from both sources.

3. The projected central water-line is described in the general report.

4. The canal is 70 feet wide at the water-level, and 7 feet deep, with interior slopes of 1 upon 2, giving a bottom width 42 feet. The locks are to be 120 feet long between gates, and 20 feet wide, with 7 feet depth of water on the meter-sill.

The actual capacity of a canal of these dimensions is estimated in Mr. W. R. Hutton's report to Major Craighill as follows:

On the Erie Canal 198 boats have actually passed through a single lock in one day; and we may therefore safely assume a capacity for 180 boats. The tonnage of the boats will be about 280 tons, but as the freight going West will not be more than one-fourth of that from the West, we will average them at 180 tons, which will show a trade of 7,920,000 tons per annum, or for a season of three hundred days.

From this it would follow that all the eastern-bound freight would be carried by a daily average of 90 boats of 280 tons each, or one boat in every 8 minutes, night and day, equal to 7,560,000 tons in three hundred days, allowing for suspension of work on Sundays and fifteen days' stoppage by ice.

This estimate of Mr. Hutton's appears to be very large, larger, indeed, than the average results obtained on the Erie Canal would seem to justify.

I believe that an average of one boat every 10 minutes would represent a much nearer approximation to the practical capacity of the canal, if indeed this estimate be not considerably in excess. Upon the summit-level of the Erie Canal, which is double-locked, a daily average of 101 and a maximum of 200 boats pass the locks during the busy season. The tonnage both ways on the Erie Canal in 1872 was* 3,562,560 tons. The tonnage both ways on Erie Canal in 1871 was 3,580,922 tons. Through tonnage bound east, (annually,) 1871–'72, 2,637,212 tons.

These quantities are carried during a period of seven months each year. In 1871 the total through and way freights were carried an average distance of two hundred and nineteen miles for each ton.

It would seem, therefore, that a total carriage both ways of 7,530,000 tons would more than represent the greatest yearly capacity of the proposed line. This would require the boats to pass every 10 minutes, night and day, for a season of three hundred days, and evidently allows very little for contingent accidents and delays. It would provide for 6,048,000 tons of eastern-bound through and way freight. My own judgment would place the annual carriage of the line both ways considerably lower, but as I am convinced that a water-line of greater tonnage than the one recommended will be needed at a very early day, on the ground that otherwise it will fall very far short of satisfying the increasing demands that will be made upon it from the moment of its completion, it is my wish not to understate the possible capacity of the route as proposed.

It will be assumed, therefore, that the line, under proper administration, may be made to carry annually 6,048,000 tons of eastern-bound way and through freight. In my judgment, and for reasons briefly set forth in the foregoing pages, the line will be required to convey within five years after its completion more than 8,000,000 tons of coal, iron-ore, and iron in Virginia and West Virginia alone, while the amount of western produce that will seek it annually will reach as high as 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons more, and it will fail to carry any portion of this western tonnage, except at the expense and to the detriment of local trade.

It will be necessary, therefore, to provide for a very large addition to the tonnage of the route, either by enlarging its dimensions, duplicating the locks, or by each of these modes in succession. So far as possible, arrangements for one or the other of these enlargements should be anticipated. As to their relative advantages and cost, opinions probably differ within wide limits even among experts in canal administration, and the question should, therefore, be the subject of mature preliminary study.

The width of the locks adopted in the project (20 feet) can be increased 3 or 4 feet at a cost not exceeding $1,000 per lock. Mr. Hutton's estimate is $700 per lock. For the entire line, therefore, from Richmond to the beginning of the slack-water on the Greenbrier, comprising 157 locks, this cost would not exceed $150,000, or less than one-third of 1 per cent. on the entire cost of the work. This single change in the project would increase the tonnage of the line nearly one-fourth, as the boats could then carry 345 tons of cargo.

A subsequent enlargement could be readily and cheaply made by raising the sides of the locks and the canal one foot or more, and still another by lengthening the locks.

Adding one foot to the depth would raise the tonnage of the boats to 400 tons, and a further increase of 24 feet in the length of the lock-chambers would restore the original and proper proportion between the length and breadth, and with 8 feet of water in the canal the boats would carry about 500 tons on 7 feet draught. Allowing 10 minutes for lockage, the yearly tonnage of the canal would then be 10,700,000 tons of eastern-bound freight. A tonnage capacity somewhat greater that this could be given to the canal, as recommended in the project, by doubling its locks, or by making them long enough to take two boats at once. The question of water-supply for the summit-level must necessarily be considered in connection with any proposed increase in the dimensions of the locks.

The locks supplied from this level are assumed to have a maximum lift of 10 feet, and the number of boats passing both ways 240 or 360 prisms of lift per diem, an excess of 96 boats per day over the number taken above as the basis of yearly trade.

The project before the board contemplates supplying the summit-level, during the dry season, exclusively from a reservoir on Anthony's Creek, a tributary of the Greenbrier, having a discharge certainly less than one-fourth, probably less than one-sixth, that of the main stream. It would be entirely safe to assume the discharge of the Greenbrier at three times that of Anthony's Creek.* The Greenbrier flows through a mountain gorge peculiarly favorable to the construction of dams for a distance of more than sixty miles, all above the level of the summit to be supplied. If necessary, therefore, the supply afforded by the Anthony's Creek reservoir may be increased twofold.

As an alternative the Greenbrier may be excluded, and an additional supply obtained equal to one-third of that from Anthony's Creek, by appropriating the waters of Little Creek, Howard's Creek, and Tuckahoe Creek. Assuming this to be the case, and we have the following results, calculated with locks 24 feet wide, 144 feet long, and 10 feet lift, fed from the summit-level:

The three creeks above named will supply daily	190,000	"
Total daily supply of water from these sources	761,780	"
Quantity required daily for the use of 240 passing boats, with locks 24 feet by 144 feet, and 10 feet lift, including leakage, filtration, and evaporation	550,000	"
Daily surplus	211,780	"

The adequacy of the water-supply for the summit-level will not be questioned by any engineer who gives the subject a few moments' intelligent thought.

But as one-half the water drawn from the Greenbrier and its tributaries for the summit-level will be lost to the proposed slack-water navigation west of the summit, the question arises whether with these enlarged locks there will be water enough left for the service of the proposed barge-locks on the Greenbrier, above its confluence with New River, or say above Second Creek? Upon this point I am prepared to say that I see no controlling necessity for making the locks on either the Greenbrier or New River larger than those on the canal; and, if made of the same size, the water expended in lockage at the west end of the summit-level will amply suffice to carry boats through the Greenbrier, by drawing upon the surplus to supply any deficiency due to natural causes.

The large barges from the West can very well break freight and transfer their cargoes to canal-boats on the Kanawha River, below the Great Falls. I would prefer barge navigation on the New and Greenbrier Rivers, if readily attainable; but I do not consider the differences involved in this question of much importance.

Substituting canal for slack-water navigation on this portion of the line would add from 7 to 8 cents per ton to the cost of transportation.

Below the confluence of Greenbrier and New Rivers it is presumed there is no question of the adequacy of the water-supply for lock and dam navigation even for large barges, and I would prefer this method of improvement to that of open sluices for the entire distance from Kanawha Falls to the Ohio River.

But the improvement of the Kanawha should be considered in connection with that of the Ohio below Point Pleasant.

The only difficulties of construction at all serious in character will probably be encountered in founding the dams for slack-water navigation upon bowlders and coarse gravel and pebbles, where no bed-rock has been discovered.

In Mr. Hutton's judgment, formed after a careful examination of the localities, these bowlder sites for dams can generally be avoided, and it may be safely assumed that where such avoidance is impossible, a canal can be subsituted for slack-water.

COST OF THE WORK.

As to the probable cost of the work from Richmond to the mouth of the Kanawha River, my views are expressed in a resolution of the board, passed with one dissenting voice, that $60,000,000 would build it, leaving a large margin for contingent expenses, while its cost would probably not exceed $55,000,000, and possibly not $50,000,000.

COST OF MAINTENANCE.

The annual cost of maintenance and administration should not exceed $750,000, but may possibly reach $1,000,000.

PROBABLE TIME FOR ITS COMPLETION.

The time required to complete the work and open it to trade will de pend upon the time occupied in constructing the long tunnel. I judge that five and a half to six years will be ample.

SUMMARY.

1. The construction and maintenance along the proposed route of a water-line of even larger dimensions than the one proposed is entirely practicable, and the necessity for it is so imperative, and its importance to the country at large so great, that the General Government may well assume the work, even at a cost greatly in excess of the estimates.

2. The line as proposed, when working to its full capacity, will carry as claimed in the project, 7,560,000 of eastern-bound through and way freight annually. I place its tonnage lower by more than 1,000,000 tons.

3. The line will be required within a short time after it is opened to convey eastward more than 12,000,000 tons annually.

Its construction, therefore, should be begun with a view to increasing its capacity at an early day, either by duplicating its canal-locks, or by enlarging the single line, as shall be deemed of most advantage.

4. The cost of the work, if the locks be made 4 feet wider than the project contemplates, should not greatly exceed $50,000,000, but may reach $60,000,000, and the annual cost of its maintenance will be within $1,000,000.

By widening the locks 4 feet, the tonnage of the canal would be increased nearly one-fourth.

5. The time for completing the work should not exceed five and a half to six years.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

4 .Letter to the Chief of Engineers of Col. W. P. Craighill.

UNITED STATES ENGINEER'S OFFICE,
New York, March 19, 1874.

GENERAL: The board of engineers which, under your instructions of January 28, 1874, convened in Richmond, Va., February 5, and has since been engaged in examining the route of the proposed James River and Kanawha "water-line," and the maps and documents relating to the subject, yesterday agreed upon a report indicating its opinions upon points as to which there was entire unanimity, with the understanding that separate papers should be prepared by each member, for the purpose of a more detailed setting forth of the special views of each as to parts or the whole of the project.

While the general opinions expressed in my printed reports of January 27, 1871, and April 11, 1873, are still entertained, further reflection and conference with my able and experienced colleagues on this board have induced me to modify to a limited extent my views as to some of the details. I feel bound (and the duty is certainly a pleasing one) to make a matter of official record my testimony to the courteous consideration manifested toward me by my associates.

Your instructions direct the board to take into consideration and report upon all questions of practicability, plan, and probable cost for a water-communication to the Ohio by the way of the James and Kanawha Rivers, together with the probable time required for its completion and the cost of maintenance when built. These instructions also contain the following paragraph: "It is also desirable to have the views of the board on the benefits to commerce to be derived from the construction of such a work."

The letter of Hon. H. G. Davis, of the Senate of the United States, to the Secretary of War, dated November 12, 1873, in which he asks for the organization of a board of engineers to consider and report on the "water-line," contains a paragraph quoted below. It may properly be mentioned here that Mr. Davis writes in his capacity of member of the Special Committee (of the Senate) on Transportation Routes to the Sea-Board. He says:

You are aware of the fact that several surveys and official reports have already been made by the State of Virginia and the General Government in regard to this work, all of which seem to indicate that the project is perfectly practicable. Some of the friends of the enterprise, however, desire to present such additional evidence in regard to the cost of the proposed tunnel and of the entire canal, the water-supply of summit-level, the probable time required to complete the tunnel and the entire canal, and other questions involving its practicability as will place all these questions beyond doubt in the public mind. * * * * * It is for these reasons I have made the foregoing request as to the appointment of a board of survey, who shall carefully examine and pass upon all the computations and deductions of the engineers who have located the canal and estimated its probable cost, the time required for its construction, and other questions of a practical nature.

The question of "practicability" is of little importance until the fundamental one be settled of "the benefits to commerce to be derived from the construction of such a work." When the commercial working-capacity of the line is determined by the engineers, its commercial value seems rather a question for the political economist. As to the commercial value, so much has been written that it might, perhaps, with propriety pass it by entirely. I desire, however, to invite special attention to the emphatic and unanimous opinion of the board, expressed in the following resolutions:

Resolved, That, while the board is of the opinion that for ordinary passenger-travel and many kinds of freight, the railroad will be properly preferred as the means of transportation, there can be no reasonable questioning of the fact that, when the circumstances of the case are such that comparative slowness of movement is permissible, and the quantities to be moved large, the cheapness of transportation by water becomes obvious to every one who fairly weighs the statistics on the subject. In this view very great benefits to commerce would be derived from the construction of a water-communication from east to west, between the James and Ohio Rivers.

2. Whereas the James River and Kanawha route being among the few south of the Erie canal route over which it appears to be practicable to establish a water-navigation connecting by the Ohio River the immense internal navigation of the great Mississippi Valley with the seaports of the Atlantic; and whereas it will probably furnish the most direct connection; and whereas the route has very great local advantages of climate, owing to which it will be comparatively little obstructed by ice, and of geological character, connecting the richest coal-fields of the world (now lying almost undeveloped for want of adequate means of removal) with the markets of the world, and at the same time with the almost equally rich region of iron and other ores in the Virginia Valley.

Therefore, in the opinion of this board, this route presents extraordinary claims as the measure of relief to the population of the Western States, in furnishing for their bulky products cheap transportation to a market, and for fostering the commerce of the United States by developing immense mineral resources now neglected.

As to the commercial value of the work, the light thrown by the following statistics from the history of the Erie Canal is valuable:

The entire cost of constructing the Erie Canal to 1863 was $38,977,831, (nearly $39,000,000.) This sum, with interest to 1863, amounted to $52,491,915. During the same period the gross receipts from tolls were $71,783,676, (nearly $72,000,000.) After deducting expenses, ($12,518,860,) there remained a net profit of $59,264,812, not only sufficient to pay the entire cost of construction with interest, but leaving a surplus of nearly $7,000,000. Of the gross earnings it appears that but little more than one-sixth was required to meet expenses and repairs. Five-sixths were net gain. This included not only the period after the enlargement but before, when the canal was in an unfinished condition, with cost of repairs greater and receipts less. Since 1862 the net earnings have been about $20,000,000 more. From 1862 to the end of the fiscal year 1868, the amount of tolls paid to the State was $25,260,384. No other improvement, railroad or other, can make such an exhibit. The Erie Canal has not only paid for its construction, but makes itself a present to the State with about $27,000,000 of net profits. * * * For the months of October and December of 1867, the receipts from tolls were about two millions, being a little more than half the receipts for the fiscal year, and more than half the estimated receipts for the next fiscal year. These figures show that the navigation closes just when the demand for transportation is greatest, and the comparative smallness of receipts for the other five months of open navigation shows that the freight which cannot use this canal gets to market over other and much more expensive avenues of transportation.

With reference to the Erie Canal, one who knows whereof he speaks uses the following language:

The Erie Canal now conveys one-fourth of the whole of the exports of that vast interior region which I have already described, and as much of it during its six months of uninterrupted navigation as all of the trunk-railways together during the same time. Every canal-boat which comes to this city with an average cargo is more than the average of the New York Central Railroad trains. In the busy canal season, more than one hundred and fifty such boats come daily to tide-water, and the New York Central Railroad traffic never reaches thirty trains per day. Such a canal traffic would make more than twenty miles of railroad-cars. The slow, plodding canal-boat attracts no attention, while the bustle, noise, and whirl of a freight-train create a sensation in every village through which it passes.

See also the remarks of Mr. Harris, the present chief engineer of the James River Canal:

First, as to the supply of tonnage. By the statistics alluded to we find that the States bordering on the water-line produced in the year 1871 more than four times as much corn and about three times as much wheat as all the remaining States of the Union, and that the quantity of wheat, corn, rye, oats, barley, buckwheat, and potatoes amounted to the enormous sum of 1,134,726,000 bushels; averaging these articles at only 50 pounds to the bushel, we have 27,887,200 tons. These same States produced also the same year 109,094 tons of tobacco and 10,385,000 tons of hay. These sums added together make a grand aggregate of 38,381,294 tons. Suppose one-third of this is deducted for home consumption, the remainder is 25,587,530 tons, to which, if we were to add the tonnage of salted pork, beef, live stock, and that created by the forests and mines, the grand total would probably be at least 30,000,000 tons.

This same report also informs us that the increase of the population west of the Mississippi during the last decade was at the rate of 52 per cent., while that of the whole country was only 22 per cent. As the productions increase at least in the same ratio as the population in this productive country, may we not reasonably conclude that by the year 1880, or by the time the water-line can possibly be completed, this country will produce forty or fifty millions of tons for export? Can there, then, be a reasonable doubt that this line will be supplied with as much tonnage as it can carry, taking into view that it will be the cheapest and safest of all the lines of transportation for the tonnage of the country? Instead of a deficiency of tonnage, I think the result will be that this line cannot carry it all, though worked to its utmost capacity, and the people of the West will very soon demand another water-line to be made from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic Ocean, to carry off the surplus of their inexhaustible and fertile country.

Secondly, as to some of the benefits to be derived by the Western States bordering on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. The average result in favor of the Virginia water-line, as compared with seventeen different lines of transport, as shown in the table heretofore referred to, is $2.84 per ton. This is equivalent to the gain of 8¼ cents a bushel on wheat, and within a fraction of 8 cents per bushel on corn, and in the same proportion for all other articles. Let us suppose that this line, when finished, will have the influence of thus cheapening the cost of transportation for twenty-five miles on each side of the rivers, extending from the mouth of the Kanawha to Dubuque, a distance of thirteen hundred and fifty-five miles. This would embrace an area of country containing 43,360,000 acres.

By the report of the statistician of the Agricultural Bureau the States bordering on the rivers between the mouth of Kanawha and Dubuque produced in 1871 11.3 bushels of wheat and 35.7 bushels of corn per acre. It was shown by the table of cost referred to that the Virginia line would save to the people of the Western States 8¼ cents per bushel on wheat and 8 cents on corn. It is clear that 8¼ cents multiplied by 11.3 bushels would give the amount realized per acre on all the wheat-land, and $2.85.6 per acre on corn-land. Let us again suppose that one-fourth of this area of country was cultivated in wheat in 1871, and one-fourth in corn; by multiplying one-fourth of the area by 90.4 cents, and another fourth by $2.85.6; these products added together show what the farmers of this region lost by not having the water-line in 1871, and what they would now gain every year on their crops of corn and wheat only by having it constructed. The result would be as follows: 10,840,000 acres multiplied by 90.4 cents, $9,799,360; 10,840,000 acres multiplied by $2.85.6, $30,959,040. These sums added together make the sum of $40,758,400 that would be realized by the agriculturists of this portion of the country per annum without any more labor on their part, and would be, in effect, enhancing the value of their real estate by the enormous sum of $679,306,666.66, because it would take this capital, put at interest at 6 per cent., to produce that amount of pecuniary benefit derived per annum by the construction of this great work. The recent successful application of steam-navigation on the Erie Canal assures us that the day of slow-plodding horse-traction on large canals, such as this will be, has passed; and that the new era of steam-navigation has begun, and will be fully inaugurated before this great line can be finished, diminishing the time by one-half and the expense one-half, or reducing the total expense of navigation on the canal to less than one-half what it is at present. At these rates the actual cost of transporting a bushel of wheat three thousand miles would be only about 7 cents, and the total charges not more than 15 cents per bushel; and the effect upon the wheat and corn growing regions of the West would be not only to make two bushels of wheat grow where only one grew before, but to cause millions of bushels to be grown where none were grown before.

In this connection I will simply advert to a suggestion made by another member of the board. The need for a cheap means of transportation between East and West becomes specially pressing upon the producers of the Western and Northwestern States at the very season when the Erie route fails them, from climatic causes which may be said to be uncontrollable. The Ohio River is then in a favorable condition for navigation, even without further expenditure for its improvement, and if the James River water-line were completed there would be a through line at once for this urgent work of transportation. It has been also well suggested by the recorder of our board that the boats on the Erie Canal, instead of remaining idle for five months every year, could be readily transferred, and work on the James River line during the period of closure of the Erie. This transfer could be easily effected through the Delaware and Raritan Canal and Chesapeake and Delaware Canal. This means at once places the great commercial metropolis of our country, New York, in connection with the James River line. It will be found this route also compares favorably in distance with others to New York from the West.

As to the commercial capacity of the James River line, what has been hitherto written has had reference generally to a channel of the same dimensions as the existing Erie Canal, and the estimates of cost submitted in my reports contemplated such a navigation east of the Alleghany, permitting the use of boats of about 280 tons, while those of 700 tons were expected to be brought from the West as far as the summit-level, the long tunnel. That a water-communication of the capacity of the Erie Canal can be built along the James River line is believed by the board, as appears from the following resolution, unanimously agreed to:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this board, it is entirely practicable to connect the waters of the James and Ohio Rivers by a water-navigation of 7 feet depth.

Differences of opinion prevail in the board whether the slack-water navigation should be adopted for the Greenbrier and New Rivers, or whether the smaller canal should be continued down those streams. There are also differences of opinion as to the best dimensions and details for locks, &c. Before those details can be settled further surveys will be necessary.

The following resolution, agreed to by four of the five members of the board, may here be quoted:

Resolved, That while the estimates have hitherto been limited to a water-line with canal-locks of 120 by 20 and slack-water locks of 240 by 40, the board is of the opinion that the canal-locks should probably be built of 23 or 24 feet width, with a corresponding increase in the width of the slack-water locks, with a view to increase capacity for the line in future if demanded, as this additional width can be economically given. Additional depth could thereafter be readily obtained to as great an extent as the water-supply would permit, by raising the walls and banks.

The dissenting member, it is understood, has not satisfied himself fully as to the proper manner of giving increased capacity to the canal, whether by enlarged single locks or by doubling them.

My own opinion on this point is that the capacity of the canal should be as great as the water-supply and economical working will justify. Inasmuch as the expense of making a lock 24 feet wide rather than 20 feet is very small in the first construction as compared with the total cost, I recommend that they be so built. If this should be found to be a too great width, they may be narrowed easily and cheaply. If the water-supply be found greater than expected, the locks and canal may readily, and at comparatively small expense, be made deeper by raising the walls and banks. The slack-water navigation on the Kanawha, New, and Greenbrier should have locks at least double in length and width of those on the canal, so as to pass at once four canal-boats or three boats and a tow-boat, if desired. My opinion is, further, that only single locks should be first built. If the trade justify, they should be afterward doubled. The enlargement of the prism proposed in my report of January 27, 1871, is considered ample, as it will suffice for the locks of greater width now recommended, and by revetting the slopes and making them steeper the canal may be adapted to the use of steam-navigation, which should be confidently expected in the future. As a steamboat may readily be propelled at twice the speed of the horse-boat, the time of passage through the canal and its locks will be lessened one-half, and thus the capacity of the route be practically doubled.

As pertinent to this question I will here quote some interesting statements by Maj. W. McFarland, of the Corps of Engineers, who has given much special and intelligent study to the subject of the construction and use of canals. He is writing about another canal-route than that by the James River:

The extreme tonnage of the boats passing through the Erie Canal is, according to the last published reports, about 240 tons, while the average load is about 220 tons. The locks here are 110 feet long and 18 feet broad; the boats commonly 95 to 97 feet long and 17 feet 6 inches broad. I desire here to call attention to a curious and important fact. The Delaware and Raritan Canal, which forms a link of the inland line of water-communication between the cities of New York and Philadelphia, is of the following dimensions: Eighty feet wide at the water-surface; average depth, 9 feet; locks, 220 feet long, and 24 feet wide. The largest horse-boats plying upon this canal can carry 450 tons, but the average actual cargo is about 210 tons.

Mr. John S. Hillis, of the firm of W. P. Clyde & Co., of Philadelphia, formerly superintendent of the Raritan and Delaware Canal, stated to the New York commissioners on canals, as the result of his experience, that the most economical boat or barge for this canal is 110 feet long by 23 feet 3 inches beam, carrying 300 tons. Boats 140 feet long and carrying 500 tons have been tried, but, on account of extra expense of crew to meet the increased difficulty of management, were not found economical.

The auditor of the canal department of the State of New York, in his report for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1872, says: "From the experience of the season of 1872, our canals, in their present condition, are equal to all the requirements likely to be demanded of them in 1872, and have no rival on the score of cheap transportation at the present time."

We may rest satisfied, then, that the 300-ton boats, which would be able to pass through our proposed canal when completed, are the largest that can be economically handled, at least until the tonnage of this canal shall exceed that of the Erie Canal, which for the year ending with the navigating season of 1872 amounted to nearly six million and a half tons.

As to the question of practicability, the opinion of the whole board is fully expressed in a resolution already quoted in another connection, which will be repeated here:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this board, it is entirely practicable to connect the waters of the James and Ohio Rivers by a water navigation of 7 feet depth.

As to some of the important features of the route, the opinions of the board, as expressed in other resolutions, will be now given:

Resolved, That the board is of the opinion that it is entirely practicable to drive the long tunnel through the Alleghany Mountains, by which it is proposed to connect the headwaters of the James and Greenbrier Rivers. The cost of such a tunnel, 34 feet in clear width, with passing-places for boats each one-fourth mile, would be about $2,000,000 per mile. The time of completion need not be over six years.

In this opinion the board was unanimous.

Resolved, That the board is of opinion that by the use of reservoirs on Anthony's Creek and the Greenbrier River, a sufficient supply of water may be had for the tunnel summit-level and its dependencies, and that the supply of water is also sufficient for the portion of the proposed water-line east and west of the high level.

In this opinion the board was unanimous.

Resolved, That the board is of the opinion that it is entirely practicable to enlarge the existing James River Canal and slack-water navigation to Buchanan, making the locks 120 by 20 feet, and the width of the canal at the water-line 70 feet, with a depth of 7 feet; and to extend the canal and slack-water navigation of the same dimensions to the eastern portal of the long tunnel, thus admitting the use of boats of 280 tons burden.

In this opinion the board was unanimous.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of the board, the preparation of the Kanawha River for navigation from the Ohio to the Great Falls of the Kanawha by boats of 700 tons is entirely practicable.

In this opinion the board was unanimous.

Whereas there are differences of opinion among members of the board as to the practicability of lock and dam (or slack-water) navigation of the Greenbrier and New Rivers between Howard's Creek and the Great Falls of the Kanawha; and

Whereas the same differences of opinion prevail as to the extension of the barge-navigation of the Kanawha above the Great Falls:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this board, it may be expedient to adopt canal-navigation for this part of the line, with occasional exceptions where it may be desirable in consequence of peculiarly favorable reaches or the necessity of water-supply.

In this opinion the board was unanimous.

One member of the board is emphatically of the opinion that the use of the canal instead of the slack-water method is not only expedient along the portions of the line mentioned in the last resolution, but that the slack-water method is inapplicable along that portion. He will, no doubt, set forth his views on this subject with the usual force and clearness of his expressions. With great deference, I feel unable to reach the same conclusions, but do not entertain a doubt as to the practicability of extending the slack-water navigation over that portion of the line, if necessary. The question of the expediency of doing so may be regarded as still open, but my opinion is decided that, while it may be desirable to resort to some tunnels on New River, with the view of shortening distance and time of passage, as well as avoiding some probably unfavorable sites for dams, as well as interference with the railroad, the slack-water navigation of that river should be adhered to, as well as of the Greenbrier. By making the change from 700-ton boats to ordinary canal-boats take place, as suggested by one or more members, near the Great Falls of the Kanawha rather than at the western portal of the long tunnel, as proposed in my report of January 27, 1871, the cost of the water-line would be notably diminished. Further surveys are necessary, and other considerations will come in, (partly of an engineering and partly of a politico-economical character,) for the final determination of this question of method and scale of construction.

The following resolution was agreed to by four of the five members of the board:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of the board, the water-line by the James River and the Kanawha route, with 7 feet depth, may be completed in six years, at a cost of not more than $60,000,000, allowing an unusually broad margin for contingencies, which cannot be accurately measured. The cost may reasonably be expected to be within $55,000,000, and possibly will not exceed $50,000,000.

It was understood that the dissenting member objected to that part of the resolution which referred to the cost and time of completion of the work. The views of other members than myself as to probable cost will no doubt be stated in thei separate opinions.

On this subject I submit the following: To my report of January 27, 1871, is appended Mr. Turpin's estimate for the enlargement of the existing canal, which contains an item of $1,300,000 for a dock and ship-lock at Richmond, in addition to a tide-water connection for the canal proper. This item may, it would seem to me, with propriety be omitted from the estimate for the through water-line. The total of the estimate of Messrs. Hutton and Turpin for the whole route was $47,600,000, containing an item of 10 per cent. for contingencies. Deducting the amount of the estimated cost of the ship-lock, $1,300,000, the total estimate would be reduced to $46,300,000. Increasing this by an amount equal to nearly an additional 10 per cent., or, in fact, giving a margin for contingencies of nearly 20 per cent., we reach the sum of $50,000,000, stated by me as the probable cost of the line.

The plan of the tunnel submitted in my report of January 27, 1871, contemplated a cross-section of 52 feet width and 34½ feet height. I now adopt the opinion of the board that it is expedient (as a first construction at least) to use a tunnel of less width, providing passing-places at suitable intervals.

This reduction in size will reduce the cost of the tunnel, whatever scale of prices be adopted for the work.

Our colleague, Mr. B. H. Latrobe, whose great experience in tunneling entitles his opinions to the highest consideration, has revised the estimates for the tunnel, and I am willing to defer entirely to his judgment in that matter; yet I feel bound to ask attention to the circumstances which governed in fixing the scale of prices adopted in the estimate prepared by Mr. Hutton. (See his report with mine of January 27, 1871.) Besides relying upon his own excellent judgment and considerable experience, he took the advice of the engineers of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, who had driven a long tunnel in close proximity to the site of that proposed for the canal. In the opinion of the chief engineer of the Chesapeake and Ohio Road, Mr. H. D. Whitcomb, (see his testimony before Senate Special Committee on Transportation,) the prices used by Mr. Hutton were sufficient. They were more than work of a similar character had been actually done for on the railroad. But, as stated before, I waive this point altogether, in deference to Mr. Latrobe's opinion.

If the canal be substituted for the slack-water navigation as far down as the Great Falls of the Kanawha, the estimate will be still further reduced. The existence of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad and of the James River Canal, by the facilities afforded for the transportation of materials, will make the cost of the improvement much less than it would otherwise have been. The price of labor in that section of country is low, as has been fully demonstrated by the cheapness of the excellent work done upon the tunnels and other portions of the railroad.

As to the annual expense, the board agreed unanimously to the following resolution:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of the board, the cost of maintenance of the water-line (repairs and administration included) should not exceed $1,000,000 per annum.

Mr. Lorraine, for many years the chief engineer and superintendent of the James River Canal, estimated the cost of maintenance of the water-line as about $400,000 per annum. Mr. Hutton, lately chief engineer of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, estimated the cost of maintenance of the water-line at something less than $400,000. The experience of the Erie Canal is that the cost of maintenance is between one and two per cent. of the total cost. While agreeing with the board that the cost of maintenance of the water-line should not exceed $1,000,000 per annum, I feel confident it need not, under proper management, exceed $750,000.

Finally and summarily, my opinion is, that it is entirely practicable to connect the waters of the James and Ohio Rivers by a canal and slack-water navigation of 7 feet depth. The cost need not under any circumstances, it seems to me, exceed $55,000,000, probably not $50,000,000, if the work be in the hands of honest and competent engineers, free from improper influences and supplied with funds as fast as required. Under the same circumstances the work may be practicably completed in six years. The portions to the east and west of the long tunnel may be ready for use in four years, or sooner.

The line should not be regarded as a rival of the Erie Canal and Hudson River route, or of the Mississippi River route. They are necessary, and so is this as an intermediate and supplementary route. They will not be rivals, but all are now actually needed to do the pressing work of the people. As these wants increase, other similar lines will become equally necessary, and will be constructed.

While I think there is at command enough information to justify the opinions given above, I desire emphatically to recommend an early re-examination of nearly the whole route. Especially and first should this be done to determine positively the best location for the long tunnel, which will take more time for construction than any other part of the line, and there should be no delay in commencing it, if the work is to go on at all. The remaining portions of the work might be commenced two years later.

It is perhaps proper to repeat and emphasize the fact that the additional surveys required are not for the purpose of demonstrating the practicability of the work from end to end, but, by gaining more minute knowledge of the features of so long a line, to locate its details with precision, and thereby improve and cheapen its construction.

At present the estimate is an approximation with a very broad margin on the side of fullness.

With further surveys, the basis will be provided for a close estimate, which we would expect to be materially lessened from its present total.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. P. CRAIGHILL,
Maj. Engineers, Brt. Lieut. Col. U. S. A.

5. Letter to the Chief of Engineers of General G. Weitzel.

NEW YORK, March 18, 1874.

GENERAL: In addition to that which is said in the unanimous report of the board on the James River and Kanawha Canal, I desire to say that I believe that the entire project, as presented to us for report, is practicable.

The only portion of the proposed manner of communication, about which, in the mind of one of the members of the board, the question of practicability has not been settled, is the contemplated slack-water improvement of the Greenbrier, New, and Kanawha Rivers to Paint Creek Shoals.

But these rivers have been repeatedly as carefully examined and surveyed as the available time and funds would permit. The last one was made by Mr. Lorraine, in 1872, under the direction of Major Craighill, Corps of Engineers. "The object of this survey was chiefly to make a detail location of the locks and dams, and a more accurate estimate of the cost of the work, and also to ascertain to what extent the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad and the water-line would conflict with each other."

This duty was faithfully performed, and with as much detail as the funds allotted for the purpose permitted. One hundred pages of manuscript, containing details of descriptions of dams, &c., are omitted from the published report, but were before the board.

The location of the dams, in every instance, was made with the view of avoiding, as far as possible, without making too great a sacrifice of the interests of the water-line, all interference with the railroad. This result was accomplished by increasing somewhat the number of the dams, and placing some in somewhat unfavorable locations. It is further seen from this report that of the fifty-four dams required for this work between Howard's Creek and the Great Falls of the Kanawha, forty-two are located on solid rock, and that twelve are located on gravel and bowlder foundations. Not one of the numerous able engineers who have surveyed and examined this part of the work heretofore has expressed any opinion that it will be impossible to do it. It is admitted by all, that between Bowyer's Ferry and the mouth of the Gauley River, owing to the contraction of New River and the increased velocity of the stream, the work will be more difficult and expensive than at other portions of the work.

The opinion of these engineers, that this part of the route is practicable, is corroborated in the strongest language by at least one very experienced builder of locks and dams, who is thoroughly acquainted with this locality.

This, together with the personal inspection of the localities made by the board, leads me to the opinion that this part of the work is pratica-ble. It may, however, appear by additional surveys, that some portions of this particular part of the improvement can be bettered by additional canals and tunnels, and this at probably not too large an extra expense.

Major Craighill, who was in charge of the recent surveys of this work, requested the sum of $25,000 to make further examinations, as appears from his official reports.

I am of the opinion that the whole of the Kanawha River, from the great falls to its mouth, should be improved by locks and dams throughout, or on the second plan suggested by Mr. Lorraine. I believe that this will be more reliable than the method by open sluice-dams, and that this element of certainty warrants the additional expense which this plan will entail. It has been a perfect success on the Monongahela River, and would be of great value as an additional experiment to decide the proper plan to be adopted for the improvement of the Upper Ohio River.

With regard to the cost of the improvement, I desire to say that the work of revising the estimates was placed in the hands of a subcommittee, of which the eminent civil engineer who was associated with us was a member. He naturally did most of the work of this subcommittee, and made a report indorsing, in general, the sufficiency of the estimates.

In addition, the board was accompanied on its personal inspection of portions of the line by the chief engineer of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the superintendent and chief engineer of the James River and Kanawha Canal, and by a contractor on the railroad, of long experience in similar works in the locality of the proposed water-line.

All have had the experience so valuable to decide this point, and all agree that the work can be done, if properly conducted, for the prices stated in Major Craighill's official report—that is, $50,000,000 in round numbers.

I believe this to be true; yet I admit, with three other members of the board, that a change in the plans which might be decided upon, after further surveys, might increase the cost of the work to fifty-five or even sixty million dollars.

But, in my opinion, even if it should cost five millions more than the extreme figure mentioned, it should be built, on account of the great benefit it would prove to the country, as will be seen from the following:

Its capacity is stated by Mr. Hutton as follows:

On the Erie Canal, 198 boats have actually been passed through a single lock in one day; we may then safely assume a capacity for 180 boats. The tonnage of the boats which will be used will be about 280 tons; but, as the freight going West will not be more than one-fourth of that from the West, we will average them at 180 tons, which will allow a trade of 9,720,000 tons per annum, or for a season of 300 days.

A canal of this capacity can, therefore, do the work for at least three first-class railroads, but has the great advantage over the latter that it does the work so much cheaper.

The average per ton per mile carried by the Erie Canal in 1869 was one cent. The average on the New York Central and Erie roads was 2.68½ cents. This undoubtedly included through and way freights. I believe it, at the present day, a comparison somewhat unjust toward canals to say that a ton of through freight can be carried a mile by rail for one cent, and by canal for one-half cent.

Now, supposing the three railroads built, and assuming that they were only two-thirds as long (about four hundred miles) as this improvement, and supposing the difference in cost of transportation per ton per mile were only one-half cent, and the whole line were a canal, the saving in freight in one year by the water-line to the commerce of the country, if it carried less than two-thirds of its capacity, (say 6,000,000 tons,) would be as follows:

By rail, 6,000,000 tons, 400 miles, at 1 cent per ton per mile	$24,000,000
By James River and Kanawha Canal, 6,000,000 tons, 602 miles, at ½ cent per ton per mile	18,060,000 or nearly $6,000,000, or about one-tenth of the extreme estimated cost of the work.

This, to some, would probably appear astounding. But the history of the Erie Canal shows the value of such improvements. The cost of this canal up to 1863, with enlargement, was $38,977,831, which sum with interest had amounted to $52,491,915. Its gross earnings during the same period were $71,783,676; its expenses, $12,578,860; its net earnings were therefore $59,264,812, or nearly $7,000,000 above its cost, with interest. The amount of freight shipped by this canal in 1868 was 6,442,225 tons, so that I do not think I assume too much, when I estimate the amount of freight per annum on the proposed improvement 6,000,000 tons, especially when it is borne in mind that this will on an average be used two and a half months in the year more than the Erie Canal.

But in another greater way it benefits the commerce of the country. It is a well-known fact that only a short period after the grain of the Northwest is ready to be shipped to the eastern markets the Erie and Canadian canals freeze up and navigation on the lakes is suspended. Only a small portion of the immense products of the West have reached the sea-shore. The rail can only transport a small portion of the remainder. The farmers who can hold their crop until spring are affected only in losing the interest on the value of their property; but the mass of them, who cannot do this, must sacrifice their best interests to meet current expenses and payments, while at the same time the consumer at the East is obliged to pay prices out of proportion with those received by the producer, because the present facilities for transporting property are inadequate. Now, just at this juncture the Ohio River and its tributaries reach their good boating stage, and this improvement would enable the continued shipment through nearly all the time the lake and Erie Canal route is closed. This would be a great benefit. Suppose, on account of the ice that might form in the river and canal, only 2,000,000 tons of wheat are thus delivered East. This would be about 60,000,000 bushels. Now, this amount of wheat arriving East at such a juncture would benefit the people at least to the amount of 25 cents per bushel, and also the farmers of the West the same amount.

The benefit to the country each year would be, therefore, on this account alone, at least $30,000,000. But the ice in the river and canal will never cause much delay.

The greatest obstruction to this route will occur (until the Ohio River is improved throughout) when this river is at a low stage. This always occurs when the lakes and Erie Canal route are open. It averages about sixty days in a year. The obstruction to it by ice, at furthest, will not average more than fifteen days in each year; so that now, even with an unimproved Ohio, this projected work would give 9½ months of unobstructed communication between the East and West, and during four and a half of the five months when the lake and Erie Canal route is closed. It would thus secure an almost uninterrupted communication between the producers and consumers; give stability to and cheapen freights and prices, and thus benefit to a very great degree the commerce of the country, both East and West.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. WEITZEL,
Major of Engineers.

Brig. Gen. A. A. HUMPHREYS,
Chief of Engineers.

Proceedings of a board of engineers constituted by Special Order No. 17, from the War Department, dated Adjutant-General's Office, Washington, January 27, 1874.

RICHMOND, VA., February 5, 1874.

The board met at 10 a. m., all the members being present.

The order appointing the board was then read, and also the letter of instructions from the Chief of Engineers to Col. J. G. Barnard, of the Corps of Engineers; the letter from the Chief of Engineers to Mr. B. H. Latrobe, and a letter from the Hon. H. G. Davis, United States Senator, to the Hon. W. W. Belknap, Secretary of War.

A communication from Mr. H. D. Bird, of Petersburgh, Va., to Colonel Barnard was made to the board, which communication recommended making Petersburgh, instead of Richmond, the eastern terminus of the canal.

Then, after a short discussion and consultation, the board proceeded to the examination of the canal in the immediate vicinity of Richmond, passing up through three locks to the Powhatan Iron-Works and back to the city. The board then adjourned to meet again next day to proceed with the examination.

RICHMOND, VA., February 6, 1874.

The board proceeded, at 10 a. m., to examine the locks of the canal from the basin to the river, and returned to the office of the James River improvement at 11.25.

The board then met, and the proceedings of the last meeting were read and accepted.

Major Craighill then submitted to the board a list of documents and maps to be placed before them for their information.

The board, after consultation, decided to visit Charleston, W. Va., as the initial for the further examination of the route.

Major Gillmore submitted the following to the board, which was adopted, viz:

Resolved, That W. C. Wickham, esq., president, and H. D. Whitcomb, esq., chief engineer of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, be invited to accompany the board on their trip to Charleston and other points on the line of the James River and Kanawha Canal.

Major Gillmore then submitted to the board a second resolution, as follows, viz:

Resolved, That the board will meet in the city of New York to prepare their report, their time for meeting to be fixed after completing the examination of the line of the canal, or such portions thereof as they may decide to visit.

This resolution was adopted.

The board then adjourned to meet a committee of the general assembly of the State of Virginia, which was appointed to tender certain courtesies on behalf of the State.

At 8.45 p. m. the board took their departure for Charleston, W. Va., arriving there about 3.30 p. m. on the 7th.

The board left Charleston at 9 a. m. on the 9th for the examination of the route eastward, stopping at Cannelton and the Great Falls of the Kanawha, and examining the Great Bend tunnel of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and arrived at the White Sulphur Springs about 5 p. m.

The examination of the route from the Great Falls of the Kanawha to the débouché of the proposed tunnel, near Howard's Creek, was continued in detail, the train moving at a slow rate of speed for that purpose.

FEBRUARY 10, 1874.

The board left White Sulphur Springs about 1 p. m., and examined the Allegheny tunnel of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, the locality of the eastern end of the proposed tunnel for the James River and Kanawha Canal, and the Lewis tunnel of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and stopped a few moments at the crossing of Brush Creek.

Resolutions were adopted appreciative of the courtesy of General W. C. Wickham, president of Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, Mr. H. D. Whitcomb, chief engineer Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, Col. C. S. Carrington, president of James River and Kanawha Canal, Mr. J. H. Harris, chief engineer of James River and Kanawha Canal, and Mr. William R. Hutton, the former for having provided a special train for the use of the board, and the others for accompanying them on their examination of a portion of the route of the James River and Kanawha Canal.

The following resolution, submitted by Major Weitzel, was adopted by the board, viz:

Resolved, That Mr. B. H. Latrobe and Major Craighill be appointed a sub-committee to examine and revise the estimates of cost of the proposed line of water-communication between the James River and the Ohio, and that they are hereby requested to make a report of such examination and revision at the meeting of the board in New York City.

Goshen, Va., was reached about 5 p. m., where the board remained for the night.

FEBRUARY 11, 1874.

The board left Goshen, Va., at 9 a. m., all the members proceeding to Lynchburgh, Va., via Charlottesville, Va., with the exception of Major Weitzel, who proceeded direct to Richmond, Va., thence to his station at Detroit, to await the call of the president for the meeting in New York.

Major Gillmore and Lieutenant Turtle at once proceeded to Richmond by the canal, Colonel Barnard, Mr. Latrobe, and Major Craighill remaining in Lynchburgh.

FEBRUARY 12, 1874.

Colonel Barnard, Mr. Latrobe, and Major Craighill made an examination of the canal as far westward as Judith Pond, eight miles from Lynchburgh; Colonel Barnard proceeded to New York; Major Gillmore and Lieutenant Turtle were en route to Richmond.

FEBRUARY 13, 1874.

FEBRUARY 14, 1874.

Mr. Latrobe and Major Craighill were en route to Richmond, Va., by the canal.

FEBRUARY 15, 1874.

Mr. Latrobe and Major Craighill arrived in Richmond about 6 a. m.

FEBRUARY 16, 1874.

Mr. Latrobe and Major Craighill, after an examination of Dutch Gap, proceeded this evening to Baltimore, Md., and Lieutenant Turtle, on the following day, to Old Point Comfort, Va., to await the call of the president for the meeting in New York.

Approved.

J. G. BARNARD,
Col. Engineers and Brt. Maj. Gen., President of the Board.

THOMAS TURTLE,
First Lieut. Engineers, U. S. A., Recorder.

Proceedings of board of engineers on the James River and Kanawha Canal, at the session in New York City.

NEW YORK, March 9, 1874.

The board met at 10.40 a. m., in accordance with the call of the president, all the members and the recorder being present.

The record of proceedings from February 6 to the departure of the several members to their stations, was read and accepted.

Mr. Latrobe and Major Craighill were called upon for a report of their examination and revision of the estimates of cost of the proposed improvement. A verbal report was made to the effect, that no written statement had been prepared, "as it was supposed the estimates might call for a good deal of discussion." Mr. W. G. Turpin, who made the survey from Richmond to the mouth of the York River, under the direction of Major Craighill, had been examined, and his estimates had been taken as correct.

Mr. W. R. Hutton, who made the survey of the proposed route from the mouth of the York River to the mouth of Howard's Creek, which includes the tunnel, had been questioned on his estimates. To enable them to judge further upon the estimates for this portion of the line, they had gone to the Hoosac Tunnel, and are now expecting a report on estimates from Mr. Frost, the chief engineer.

"The estimates of quantities and prices from Howard's Creek were examined, and Mr. J. M. Harris, who was employed on the survey, and who prepared the report after the death of Mr. E. Lorraine, was questioned relative to these quantities and prices, and they were generally taken as correct. Exceptions were made in regard to contingencies, which would be very indeterminate. When Mr. Frost's letter shall be received, they will be prepared to make a written report, should it be desired."

Mr. W. G. Turpin, who had signified his intention to appear before the board if so required, was informed by telegraph that his presence would not be necessary, in words as follows:

Mr. W. G. TURPIN,
317 Cary Street, Richmond, Va.:

The board is satisfied with Mr. Latrobe's report of your estimates. Your coming on is, therefore, not necessary.

THOMAS TURTLE,
Lieutenant of Engineers, Recorder.

Mr. J. M. Harris, chief engineer of the James River and Kanawha Company, was then called before the board. His report to Major Craighill, dated Richmond, Va., April 1, 1873, was read in his presence, and explanation of the various matters contained in said report obtained from him. The examination of the report was continued from the initial point of Mr. Harris's survey to the mouth of Howard's Creek, to include dam No. 38 at the mouth of the Gauley; when, at 3.40 p. m., the board adjourned to meet to-morrow, March 10, at 11 a. m.

MARCH 10, 1874—11 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment.

The report of proceedings of yesterday was read.

It was suggested by Major Craighill that, as Mr. Turpin's name was mentioned in connection with his work, Mr. Harris and Mr. Hutton receive like attention.

This change being introduced, the report was accepted.

A letter from Major Craighill to General Barnard, dated February 17, 1874, was read, and ordered to be inserted as part of the records of the board. This letter is as follows:

UNITED STATES ENGINEER OFFICE,
THIRD STORY UNION BANK BUILDING,
FAYETTE NEAR CHARLES STREET,
Baltimore, Md., February 17, 1874.

GENERAL: Before the board proceeds to the examination of the maps and drawings connected with the enlargement of the existing canal, known as the James River and Kanawha, and its extension, so as in connection with the Greenbrier, New, and Kanawha Rivers, to become what is called the "central water-line," I wish to call attention to the fact that, while I deem the data collected and the surveys made at the time of my report, as well as at this time, sufficient to warant the opinion that it is practicable, at a cost of about $50,000,000, in six years, if the funds be supplied as fast as needed, to make a water-line of seven feet depth of water, with dimensions of locks, &c., as given in my reports and the subreports thereto attached, I by no means wish to be understood as submitting other than suggestions and approximations as to details and definitive location. These approximations, being as near the truth as possible—the effort having, however, always been to have the estimates so full and simple as to cover contingencies of changes, &c.—neither the time nor the means at my disposal have allowed anything more; and in this connection I desire especially to ask attention to the closing paragraph of my report of January 27, 1871, which is in the following words: "Should it be decided by the national authorities to proceed with this work, additional surveys will be necessary for the definite determination of the location in detail. These surveys should be immediately undertaken, and a sum not less than $25,000 should be appropriated for them." No such sum has since been at my disposal.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. P. CRAIGHILL,
Major of Engineers.

General J. G. BARNARD,
President Board of Engineers, New York.

Mr. Harris being again before the board, the estimates of the different dams, and of the Great Bend Tunnel as an alternative proposition, were examined in detail.

The reading and examination of Mr. Harris' report was completed at 3.30 p. m.; the board adjourned to meet to-morrow, March 11, at 11 a. m.

MARCH 11, 1874—11.15 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment.

The report of proceedings of yesterday was read, and, after some change in the phraseology, was accepted.

Mr. W. R. Hutton was before the board. His report of December 28, 1870, to Major Craighill, was read in his presence, and various questions were asked him relative to different portions of the same. The examination of this report was completed, and at 3.15 p. m. the board adjourned to meet to-morrow, March 12, at 11 a. m.

MARCH 12, 1874—11.10 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment.

The report of proceedings of yesterday was read.

Mr. W. R. Hutton and Mr. J. M. Harris were before the board. Mr. Hutton was retained until 1 p. m.

An examination of maps of the route from the eastern portal of the tunnel, eastward, was made.

At 2.30 p. m. the board adjourned to meet to-morrow, March 13, at 1 p. m.

MARCH 13, 1874—1.20 p. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment.

The report of proceedings of yesterday was read and accepted.

Mr. Latrobe read to the board a written expression of opinions and suggestions, and submitted a sketch explanatory of certain propositions in regard to the tunnel.

Similar expressions of opinion were read by the other members of the board.

Adjourned at 3 p. m., to meet to-morrow at 11. a. m.

MARCH 14, 1874—11.30 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment.

The report of preceedings of the previous day was read and accepted.

General Barnard and Mr. Latrobe read some remarks additional or supplementary to their written opinions of yesterday.

A series of resolutions was then offered as follows:

No. 1. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That while the board is of opinion that for ordinary passenger travel and many kinds of freight the railroad will be properly preferred as the means of transportation, there can be no reasonable questioning of the fact that when the circumstances are such that comparative slowness of movement is permissible, and the quantities to be moved large, the cheapness of transportation by water becomes obvious to every one who fairly weighs the statistics on the subject. In this view very great benefits to commerce would be derived from the construction of a water communication from east to west between the James and Ohio Rivers.

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 2. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That the board is of opinion that it is entirely practicable to drive the long tunnel through the Alleghany Mountain by which it has been proposed to connect the headwaters of the James and Greenbrier Rivers. The cost of such a tunnel, 34 feet in clear width, with passing places for boats each one-fourth of a mile, would be about $2,000,000 per mile. The time of execution need not be over six years.

This resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 3. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That the board is of opinion that by the use of reservoirs on Anthony's Creek and the Greenbrier River, a sufficient supply of water may be had for the requirements of the tunnel summit-level and its dependencies, and that the supply of water is also sufficient for the portions of the proposed water-line east and west of the high level.

This resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 4. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That the board is of the opinion that it is entirely practicable to enlarge the existing James River Canal, making the locks 120 feet by 20 feet, and the width of the canal at the water-line 70 feet, with a depth of 7 feet: and to extend the canal and slack-water navigation of the same dimensions to the eastern portal of the long tunnel, thus admitting the use of boats of 280 tons burden.

This resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 5. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the board the preparation of the Kanawha River for navigation from the Ohio to the Great Falls of the Kanawha for boats of 700 tons is entirely practicable.

This resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 6. Offered by General Barnard:

Whereas there are differences of opinion among members of the board as to the practicability of lock and dam (or "slack-water") navigation of the Greenbrier and New Rivers between Howard's Creek and the Great Falls of the Kanawha; and whereas the same differences prevail as to the extension of the barge-navigation of the Kanawha, above the Great Falls:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the board it may be expedient to adopt canal navigation for this part of the line, with occasional exceptions where it may be desirable in consequence of peculiarly favorably reaches or the necessities of water-supply.

This resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 7. Offered by General Barnard as supplementary to No. 1:

Whereas the James River and Kanawha route being among the few south of the Erie Canal route over which it appears practicable to establish a water-navigation connecting by the Ohio the immense internal navigation of the Great Mississippi Valley with the sea-ports of the Atlantic; and whereas it will probably furnish the most direct connection; and whereas the route has very great local advantages of climate, owing to which it will be comparatively little obstructed by ice, and of a geological character connecting the richest coal-fields of the world, now lying almost undeveloped for want of adequate means of removal, with the markets of the world, and at the same time with the almost equally rich region of iron and other ores in the Virginia Valley: Therefore,

Resolved, That in the opinion of this board this route presents extraordinary claims as the measure of relief to the population of the Western States in furnishing them for their bulky productions cheap transportation to a market and for fostering the commerce of the United States by developing immense mineral resources now neglected.

This resolution was adopted unanimously.

No. 8. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That, in the opinion of the board, the cost of maintenance (repairs and administration included) of the water-line should not exceed $1,000,000 per annum.

This resolution was unanimously adopted.

No. 9. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That while the estimates have hitherto been limited to a water-line with canal-locks 120 feet by 20 feet and slack-water of 240 feet by 40 feet, the board is of opinion that the canal-locks should be built of 23 feet to 24 feet width, with a corresponding increase in the width of the slack-water locks, with a view to increased capacity for the line in future, if demanded, as this additional width can be economically given. Additional depth could thereafter be readily obtained to as great an extent as the water-supply would permit, by raising the walls and banks.

This resolution was adopted, General Barnard voting in the negative.

No. 10. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That in the opinion of this board it is entirely practicable to connect the waters of the James and Ohio Rivers by a water-navigation 7 feet in depth.

Adopted unanimously.

No. 11. Offered by Major Craighill:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the board the water-line by the James River and Kanawha route, with 7 feet depth, may be completed in six years at a cost of not more than $60,000,000, allowing an unusually broad margin for contingencies, which cannot be accurately measured. The cost may reasonably be expected to be within $55,000,000, and may possibly not exceed $50,000,000.

This resolution was adopted, General Barnard voting in the negative.

No. 12. Offered by Mr. Latrobe:

Whereas the time within which the line of this improvement can be opened to the trade of the West, so urgently demanding a new outlet to the seaboard, must depend upon the completion of its most difficult work, the earliest possible commencement of the long Alleghany tunnel is highly desirable, and is earnestly recommended by the board, while surveys for the definite location for the whole line of the improvement should be also begun without delay, in order that all the questions relating to its plan may be determined in time to avoid delay in its completion simultaneously with the tunnel.

This resolution was adopted, General Barnard voting in the negative.

The board adjourned at 3.30 p. m., to meet Tuesday, March 17, at 11 a. m.

MARCH 17, 1874.

The board met at 1.20 p. m., the time of meeting having been postponed by the president from 11 a. m., as the general report in preparation by him was not yet completed.

The record of proceedings of March 14 was read and accepted.

The general report was then read by the president and adopted by the board.

The following resolution was presented by Mr. Latrobe and adopted by the board, viz:

Resolved, That the board tender their thanks to their president for the clear, concise, and able manner in which he has embodied their views in the report which he has just read.

A resolution was then presented by Major Craighill, as follows:

Resolved, That the board, when it adjourns to-day, meet on the 19th at 1 p. m., when the separate papers of the members will be submitted and read before the board, to be thereafter, as soon as practicable, sent to the Chief of Engineers with the general report.

This resolution was adopted, and at 2.30 p. m. the board adjourned in accordance with the terms of the resolution.

1.15 P. M., MARCH 19, 1874.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Major Weitzel was absent, he having been excused from further attendance by the president after the presentation of his special remarks yesterday.

The record of proceedings of March 17 was read and accepted.

The general report was again read and the signing of the same completed, General Weitzel having previously signed it.

The special remarks of the several members were then read, and at 4.15 p. m. the board adjourned sine die.

Approved:

J. G. BARNARD,
President of Board.

THOMAS TURTLE,
First Lieutenant Engineers, Recorder.
